Meanwhile, some bits and pieces were accumulating. In years past Judy Vink's grandfather, John Swier, had called the disease "the ataxy."

There is such an illness—ataxia, a loss of motor activity. A form of it attacks nerve cells in the spinal column and brain stem and eventually causes shrinkage of the cerebellum, the part of the brain that governs co-ordination and equilibrium. Death, usually after loss of speech and the cough mechanism, comes from a clogging of the windpipe or lung ailments.

In 1941, Dr. Royal Gray of the University of Minnesota examined several of the stricken descendants of Garritt Jan Vandenberg. He studied the family geneology. He concluded the trouble was a dominant genetic disorder and urged the family to practise birth control until age 33 when the danger point of transmitting the disease by heredity apparently passed.

Following such advice, or by not marrying, the Schuts have virtually eliminated the disease from their line.

Henry Schut's brother, John, meanwhile had become a physician and while in the United States Army persuaded his superiors to let him research ataxia. He collected blood samples and spinal fluid from 168 persons and wrote several papers on the illness.

He became a fellow in neurology and psychiatry at the University of Minnesota. Then, one day while carrying a cup of coffee, his hands began to tremble. He knew.

Realizing time was now a factor, he speeded up his training in neurology. With a small group of volunteers, he founded the National Ataxia Foundation to raise research funds. Sometimes he solicited, himself, door to door. But time eventually ran out and he was taken to hospital where he has been for seven years.

There were others.

Shirley Swier, now 31, met her husband, Vernon, when she was 18.

In time she had learned that Vernon's older brother, Peter, had been stricken. But she thought Vernon would escape. Then one day in 1962 he noticed difficulty in lifting bales of hay on their dairy farm.

Vernon tried other work, meanwhile seeing a chiropractor, Dr. Dean R. Johnson in Sioux Falls. Previously, in 1967, Vernon's brother, Ken, also came to see Dr. Johnson. Seeing a second brother afflicted enraged the chiropractor.

"Where were the doctors?" he said later. "Didn't anyone care?"

Ultimately, Johnson wrote the National Genetics Foundation, which promised to send a medical team.

Last December, the doctors arrived, including Dr. Lawrence Schut, a neurologist who is the son of Henry Schut.

A total of 95 family members showed up in Sioux Falls.

For 12 hours the doctors took samples, tested reflexes, studied the members of this shadowed family. Two characteristics began to recur: a small, pie-shaped white spot on the optic nerve and a tendency to turn the thumb inward.

The initial diagnosis of the doctors was mixed news for the family. Fifty-seven mmebers under 30 were potential victims; 14 definitely had it and 12 had "soft" signs with an indication of future affliction.

The doctors said an[illegible] whose parents on the family side did not get the disease would not contract it himself. For those whose parents had had it, the changes were 50-50.

The doctors confirmed the illness as a dominant genetic disorder that manifested itself in spinal cerebellar degeneration, a form of ataxia.

They were able to tell those in their 20s who had the disease. But, for now, they had but one cure: Those stricken should not reproduce. The bad gene would then die with that generation.

There will be further research. The doctors plan more tests in June.

Hees Outlines Scheme For Developing Canada

TORONTO (CP) — George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) outlined a plan for the development of Canada by Canadians today that emphasized tax relief and government investment in private enterprise.

Mr. Hees spoke to the Canadian Club of Toronto.

The former minister said industry must be convinced it can make a satisfactory profit to establish in unattractive areas, so it should be exempt from all taxes for 10 years and pay at reduced rates for the following 15 years in those areas.

To allow such industry to raise capital, he said, the proposed Canada development corporation should invest in such projects as a minority shareholder.

As for control of foreign investment, foreign investors were usually good corporate citizens, so the emphasis instead should be on encouraging Canadian investment.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson should institute his forthcoming capital gains program so that only 50 per cent of the capital gains tax charged on investment in foreign securities would be charged on investment in Canadian securities.

In addition, to keep jobs in Canada, the government should require a proportion of primary products produced in Canada be processed within the country before being exported.

The text of his speech was released in advance.

State of New York Hit by Big Storm

NEW YORK (AP) — A heavy, wet blanket of snow muffled much of New York state today, reaching nearly a foot in some eastern sections, as the weather bureau promised more of the same.

Travellers' warnings were posted and caution was advised on highways.

Police said motorists in southeastern New York faced heavy accumulations of slush and school closings in the area were common.

Snowfalls recorded by the weather bureau were: 11 inches at Albany, Glenns Falls, and Canada Lake, 10 inches at Little Falls, 8 inches at Oneonta and Middletown, 7 inches at Utica, and 5 inches at Syracuse.

Police used rowboats to rescue stranded motorists in New York City, where the precipitation took the form of torrential rains. Long Island was also hit by the wind-driven rain.

The overnight precipitation was attributed to a coastal storm which passed out to sea about daybreak.

The later snow and rain were brewed in a second disturbance, also originating in the southeastern U.S., said the national weather service.

In western New York, the storm arrived later and was less severe, but weathermen predicted a topping of sleet for snowfalls reaching three inches.

Weather was blamed for a number of mishaps on New York highways, with some dozen persons dying in traffic accidents.

Meanwhile, an Arctic cold wave plunged southward from the Central Plains pushing subzero temperatures as far south as the Texas Panhandle and producing hard freeze warnings for southern Texas.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect for northern New England, eastern New York and Pennsylvania.

Flood warnings were in effect along the Atlantic coast where numerous rivers were expected to reach flood stage.

Ban on Sale of Firms To U.S. Too Costly---Greene

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is working towards a set of rules intended to balance a maximum degree of Canadian ownership with suitable encouragement for foreign capital, Energy Minister J. J. Greene said in an interview televised Sunday.

"We could pass a law next week, I'm sure, in the House of Commons, that everything in Canada has to be owned by Canadians, period.

"There'd be an awful lot of Canadians walking the streets if we do that.

"We've got to work out the rules whereby we can have the maximum Canadian ownership and at the same time encourage the foreign investment which will generate the economic growth that will provide jobs for our people."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

How to Prevent Children Biting

A few months ago I wrote about the mother who was concerned about her youngster who had developed the habit of biting his playmates. Punishing him only made it worse. Soon it caused family disruption and fights with the neighbors who resented having this "young monster" molest their children. Here is one reader's reaction:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am writing in response to your recent column in reference to the problem of small children biting and hitting their playmates. I am a student of home economics. I have recently completed a course in child development.

I have found the problem mentioned in your column is a relatively common one. As a part of the course I participated in a nursery school under the guidance of the university. This is a development laboratory and they use four main guidance principles for providing the optimum growth of the child.

These principles are: Love gives security; respect contributes to self-respect; help stimulates abilities; affection leads to the formation of values.

These can be seen as a pyramid, love forming the bottom level and the others building on that level. Each succeeding level is dependent upon the one below. These principles are used for every phase of the child's growth: social, emotional, physical and intellectual.

• • •

A child must develop in all areas if he is to be a well-rounded individual. I have noticed that hitting and biting occur when a child is trying to be social and has not yet learned how. He does not have the necessary vocabulary to express his wishes. Hitting or biting another child may be his way of saying, "I like you, I'd like to play with you."

In your column you mentioned the first rule when you wrote that the adult shouldn't bite back to show that it hurts. This, on the parents' part, would be undesirable behavior. The follow-up should be to direct him from questionable or undesirable behavior to a more appropriate activity.

The child should be told that Johnny doesn't like to be hit or bit, that it hurts him. If he wants to show that he likes him, he can pat him. A positive approach should be used as much as possible. A child that has not yet learned to communicate his needs may well take out his frustrations on his friends.

• • •

We have dolls available in the nursery school and the children are told that if they want to bite or hit they should use the dolls. We tell them that it doesn't hurt the dolls, but it does hurt the children. A child can vent his frustrations on the dolls, and then go and join his group without any hindrance.

We make a mistake when we expect children to behave as adults, forgetting that it takes practice to attain adulthood. As parents and grown-ups, we must realize that the type of guidance that we give children will help determine what kind of adults they become.

• • •

Occasionally patients make a "Freudian slip." As is well-known, many heart attack victims are immediately admitted to the hospital's intensive care unit where they are observed closely and treated more effectively than they can be in the usual private room. In speaking of his experience, one patient said, "I was so sick that they moved me into the expensive care unit."

• • •

For Mr. Y.: Leukoplakia means white patches in the mouth. They may be due to chronic irritation from smoking, poor oral hygiene or ill-fitting dentures. Whatever the cause, if they persist they should be investigated to rule out the possibility of being pre-cancerous.

Marchand Assails Parti Quebecois

QUEBEC (CP) — Jean Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, wound up a three-day meeting of about 1,000 Quebec members of the federal Liberal party with a stinging attack on the separatist Parti Quebecois Sunday.

Outside the convention hall, about 25 young people built a snow fort and taunted delegates with insults and snowballs under the watchful eyes of six suburban Ste. Foy policemen.

In the last speech to the meeting Sunday, Mr. Marchand called PQ members "cowards" and said they were one of the main groups responsible for creating a climate of fear and confusion in Quebec.

He called for tolerant dialogue because "if fanaticism continues, then you have all the elements for civil war."

He accused the Parti Quebecois of spreading "ghost stories" to provoke fear of English-Canadians, Americans, federal politicians, elections, governments and loss of the French-language, liberty and institutions.

"These cowards want us to believe that we are oblivious to everything and that they have a monopoly on insight and realism," he said.

Neither the federal nor Quebec government had created "the climate of a concentration camp" in Quebec, he said, but panic was provoked following two political kidnappings in October by those who "organized violence and tolerated it through active or passive complicity."

Delegates in a workshop on democracy, justice and terrorism proposed a resolution calling for an amendment to the Criminal Code allowing an appeal against conviction for contempt of court.

Solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer told what appeared to be a mainly middle-class, middle-aged audience:

"I must know your views on how to combat terrorism."

One Quebec City woman said she was so proud of the government's invocation of the War Measures Act Oct. 16 that she sewed a Canadian flag on her little cat's coat but the committee chairman immediately snapped: "Next question."

Mr. Goyer said later he was "disappointed" he had no suggestions to take back to Ottawa.

He said the federal government is seeking ways to deal with future acts of violence against society without violating civil liberties and specifically has to draft legislation to replace the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, which expires in April.

Ticking Valve Lifters Indicate Oil Impure

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"Recently I developed a loud intermittent ticking noise in my motor — the kind of sound that even to my mechanically-inexperienced ears meant it required immediate attention.

"My service attendant said it was the valve lifters and recommended a can of additive. This treatment worked and I have had no trouble since.

"What is the cause of this? Is it serious? Is an additive only a temporary measure and will I be faced with major repairs later on? My car is 3½ years old and has done only 17,000 miles. — M. T., Toronto

The key clue to diagnosing your problem lies in the fact that your car is 3½ years old and has only driven 17,000 miles. This seems to indicate you do mostly short runs in slow, stop-and-start city traffic. This, plus the additional factor of cold weather, has made impurities accumulate in your oil.

These have collected in the inner and outer sleeve of the hydraulic valve lifters. Due to excessive clearance between various pieces of metal in the valve mechanism, a hammering action occurs. This is the 'ticking sound' you heard. If not taken care of immediately very expensive repairs would be required.

The additive your service man recommended is a detergent that dissolves the gummy foreign matter that caused the valve lifters to sick, and so ook care of the immediate trouble. However, this is a situation that should and can be prevented.

Condensation and combustion produce water and acids. For each gallon of fuel burned, nearly one gallon of water is produced. Most of this water is expelled through the exhaust but some finds its way into the oil. This contamination is more pronounced during short city trips at lower speeds, particularly in cold weather.

When oil and water are forced under pressure through the engine's moving parts, it soon emulsifies and water is permanently held in suspension. This mixture, together with the products of combustion, forms corrosive acids, gums, varnish and sludge. One of the most vulnerable areas to be affected by these are the passages supplying oil to the valve mechanism.

With today's extended lubrication periods, many a motorist assumes that all he has to do is take the car in for an oil change every 4,000 miles or so, regardless of his driving pattern.

If all cars were highway-limits, with little stop-and-go driving this would be adequate.

However, to quote one manual. "If a vehicle were to operate all the year round in a situation that calls for more than 50 per cent stop-and-go driving, it would thus require oil and filter changes at 2,000 miles or two months in winter and at 3,000 miles or three months during the rest of the year."

These very important facts regarding oil-changing are often neglected by car owners. It is absolutely vital to keep the oil clean to ensure long life smooth driving and minimal upkeep expenses on your car.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Marriage Not 'Reasonable'

The young lady in Connecticut who ducked out on her fiance while her relatives were preparing an elaborate church wedding made me wonder why such occurrences are not more common.

Discarding her engagement ring, the girl left a note saying, "I just can't go through with it," and disappeared into the night. Thousands of brides (and grooms) must feel this way as the nuptials approach, but only a few have the courage to call off proceedings at the last minute.

Most of them are victimized by a rigid social structure they do not feel strong enough to defy. But young people, especially, often marry for the wrong reasons — to get away from home, to obtain a specious feeling of "freedom" or "security," to capture a beautiful girl or a handsome man from rivals, or a dozen other real or fancied reasons.

In almost all these cases, the marriage is doomed from the start, because the motivation is wrong. A marriage for "reasons" cannot last — because marriage is not a "reasonable" institution, but one based on mutual faith that cuts deep beneath the layers of calculation and self-interest.

At least, not in this country and at this time, given the expectations of "relatedness" among today's young people.

Yet, once the machinery of marriage is set in motion, it requires an unusually strong character to resist it. Relatives and friends must not be disappointed, the prospective mate must not be embarrassed, the arrangements must not be disrupted — and so the dogged ceremony takes place, and the arriere pensees are sternly repressed as "just nerves."

Social pride usually overcomes personal qualms; a woman especially is ashamed to reverse her decision at the last moment — and so powerful is the sense of propriety in the average human being that she would rather take a chance on a dubious marriage than call back a few dozen wedding invitations.

If such a fuss were not made abo[illegible] weddings, if relatives and well-meaning friends did not take over so completely and turn an emotional joining into a social event, there would be many more breakings-off at the last moment, and thus far fewer doomed marriages. As Samuel Butler observed, "In matrimony, often he who hesitates is saved."

The Connecticut girl had the kind of courage and common sense most of us lack at her age. And the jilted man ought to thank her, not reprove her, for leaving him before, rather than after, the marriage. They're a lucky non-couple.

Delegations Disputed

Three Ridings Won't Name Young PCs

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates from three riding associations will not be accredited at this week's Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership convention until they settle a dispute with the Young Progressive Conservatives.

Alan Eagleson, president of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, said Sunday night the riding associations have refused to follow a ruling of the party's credentials committee and "until this matter is resolved there will be no recognition permitted in these three ridings."

The credentials committee last week ordered the associations in Toronto's York-Forest Hill riding and the two Ottawa-area ridings of Ottawa East and Carleton to revamp their 10-man delegations.

They were directed to cut their delegations to eight and add two YPCs or two persons under 30.

Mr. Eagleson said he is trying to work out a solution and hoped the matter will be settled Wednesday morning when the three-day convention at Maple Leaf Gardens begins.

If not, he said, the dispute will be put on the convention floor Friday morning for the whole convention to decide.

In Niagara Falls Sunday, YPC President Sean O'Sullivan said that as a result of the credentials committee ruling he has assured YPC delegates from the three ridings they will be accredited.

He said eight other ridings that did not have young delegates revised their delegations following the committee's ruling.

"We're satisfied that in those eight it was more a matter of a genuine misunderstanding," he said.

But the refusal of the other three "was a deliberate move on their part to ignore the Young PCs."

They interprete a clause in the constitution which allows ridings to appoint elegates from "recognized" YPC associations to mean they did not have to do so if they did not recognize the YPCs.

Mr. O'Sullivan said obtaining a court injunction to prevent the three delegations from taking part is one option open to the Young PCs.

However, he added: "If the chairman of the credentials committee fails to follow through (on the committee ruling) we may be forced to bring before the committee at the convention a number of other irregularities."

He said the irregularities in delegate selection did not directly concern YPCs but were along the lines of incorrect proportions of delegates—each delegation is supposed to have four men, four women and two YPCs—improper publicizing and handling of delegate election meetings, and improper submission of delegate lists.

Munro Urges Tolerance If Poor Break Laws

HAMILTON (CP) — Canadians must tolerate and show sympathy towards organizations of the poor even if some of their members break laws, federal Health Minister John Munro said Saturday.

Otherwise Canada will face incurable slums like those in United States cities, he told a news conference in his home riding, Hamilton East.

Speaking specifically of Hamilton activists, he said' "If one or two out of 150 break the law or act in a manner not entirely in the fashion we think appropriate, I think it is hardly fair to condemn the whole organization."

'Plan Ahead' Is Motto For Convention of PCs

TORONTO (CP) — Plan ahead. That's the motto the Ontario Progressive Conservatives have adopted for their leadership convention next week.

The plan for the care and feeding of 1,734 delegates and an equal number of alternates—includes seating, communication, timing and identification.

It even provides for an inch-thick styrofoam covering of the Maple Leaf Gardens ice surface to keep the delegates from getting cold feet while they're choosing a successor to Premier John Robarts.

It's a small point, perhaps, but it is indicative of the planning by Tom Warrington and Michael Clancy, co-chairmen of physical arrangements and communications.

The convention opens Wednesday at the Royal York Hotel with sessions and a dinner at which Mr. Robarts will be the main speaker.

Thursday it moves to the Gardens for nomination speeches, demonstrations and speeches by the candidates. Voting starts Friday.

The Ontario Progressive Conservative Association estimates the convention will cost about $140,000 of which about $80,000 will be recovered through $25 voting fees paid by delegates.

Construction began this weekend on:

—A 40-by-20-foot stage with a four-foot high podium surrounding the seating area all to be covered in deep blue broadloom:

—Two air-conditioned TV studios and two radio studios, built on platforms projected over second-level seats on the west side.

Delegates will sit in the "reds," the premium seats for hockey games, alternates will occupy the second-level "blues" and the public will sit in the upper-level "greys".

"We hope the public will attend," said Mr. Warrington. "We hope to have a capacity audience of 16,000 each night."

Hockey dressing rooms and storage space have been turned into "war rooms" for the candidates.

Security will be tight. The Gardens regular security staff will be retained as well as a special force. Only special passes will permit access to the floor during Friday's voting.

The big Gardens hockey clock will be used to time the demonstrations for the candidates Thursday.

Laxer Wants NDP Involved In People's Everyday Needs

EDMONTON (CP) — The New Democratic Party must redirect its energies so that it is not simply organized to elect members to Parliament, James Laxer, the Waffle candidate for the national leadership of the party, said Saturday.

"We have to get involved in the everyday struggles of the people," Mr. Laxer said during a leadership forum at the annual meeting of the Alberta NDP.

The four other men seeking to replace T. C. Douglas as national leader agreed with Mr. Laxer that to build the socialist movement in Canada the NDP must organize the people.

"There has to be a greater involvement in community struggles," said David Lewis, deputy national leader and MP for York South.

The five candidates are on a cross-Canada tour in the campaign leading to the NDP's leadership convention in Ottawa in April.

Ed Broadbent, MP for Oshawa—Whitby, said the NDP must seek an alliance with the progressive left-wing element in Quebec.

John Harney, an associate professor of English at York University in Toronto, said that no matter how good NDP ideas may be the party will not be given an opportunity to implement them "until we can convince Canadians that we have the policies, men and understanding to keep the country together."

Most of the candidates favored nationalization of the country's resource industries, but Mr. Lewis said it is "silly and irrelevant" for the party to talk about nationalizing everything.

Mr. Broadbent said Canada will eventually have to share its resources with the United States —"we have to remember they are people too"—but not before "we make a thorough inventery of our own needs."

Bushnell Unable to Buy Kingston Radio and TV

OTTAWA (CP) — Bushnell Communications of Ottawa has informed the owners of three television and nine radio stations in Ontario that it will be unable to proceed with buying the broadcasting outlets, Charles O'Connor, secretary and general counsel for Bushnell, said Saturday.

He said in an interview that Bushnell has told the owners—six companies associated with Lord Thomson of Fleet and the Davies family of Kingston—that the company could not raise sufficient money to buy both the Ontario stations and Canadian Marconi Ltd. Properties in Montreal by a Feb. 26 deadline.

Instead Bushnell has decided to go ahead with the $22.7 million deal to buy with the Marconi properties—CFCF-TV and radio stations CFCF, CFQR-FM and CFCX—which does not raise the technical difficulties of the Thomson-Davies purchase, Mr. O'Cnnor said.

The decision not to go ahead with the Thomson-Davies purchase means that Bushnell will have to forfeit an $825,000 deposit.

The Thomson-Davies purchase would have cost about $7.75 million.

Mr. O'Connor said efforts are still being made to find the financing for the Marconi deal. Bushmell has placed a deposit of about $4 millin with Canadian Marconi.

The Ontario broadcasting outlets sought by Bushnell include: television stations CKWS Kingston, CHEX Peterborough and CFCH North Bay; radio stations CKWS AND CKWS-FM, Kingston, CHEX AND CHEX-FM Peterborough, CKGB AND CKGB-FM Timmins, CJKL Kirkland Lake, CJTT New Liskeard and CFCH North Bay.

Puerto Rican Protests Canadian Navy's Firing

CULEBRA, Puerto Rico (AP) — The mayor of this offshore Puerto Rican island has confirmed that he complained to Prime Minister Trudeau about activities of the Canadian navy here.

In an interview Sunday, Mayor Ramon Feliciano showed a copy of a Feb. 1 letter to Trudeau in which he complained that Canadian naval vessels fired at the Culebra target range while "there were defenceless citizens of this island in and near the target area."

"Your navy's action," the letter continues, "is a violation of the basic laws of humanity."

The mayor, in his complaint, said he was not attempting to defend the legality of the presence of the demonstrators at the firing range.

The mayor's letter referred to an incident Jan. 28, when firing exercises planned as part of the Operation Springboard naval exercises were temporarily disputed when several advocates of Puerto Rican independence slipped into the target area.

Feliciano charged that tear gas was used by a helicopter crew against the demonstrators.

Ottawa has denied the tear gas charge. Feliciano claims he has a tear gas canister, with a Canadian label, locked up in his safe at the Culebra city hall.

The letter to Trudeau included a demand "that you withdraw your implements of war from our shores and never again engage in aggression against our people or our island."

English Canada Urged to Fight To Keep Identity

TORONTO (CP) — A leading Quebec nationalist told a rally Sunday that English Canada should fight to retain its identity like French-Canadians are now doing in Quebec.

Pierre Bourgault, former head of the now-defunct separatist party Rallîement pour l'Independance Nationale, made the remark at a rally organized by the Quebec movement for the defence of political prisoners.

Mr. Bourgault, who was an unsuccessful Parti Quebecois candidate against Premier Robert Bourassa in Quebec's general election last April, called the trials of certain Quebecers as a result of last October's kidnapping crisis "a farce, a big joke."

Quebec May Be Hurdle In Search for Formula Amending Constitution

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's political leaders went back behind closed doors today apparently in agreement on the wording of a formula that would permit constitutional changes within Canada, but still unsure whether the formula itself would be accepted.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa is asking that agreement on a formula be accompanied by acceptance of his proposals for increased jurisdiction over welfare services in his province.

Mr. Bourassa said before the opening of the second day of the conference there has been substantial progress on working out a formula for amending Canada's constitution, which still must be done via Britain's Parliament, by Canada itself. But there was no definitive and complete agreement.

He was asked whether tentative agreement could be reached today and the formula discussed back in Quebec.

"No," replied Mr. Bourassa. "I would say that the government agreed—the Quebec government agreed—that very important progress has been made . . . but we want to study certain implications before committing ourselves."

In any case, the formula would have to be discussed in Parliament and various provincial legislatures before receiving the final seal of approval.

One conference source said Mr. Bourassa might be satisfied with some commitment that sought-after constitutional change will follow on the heels of an amending formula.

While there is strong opposition to his demands for jurisdiction over all welfare services, sources said his request could be "partially fulfilled."

The sources predicted that if agreement is reached on some of Mr. Bourassa's proposals, an agreement on an amending formula would follow quickly.

"The wording of the formula is not in question," said Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia today.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia said an agreement in principle had been reached and a communique drafted.

Premier Bennett said it would be discussed this morning.

But whether an acceptable package can be worked out, said Premier John Robarts of Ontario, "God knows."

Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial leaders had appeared Monday to be nearing tentative agreement, but there also had been signs of discord.

"If we'd quit at noon, we'd have been further ahead," Premier Ed Schreyer said late Monday.

Some observers said a break in the optimistic pace came when Quebec moved to trade its agreement on the amending formula for concession on its income security proposals.

The speculation on Monday's events came after a dinner at Mr. Trudeau's residence.

Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island said the formula "provides more flexibility than the Fulton-Favreau formula" of the mid-60s.

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan admitted grudging support for the formula. But

Mine Kills 5 Irish Civilians

BELFAST (CP) — Five civilian men were killed today when a land mine blew up their car on a hilly trail to a radio transmitter of the British Broadcasting Corp.

A British army spokesman said the men were on their way to the transmitter, which is in a sparsely settled area of Northern Ireland near Enniskillen, about 80 miles west of Belfast.

The identity of the men was not immediately determined.

The 150-foot transmitter tower, which relays television as well as radio programs, was damaged Jan. 6 by a gelignite explosion. Broadcast transmitters, power transformers and other public service installations have been frequent targets of bomb attacks by Protestants and Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland's religious warfare.

Wreckage from the blast was scattered over hundreds of yards. The transmitter is near Broughter Mountain, about 13 miles from the border of the Irish Republic.

The incident followed six nights of violence in Belfast in which British troops on a peacekeeping mission have been trading shots with Irish republican extremists.

A five-year-old girl died Monday night when she was accidentally run down by a British army scout car cruising the streets of the troubled city.

Today's incident brought the death toll since Wednesday to 11, including one British soldier—the first to be killed in action here since the peacekeeping mission began two years ago.

Roman Catholic mothers taunted British soldiers with the cry of "child murderers" after the youngster was run over.

Monday was quiet until Denise Dickson ran in front of the Ferret scout car and was crushed. "The driver had no chance of avoiding her," an army spokesman said. "It was a complete accident."

After her death, crowds in the Catholic New Lodge Road area burned nine trucks, cars and bus, threw up flaming barricades across the streets and hurled bricks at the troops.

Hand-to-hand combat broke out between the Catholics and Protestant youths who ran into the area from dark alleys. There was a burst of automatic fire, and two girls and two boys fell with leg wounds.

Military spokesmen accused gunmen of the Irish Republican Army of shooting down the four teen-agers to whip up more fury against the troops.

Minh Trail Is Cut

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese armored column drove across the Ho Chi Minh trail in southern Laos today, sweeping up sizeable ammunition caches left by retreating North Vietnamese.

While the push into Laos met only light ground resistance and harassing shelling attacks, a parallel drive by 20,000 South Vietnamese troops in Cambodia ran into stiff opposition.

North Vietnamese troops launched three heavy attacks on the edge of the rubber plantation town of Snuol, five miles inside Cambodia and about 90 miles north of Saigon.

On the Laotian front 300 miles to the north, a South Vietnamese field commander said he expected his troops during the next 10 days to push along Route 9 as far as they could toward Savannakhet, 125 miles across the Laotian panhandle on the border between Laos and Thailand. He did not say just how far his troops would try to go, however.

The lead South Vietnamese units were reported 12 miles inside Laos, meeting light contact with the North Vietnamese as they advanced toward the town of Sepone, 25 miles from the border. Sepone is a main North Vietnamese trans-shipment point and base area, but the town was said to be virtually deserted.

Nixon Defends Thrust

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon sends his defence and foreign policy chiefs before Congress today to defend the American-aided thrust into Laos, while peace groups hatched plans for nationwide turmoil to protest the opening of a new Indochina war front.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird was to meet the generally sympathetic Senate and House of Representatives armed services committees to explain why the crossing of Saigon forces into Laos with the aid of U.S. air power will protect American troops withdrawals from South Vietnam.

But State Secretary William Rogers has the more difficult job in facing the hostile Senate foreign relations committee, most of whose members see the Laos adventure as a dangerous gamble, a widening of the war and a violation of Laotian neutrality.

Moon Explorers Are Racing Home

HOUSTON (AP) — The three Apollo 14 explorers blaze back to planet earth today, climaxing a voyage of discovery they regard as a smashing success.

Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa were on a perfect course to re-enter the atmosphere 76 miles above the Pacific at 24,600 miles an hour.

Splashdown was set for 4:04 p.m. EST about 874 miles south of American Samoa.

The main recovery ship, the helicopter carrier New Orleans, reported the weather outlook in the landing zone was near perfect with some clouds, winds 12 to 18 miles an hour, three-to six-foot seas and 80-degree temperature.

Shoppers Should Know Cost Per Unit of Weight

TORONTO (CP) — Every supermarket should be required to show shoppers how much a product costs by unit of weight, Professor Jacob Zeigel said Monday.

A survey by three Osgoode Hall law students which was limited to six products, showed:

—Many products cost less per unit of weight when purchased in a smaller size.

—A lack of consistency in weight sizes makes price comparisons difficult for a hurried shopper. There were 18 different sizes of cereals, 17 different sizes of toothpaste, and 15 sizes of powdered detergents.

—The price per ounce varied by more than 900 per cent in some cases and never by less than 250 per cent.

Opposition Backs Call for Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has called for an urgent meeting of the Laos international control commission to discuss the U.S.-backed invasion of southern Laos by South Vietnamese troops, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Monday.

Mr. Sharp told the Commons Canada fully supports Prime Minister Prince Souvanna Phouma of Laos in his demand that the neutrality of Laos be supported by neighboring states that signed the 1952 protocol of the Geneva Agreement on Laos.

Members of the control commission are Canada, Poland and India.

Opposition parties welcomed the government move but expressed strong doubts about its effectiveness.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield wondered whether any effort is being made to gain support among other nations for the Canadian initiative

"Simply the making of this request by itself may be helpful but if it is merely left there, perhaps it will not amount to anything," said Mr. Stanfield

Andrew Brewin (Toronto-Greenwood), the New Democrat spokesman on international affairs, said the invasion of Laos threatens a new increase in the Vietnamese war. He wondered whether protests are in order.

"When both sides have repeatedly violated the neutrality of Laos and Cambodia and when the Geneva agreements have been torn to shreds by both sides in this conflict, I wonder whether it is consistent with the dignity of Canada to any longer remain a member of the international control commission which controls nothing in these countries," said the Toronto MP.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker expressed reservations about the move.

"On the basis of experience and the degree to which the other two members of the commission actually dragged their feet and refused to participate in any way, is there not something that can be done . . . to bring this matter before the United Nations" he asked.

Mr. Sharp replied that Canada would not do so but that "one of the countries concerned" may bring the invasion issue to the UN Security Council.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Three to five inches of snow has fallen since noon Monday across southern Ontario. Eastern Ontario is expected to pick up an additional two to four inches during the day before the snow ends there. Colder air along with gusty northwest winds follow the snow and blowing snow is occasionally reducing visibility to near zero in exposed areas. Snowsquall activity is expected to become more prevalent on the north shores of the lakes Wednesday. The pattern of storms now is changing and for the rest of the week storms from the northwest will cross the Great Lakes in rapid succession.

Quake Kills Two

LOS ANGELES (CP) — A major earthquake hit Southern California at 6:02 a.m. PST today, killing at least two persons, collapsing some buildings in downtown Los Angeles, rupturing scores of water mains and shattering windows.

The quake was so powerful it knocked measuring instruments off scale at Cal Tech in suburban Pasadena. University of California seismologists in Northern California said it registered at 6.0 on the open-ended Richter scale.

Police confirmed that two dead were found in the rubble of a collapsed building in Los Angeles.

At least 36 persons were taken to hospitals in Los Angeles and the immediate vicinity, police reported.

The quake shook Los Angeles for six seconds and was was felt as far away as 180 miles.

Police said Hollywood was one of the worst-hit areas. Many of the Spanish-style wood-and-plaster homes were reported damaged or collapsed.

There were power interruptions in Los Angeles and reports of loss of electricity in the San Fernando Valley 17 miles away.

Slight tremors were still being felt in Los Angeles more than 25 minutes after the initial shock.

Crossing Was Never Officially Closed

Despite the understanding of the Canadian Transport Commission, Belleville's Mary Street crossing over the Canadian Pacific Railway leading to Morch Manufacturing Ltd. never was officially closed back in 1914.

This is the statement of City Solicitor John Miller and Donald Templeman, solicitor for the Morch company, who says records show that authority only was given to close the crossing.

"There never was an order for the city to close the crossing," the city solicitor told the traffic and light committee yesterday. "It was authority only to close."

Mr. Miller said it was significant that the crossing has continued to be used over the years.

The recommendation of the solicitor was that the crossing not be closed but be improved by the installation of crossing signals.

Alternately, if Mary Street was to be closed, an alternate means of access to Morch Manufacturing Ltd. should be provided with the railway assisting in the provision of the necessary facilities.

Mr. Templeman told the committee that the Mary Street crossing was used daily by his client's employees, numbering about 80. Also, he said there was a growing number of visitors to the city by way of the Morch Marina.

He asked that the traffic committee do everything possible to keep the Mary Street crossing open and that it be made safe.

Concern over the possible closing of the crossing was created some months ago with the receipt of a letter from the CTC asking the city when it was going to close the crossing in accordance with the 1914 order.

Mayor J. Russell Scott moved that the ciyy solicitor's report be accepted with a recommendation to go to council that the CTC be advised of the city's finding regarding the 1914 railway board authorization to close the crossing.

Whiteout Blankets Quinte Area

As the district shovelled out of another snowstorm today, Quinte residents asked themselves what ever happened to the old fashioned winter—the one with a January thaw and the occasional glimpse of a patch of bare ground through the drifts.

Only the skiers were gloating as the skies dumped seven inches of snow on Belleville last night, 8.2 on Picton and a relatively light 4.9 inches on Trenton.

By 9.30 this morning, the storm centre had moved to Quebec City and only light snowfall, amounting to about a half inch was expected for the rest of the day.

But the weather office at CFB Trenton cautioned that gusting winds up to 35 miles an hour are expected, reducing visibility and compounding the drifting problem in country areas.

Temperatures remained moderate during the storm, falling to a low of 18 degrees in most centres during the night.

School buses and meetings were cancelled today as municipalities sent out their snow removal equipment to clear roads and highways.

A spokesman for the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said road conditions were "terrible" this morning. Five minor accidents were reported, three or four more than the normal over-night total at this time of year.

Brighton OPP reported only two minor accidents on Highway 401 and Picton had only one minor mishap.

In Trenton, all mail delivery, letter carriers and rural routes were cancelled. Town engineer Arthur Campbell said the full snow removal crew, with three plows and a grader, was out last night and will continue work today.

In Prince Edward county, where all schools were closed today, the plows went out at 5 a.m. this morning and made poor headway against the heavy drifts.

Belleville's snow removal equipment and crews headed out at midnight last night and found the going rough because of skidding on the coat of ice under the snow on city streets and sidewalks.

A public works department spokesman said this is the worst winter for snow removal in the past four years. He expected the bulk of the clearing operations to be over by 5 p.m. tonight, leaving "touching up" for tomorrow.

Working on city streets and sidewalks are four graders, two loaders, seven plows, five sidwalk jeeps, two small snow blowers and two sanders.

Although the major arteries were cleared by 8 a.m. this morning, the public works department has issued an appeal to motorists to park their facilitate snow removal.

An appeal to motorists to "take the bus to work instead" appeared to be effective, as the city transit commission reported a rash of telephone calls requesting bus schedules. A spokesman there said bus use always rises during and after a snowstorm in the city.

At the city pump house, the snow on the ground at present is 18" deep.

But around Bancroft and Dacre the snow is 37" deep—posing a hazard to the survival of deer. In centre Hastings the situation is worse for wildlife — the snow is 30" deep with a crust.

Although some buses got through in the centre Hastings area this morning, most schools were closed. Several buses were stuck in drifts until township snow removal equipment got them free.

Tweed got 8.5 inches of snow last night and the total so far for February is 11.5 inches, about ¾ of the 17 inches normal for the month.

So far this year, Tweed has had 88.4 inches of snow. Normal snowfall for the winter season is 65.9 inches. The record fallout occurred in 1959-60 when 114.25 inches of snow was dumped on the Tweed district.

A lands and forests spokesman at Tweed reports that snowmobiles can't operate in the north of the county due to the heavy layer of light snow. In the Tweed area the going is easier for the snow machines because of the crust under the latest layer of snow. Snowshoes are still the best way to get around in the northern bush, he indicated.

A warning has gone out to snowmobilers to keep off the lakes and rivers in the county. The heavy snow cover has insulated the ice from the cold air temperatures and turned the ice beneath slushy and unsafe.

School Boundaries Revised

New school boundaries for the school year starting next September were defined by Hastings county board of education last night.

The boundary beween BCI and Moira Secondary School has been moved east, from MacDonald Ave. to "on and west of Bertram Blvd. and its extensions to Station St. and Dundas St. East."

This year's grade eight students, who will be going into grade 9 in September, from the district west of Bertram Blvd. will go to BCI next year. None of the students in other grades will be moved.

Next year's grade 9 students in Thurlow Township on and west of highway 37 will go to Centennial Secondary School instead of to Quinte Secondary School.

The new Bayside Secondary School will get grade 9, 10 and 11 students ,except those grade 11 students having a partial program in grade 12, from Middleton Park and CFB Trenton who formerly would have gone to Trenton High School, and those from Frankford and Batawa villages, Sacred Heart separate school and part of Sidney township who would have gone to Centennial Secondary School.

The boundary shifts were dicated by overcrowding in some schools and construction of the Bayside school.

Moving the students has resulted in some protests, especially from the Frankford and Thurlow areas.

Trustee Nelson McKibbon of Belleville said he had had a telephone call concerning the subject last night. He was told to ask parents to put their cases in writing to the board.

Bus Shelters To Be Studied

A special subcommitee of the city traffic and light committee has been appointed to further investigate the possible provision of bus stop shelters in the city.

The possible need for bus shelters in Belleville was brought to the attention of the traffic committee some weeks ago by east end president Donald Dawson and Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie was asked to investigate their use in other centres.

Yesterday, the police chief reported that bus shelters were in common use in North York and Scarborough and suggested that some be provided at certain locations in Belleville.

Costs of the pre-fabricated shelters ranged from $500 to $1,000, he said.

But Mayor J. Russell Scott urged that a closer look into all aspects of the matter be taken before any decision is made.

One of the questions to be asked was whether the cost of the shelters would be a municipal or transit commission responsibility, he said.

Also, he said, if shelers were to be provided, the whole city should be treated on the same basis.

The mayor said that there was a possibility of new provincial grants to assist in the cost of transit systems.

If so, he said, the cost of bus shelters could be considered a legitimate expense.

City police yesterday arrested three youths found in the home of A. A. Stevens, 26 Lesley Drive, after a neighbor observed the youngsters lurking in the vicinity of the Stevens' back yard at 11:08 a.m.

Constables Merle Foster and Stephen Tebworth apprehended the youths in a bedroom. Entry by the boys was gained through a broken basement window.

Subsequent investigation has cleared up two previous break-ins in Belleville, a Trenton break-in and a Belleville car theft.

SELLING Your Business? THE KEY IS KEEPING GOOD RECORDS!

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

It is more than a coincidence that the first rule for successfully running a business and selling one is the same one — well-kept records that give a clear picture of profit and loss.

Look at is from the buyer's angle: To decide intelligently whether a business would make a wise purchase, it is neccessary for a buyer to know as much as possible and to have confidence that this information is reliable.

On the other hand, there is the understandable reluctance on the part of small businessmen to reveal the confidential records of their businesses to strangers who they fear may not keep the information confidential.

The link between buyer and seller is an experienced professional Realtor, He must be armed with the accounting information he needs to sell the business to the greatest advantage while he guards the confidential information he is trusted with by thoroughly screening his prospective buyers.

Supply your Realtor with a professionally-audited statement of profit and loss and assets and liabilities. Many doubts abound in a prospective buyer's mind while he studies a business he is thinking of buying The best weapon to dispel these doubts is reliable and authentic information discreetly presented.

Education Week Program Outlined

PICTON (Staff) — Education Week, a program convened by Prince Edward Collegiate Institute teacher Jeremy Vincent, was outlined last night to Prince Edward school trustees.

The program, being held at the collegiate from March 8 to 12, will feature a county board of education meeting, concluded in a school classroom with special invitations extended to the public.

Education Week will centre in part on student project displays. Parents are invited to attend this four-day program.

It was pointed out that Education Week is not a substitute which will be held in April of this year.

Quebec

he said Mr. Bourassa appeared to toss a monkey wrench into the works by making Quebec support for it contingent upon acceptance of Quebec's income support proposals.

Mr. Thatcher said the Quebec proposals would "wreck the federal system" by taking from Ottawa jurisdiction over welfare services including income supplements, old age pensions, unemployment insurance, family allowances and health care.

However, the Saskatchewan premier admitted he may have misunderstood Mr. Bourassa. And he said the Quebec premier "assured me I am not quite correct."

After dinner, though, he maintained once again: "It's up to Quebec."

Mr. Bourassa himself refused to confirm or deny the Thatcher impression.

Have-not provinces which would suffer from any decentralization in the welfare area didn't appear alarmed by anything Mr. Bourassa said.

Premier Regan described Mr. Bourassa's presentation at the conference, closed to the press, as "moderate, sensible and worthy of study."

Neither were federal sources alarmed, Prime Minister Trudeau would only say the discussions were going "very well."

The proposed amending formula would permit constitutional changes with the agreement of Ontario and Quebec, plus any two western provinces and any two Atlantic provinces, excluding Prince Edward Island.

Federal sources described this as a simplified version. Population and area considerations might make the formula more intricate. One variation discussed Monday would make the two most populous western provinces the key ones.

Premier Thatcher, aware that these would be British Columbia and Alberta, said Saskatchewan residents might fall into the category of "second class citizens."

However, he said he is supporting the formula. His only reservation appeared to be connected with Quebec's social security proposals.

If an agreement in principle is reached, the battle will be far from over. The premiers will have to take the formula back to their legislatures for approval, and a fight in Quebec is expected no matter what the formula may be.

If an agreement is reached by the 11 leaders, and Parliament and the legislatures endorse it, final approval would come in June at a televised constitutional conference to be held in Victoria.

This would open the way for repatriation of the British North America Act and a tortuous amending procedure which requires the consent of the British Parliament.

Petty Crime List Grows In City

A rash of break-ins, thefts and frauds have led to successful action being taken involving 28 persons.

Since Jan. 25, there have been 25 breakins, five thefts of less than $50, three thefts of more than $50, 19 frauds and one willful damage complaint.

Three youths were arrested this morning and subsequent investigation cleared up three further break-ins and one car theft.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie expressed a certain amount of frustration concerning arrests.

"We've cleaned up so many and yet, we keep getting more. We're most fortunate to have cleared up these," he said, referring especially to yesterday's arrests.

Most recent in a series of such breakins was reported this morning by ladies' hairstylist Rodney Coyne.

He reported that his 145 College Street residence was broken into some time between 11 p.m. last night and 9 a.m. today.

Included in the stolen items were two wigs, a radio and an undisclosed amount of cash. Estimated total loss was $200.

Mr. Coyne was of the opinion that the thieves, who also did some damage, might have had girl friends.

"The wigs, you know," he said.

They Sang for Their Lunch

Rotary president Bill MacKay adjusts the mike for Alanna Moore, 8, smallest member of the Park Dale Public School choir, guests at the Belleville Rotary Club luncheon meeting Monday. After the meal the children, lead by their music teacher Mrs. L. Faulkner at the piano, sang a number of selections. Although the group will not be able to enter the Rotary Music Festival as a choir, members will be competing in their respective categories. In appreciation for the entertainment, the Rotary Club presented a plaque to the school, which was received by principal Bernard Wright.

Town Council Stalls Shopping Plaza

TRENTON (Staff) — Town council here last night refused to sanction a zoning change to allow construction of a neighborhood shopping centre on Sidney Street.

The Trenton and Suburban Planning Board, after dealing with the question three times, recommended February 3 that council approve the revision and permit the plaza.

Two Byron Street shop owners, Gary Birt and Ronald Price, representing 14 east side businessmen appeared before council to voice objections to the new development. Councillor Paul Tripp, a planning board member, expressed regret the delegation had not presented its case to that board.

Mr. Birt told council the east side has enough stores now. He said it is impossible to have a store next to everyone's home but these are not far away. "A five minute walk is not bad for anybody."

Planers indicate there is enough commercially zoned land — that there may be too much of it, he said.

In his presentation, Ronald Price, pointed out two area stores had gone out of business in the last year. He explained that council refused similar zoning changes for long-time residents of the town.

Councillor Ted Parker mentioned one of these had been a request to make a corner of Dixon Drive and Byron Street a commercial zone.

"If you consider rezoning for out - of - towners, why not for local people?" Mr. Price asked council.

He told council part of the reason businessmen opened stores in the area was assurance given in town plans they would be protected from zoning changes.

Jerome Shibley, Markham barrister and a principal of Sidney Homes Corp., developer of the five-store, six-apartment plaza, asserted he had contacted Project Planners in Toronto, consultants for the town's new official plan, and had been told 12 acres would be allotted for commerce in that part of the east side. Where this would be located was up to council, he said.

"I do not see that we are going to be a major competitive force to anyone . . . the plan is tremendously reduced from the original," he said.

Initially Sidney Homes had projected construction of a 10-store, 10-apartment complex but the planning board had asked for revisions to this scheme.

Mr. Shibley contended "it would be criminal not to develop this if it were needed". He said a survey of 40 residents in the immediate vicinity of the shopping centre site produced only two objections.

If residents living within 400 feet of the proposed shops filed objections, the Ontario Municipal Board would have to hold a hearing, clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry said.

Mr. Price mentioned that the protesting store owners had their businesses outside this immediate area. "The people it would help live within 400 feet, those it would hurt are outside," he said.

Objecting to references about out-of-towners, Mr. Shibley said his firm had participated in the growth of Trenton, building 33 homes last year and planning 45 more for the future. He said they would continue to do so, if they were not to be considered "second class citizens".

Young Orators Speak

MARMORA — Contestants from Sacred Heart School, Marmora, in the Ontario Hydro Commission public speaking contest, vied for preliminary honors Wednesday evening at the PTA meeting. A record attendance of parents, grandparents and friends were present to hear the speeches.

There were seven pupils competing, each of whom received honorable mention by the judges. First prize was won by Carol Anne Shannon, speaking on the "Haves and Have - Nots". Jamie Hughes was second for his talk on the "Lab Retriever", and in third place was Danny Bedore who spoke on "Hockey". Other speakers were Mike Logan, Monica Monk, Colleen O'Connor and Robin Shannon.

Judges, Rev. John Peters, chairman, Mrs. Charles Brady and Kenneth Gillies, were thanked by the president, Mrs. Michael Maloney.

A performance of folk dancing directed by Mrs. William Jones, was also enjoyed by the audience, as well as choral groups of junior grades accompanied by Mrs. Brady. Mrs. Maloney congratulated pupils for their presentations.

In a short business meeting, the president reported on the recent successful potluck luncheon, and discussed the St. Patrick's Dance being held in March. The next meting will be March 8.

Deloro Library To Get Variety

MARMORA (Special) —The Lake - Ontario Regional Library System of Kingston has joined forces with the Deloro Library Board to exchange books on a regular basis.

Deloro Councillor Leonard Bicknell reported at the Feb. 1 meeting of council that Barrie Robinson of the Kingston-based library had announced that co-operation would begin.

Council approved the purchase of a 75-foot hose to provide better service for the skating rink.

Douglas Lynch and Leonard Bicknell were appointed by council as representatives to the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council.

Water committee chairman, Ray Brown, reported that water samples have shown an excellent rating.

Trenton Complains Not in Brochure

TRENTON (Staff) — No reference is made to Trenton in the new tourist brochure published by the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council, Councillor Paul Tripp told town council here Monday.

He objected strongly to this and asked clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry to write to the requesting that Trenton be included.

"We belong to the council and we should be in the brochure," he said, although he conceded there is not much to attract tourists to Trenton.

Photographs of Belleville harbor and Picton's Main Street are featured in 50,000 copies of the pamphlet that will be distributed to travel shows, government travel bureaus, regional tourist councils and chambers of commerce.

"Our harbor is at least as attractive as the one at Belleville . . . our main street is at least as attractive as the one in Picton," he contended.

Belleville is not a member of LORDC.

Music Training Said Best in Early Grades

PICTON (Staff) — Special services co-ordinator Russell Williams last night told Prince Edward trustees that the first eight years of school provide the most opportune learning time for the education of music.

He explained that the time period between kindergarten and grade three are the most important years and elementary teachers are vital in the process.

He added that studies show music, when used as a central learning track, produces happier students.

Mr. Williams remarked that Prince Edward trustees have shown sincere interest in the best type of music program possible.

He suggested that this course could be started at the kindergarten level and be moved up through the other grades.

He observed that it is especially helpful to the slow learners and endorsed a summer instruction program for a partime staff member at the Happy Hour School.

He suggested that Prince Edward County Board could pay the teacher's tuition, and said that her study would increase the learning opportunities for the children at the Happy Hour.

When asked how the program could be implemented in Prince Edward, Mr. Williams suggested if it was started in one place, others would observe and approve it.

He stressed that school principals must show a desire to foster the program if it is to succeed.

Trustees agreed to refer the proposal for sending their Happy Hour teacher to study the music course to their education committee.

Jewelry Store Changes Hands

A downtown jewelry business owned and operated by Ronald Keel for the past 23 years has changed hands.

Mr. Keel this week announced that he had sold his business, Ronald Keel Jeweller Ltd. to Coles Jewellers at the Belleville Plaza.

However, there will be no change in the operation of the store at 296 Front Street. It will still carry Mr. Keel's name, and Mr. Keel, with 47 years in the jewelry business, will continue as manager.

Murray Coles, the new owner, came to the city nine years ago to open his store at the Belleville Plaza. Before coming to Belleville from Toronto, he worked in both the service and sales departments of the Bulova Watch Company.

Mr. Coles' Belleville Plaza store will continue to operate as before.

School Break-ins Loot Is 47 Cents

Fun and excitement seems to be the only motive behind the forcible entry into three area schools last night.

At least that is the opinion of one principal, who's school was entered.

Prince of Wales and St. Joseph's Schools in Belleville and the Tyendinaga school at RR 1, Shannonville were all entered through windows. Two were broken and in the case of Prince of Wales, a screen was removed.

In all instances, there was no damage reported, but teachers' desks were ransacked.

Nothing was reported missing by Tyendinaga School and St. Joseph's. The total take at Prince of Wales was 47 cents.

Representatives from the schools expressed surprise that no damage was done.

"It could have happened so easily," was one comment.

Councillors Insist PUC Sign Agreement

TRENTON (Staff) — On advice from solicitor William Weston, council here Monday passed a bylaw directing the Public Utilities Commission to sign the Dufferin Developments subdividers' agreement it refused to ratify January 23.

"I am quite certain the court would uphold this, if a mandamus were applied for," Mr. Weston said in a letter to council.

Seeking legal advice on whether council could overrule commission decisions was requested by Councillor Ted Parker at council's last meeting two weeks ago.

In his letter, Mr. Weston mentions that Section 41-5b, Public Utilities Act says "no extensions . . . to the works shall be undertaken by the commission without the consent of the Council of the Corporation to which the public utility belongs". However, he adds the question to be decided is the converse of this—whether the PUC can refuse to undertake capital works approved by council.

Referring to three sections of the act, he says the role of a commission is the "control and management" of the utilities system.

He concludes "the Commission cannot refuse as it is entrusted only with the control and management (of the system) and decisions for the installation of capital works are entirely up to council."

The solicitor cites, as a precedent, the case of Belleville vs. Belleville Utilities Commission, 1943 which held that the commission only had power to control and manage.

He also points out the Trenton PUC approved (February 16, 1967) the standard form of subdividers' agreement providing 50 - 50 cost sharing programs between the town and developers for the extension of services. The PUC had objected to such programs.

Council took the advice of Mr. Weston on a related matter too; it passed a second bylaw authorizing a member of the administrative board as its agent to inspect the minute books of Commission proceedings.

Mayor Says Shutdown Not Really Necessary

TRENTON (Staff) — Ontario Water Resources Commission did not force Stokely-Van Camp of Canada to close its Trenton canning factory this year, Mayor Duncan McDonald told town council here last night.

The mayor said OWRC will send a letter to the company advising that operations are permitted at the west side plant in 1971. He referred to the closure as a misunderstanding that can be corrected.

A Stokely statement Thursday gave only one reason for the shutdown after 30 years of its local facility — that it could not economically meet OWRC pollution control requirements.

Mayor McDonald told council OWRC had only been interested in finding out what steps the company would take to alleviate the pollution situation at its Dufferein Street factory. It had not given Stokely an ultimatum.

Councillor Paul Tripp, chairman of Trenton's Industrial Commission, said he got "considerable flak over the weekend" because of the announcement Stokely would close. He said he received several phone calls on the subject, one accusing him of "indifference to one of our industries of long standing".

"We have sinned in the past for trying to bring in industry but not for driving it out," he said.

The mayor pointed out the cost to Stokely for linking up with the town's sewage disposal system would be about $630,000 but other industries do not pay for such service.

Councillor Ted Parker said the Stokely case is special because it is only open for three or four months a year and at that time its effluent amounts to about half of all sewage from the rest of the town. The sewage treatment plant would have to be greatly enlarged to accommodate the canning factory, although Stokely's use of it would be seasonal.

"It is only because of the large capital expenditure involved (in expanding the plant to serve them), that they would be charged" he said.

J. Byron Harder, manager of Stokely's Trenton plant told The Intelligencer that the decision to close down had been made at the company's headquarters at Exeter, Ont. Any revision of that decision would have to come from the same source.

Stokely-Van Camp's Exeter processing plant will close down this year also. Also because the company states it cannot comply with OWRC regulations.

Snowmobile Bylaw Passed in Trenton

TRENTON (Staff) — The bylaw regulating the use of snowmobiles in Trenton was passed last night by town council.

The bylaw forbids the use of snowmobiles in all municipal parks with the exception of Centennial and Hanna Parks.

Originally the bylaw had also proposed use in Stanley and Bayshore Parks but the parks board disapproved.

Under the bylaw, the use of snowmobiles will be permitted between 8 a.m. and 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and on Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 8 a.m. until 12 midnight.

The machines are banned at all hours on East and West Dundas Streets, on Front, Division, Quinte and Sidney Streets and on Dufferin Ave.

However, residents living on the above streets will be permitted to drive to the nearest intersection to gain exit to side streets.

Infractions of the bylaw provide for penalties of up to $300. The bylaw is still subject to Department of Transport approval.

Leadership Race

With the Ontario leadership campaign on the home straight, it is fashionable for newspapers in such a situation to give the nod to one candidate or another. But essentially that choice must be made by delegates on the conference floor, for it is not only on past record and performance that a politician must be judged but on the impression he gives before the party faithful from across the length and breadth of this province.

None of the half-dozen candidates has offered any indication of new policies and all have been content to state their views on the major issues of the day: education costs, regional government, pollution and so on. In the ultimate, it will be the bearing of each, and what he has to say at the convention, which will be the deciding factors.

A letter on this page today is indicative of the fact that the people of the province have need of less politicking and more action on actual bread-and-butter issues. The letter speaks of a need to come down from the "campaign clouds" and focus attention on the plight of firms faced with heavy costs or even closure because of pollution. It is good to see that this problem has not been forgotten by members of the legislature, and particularly locally — as witness the questions directed by Hastings member Clarke Rollins to Mines Minister Allan Lawrence in Belleville last week.

A leadership race serves to bring out this and other issues, but it was the Trudeau federal campaign perhaps which set the "no promises" trend which had been the bogey of earlier governments — Lester Pearson's "hundred days of decision" for example. Thus, on the provincial scene, we have Education Minister William Davis declining to state "instant policies" and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch noting that policy is the job of the cabinet and caucus, not just one man.

And in the background we have Trade and Development Minister Stanley Randall making good sense on the issue of foreign investment. "You are not going to find 700,000 jobs for the unemployed without foreign investment," he said last week. It is a point he has made before and this is a timely reminder as the issue comes to the fore again.

But it is men with jobs at stake in places like Marmora and Point Anne who will be helping to decide the course of politics in the immediate future. Candidates will obtain support in proportion to how they handle this and other dollars and cents issues.

Carnival's Success

Belleville's winter carnival was a memorable occasion. Weather conditions were good and large numbers of people came together in a pleasant, informal atmosphere which is all too rare in the life of the community.

The thought occurs, what about a summer carnival to bring about another friendly and stimulating occasion, only substitute summer sports events. Meanwhile, some thoughts on this winter happening: there is room perhaps for some increased marshalling, for at times one would have required eyes in the back of the head to keep clear of dogs and snowmobiles. Not that we observed any untoward incidents, but while the crowds were kept in line at the start of the dog races there was no such control when the teams straggled back some time later.

Nor is there any denying that the noise level from snowmobile engines was high — and after being exposed to it for a while, irritating. Exhaust fumes too were everywhere, and there seemed to be no check on either the age of the operators or where the machines were heading. There was just this constant noise and aimless milling around of snowmobiles. Conversation was made difficult as a result.

The noise factor with snowmobiles is something manufacturers are going to have to tackle, but aside from that the carnival may be regarded as a real "going concern" as far as the future is concerned. Its success is a tribute to excellent organization by the Chamber of Commerce and everyone concerned.

126,000 Signatures for Postcard Protest

Edmonton Woman Drives Pollution Message Home to P.M.

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Small wonder there have been so many protests.

Protesting has become almost a profession, even a career, for the increasing multitude of the socially uptight.

To be a protester you need no university degree nor a certificate of technical or academic excellence on the office wall.

You need nothing but an idea — it does not even have to be original — and the determination to make a thing of it.

Recently, when thousands of postcards protesting pollution — almost all of them mailed out of Edmonton — began hitting Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's East Block Parliament Hill mail desk, what might be called "The Anatomy of a Protest" came to light.

The art — if that is what it is — of protesting is so simple, the requirements so elemental, and the often mindless response that it stimulates so massive as to be frightening.

So what is new about pollution?

And who likes it?

Or who speaks out in defence of it?

If there is anyone, he has to be in hiding.

For all of Canada, even North America seems united vocally in a public assault on pollution. It is fashionable.

But out in Edmonton recently, one woman, Mary Van Stolk, managed to get such a pollution protest rolling that when its shock waves hit the Trudeau mail desk, the Prime Minister's people, as she has phrased it, became "very twitchy."

The Prime Minister, merchandising his own personal brand of "participatory democracy," as he terms it, on the Canadian political market, has a staff of 20 on that desk.

They answer every last letter that comes in.

So those letters had to come flooding in like the East Block was some modern-day Noah's Ark to get that staff that excited?

They did.

Simply and solely because Mary Van Stolk discovered that for $2.50 you can buy a bundle of 501 postcards and mail them, postage free, to the Prime Minister or any other parliamentarian in the National Capital for that matter, including — or perhaps especially — your own MP.

Pollution, though, rather old hat, what, for purposes of protest?

Not if you write the protest message on every single postcard, set yourself up at a cardtable on a supermarket plaza and nail people passing by for their signatures.

They do not even have to read your message.

Just sign.

It is easy that way.

Avoids arguments and delays.

Amazing how many signatures you can collect.

Mary Van Stolk's protest message, written out on each card — and reading "I demand strict enforcement of existing pollution controls and immediate legislation to stop further pollution" — collected 126,000 signatures.

The lady who shook up the East Block mail desk has been interviewed in Edmonton as to what happened then.

"They got very twitchy" she relates, "they started calling up from Ottawa. They wanted to know what is going on out here with all these people mailing in protests.

"They want to know what we think we are doing and who do we think we are?"

No problem, says she, in getting people to sign against pollution or — and although she did not go that far it is probably truer than you think — to petition for or against anything.

One trouble is, she reveals, in getting this sort of massive protest - to - Parliament going, that while most—but not all — people know the Prime Minister can be reached in Ottawa, fewer have any clue about their own MP or how to reach him.

So she takes care of that little hangup and mails the signed cards herself.

Simple, eh?

But there is a catch.

If people do not always read what they sign, others — including MPs — sometimes fail to read what has been signed.

Or if they do read it, it is with only half an eye.

Some parliamentarians, responding to the protest, seemed to think it was some kind of a children's crusade.

One reply came back from an MP in Ottawa saying: "I think you should talk to your mother about this."

Still another fired back: "I do not think you should be using, at your age, such words as 'demand.'"

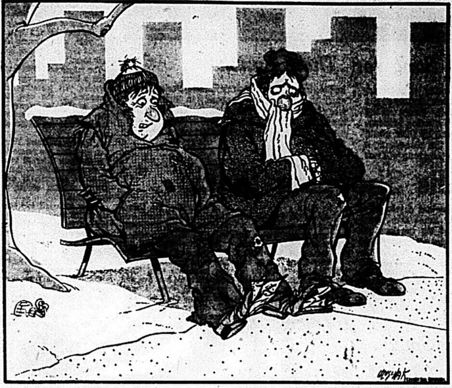
You may be able to discourage a protester, but if she or he is a pro, you are not going to stop them.

Undismayed by the inattention — except from the Prime Minister's office where real attention is paid to the mail and serious weight given it — Mary Van Stolk, to drive the pollution point home, mailed a box of non-phosphate cleaner to every MP and Senator.

(Under a pound, any package rides free of postage to Parliament Hill.)

Then, "We sent a huge box, 90 pounds of free sample detergent to the Prime Minister," she confessed.

No wonder they got "very twitchy" on his mail desk!



"I don't know what I would have done without my university degrees this winter — they've kept my feet from freezing!"

What Is the Government's Position On Possible Closing of Plants?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was interested to read that Dr. Potter and Clarke Rollins are sharing in the questioning of the leadership candidates. One comment made by Mr. Rollins regarding the so - called "phase out" of operations of the Canada Cement Lafarge Company at Point Anne was particularly interesting.

He said that the plant is being phased out mainly because of the cost of installing $1.5 million dollars worth of anti-pollution equipment. Mines minister Allan Lawrence told the meeting that the government was "aware of the calamity of closed plants and was moving toward providing assistance for pollution control".

If this is the case, I would feel that Mr. Rollins and Dr. Potter, if they are concerned for their constituents, should immediately make representations in behalf of the Point Anne plant. If, as Mr. Rollins suggested, cost of installing anti-pollution equipment is the reason, then maybe an intervention by the members of the Legislature would be of value in this matter.

On the other-hand, if this is only an excuse being used by the company to shut down the plant, then this would be fully revealed. I am sure that Mr. Rollins must realize that Thurlow township is now faced with finding some other source of taxation to replace the $150,000 annually that the cement plant realized. This will place a considerable strain on the taxpayers of the township.

Another aspect of this unfortunate phase-out is the laughable promise of the Canada Manpower and company officials to see that their employees are re-trained for other suitable positions.

We all know that anyone who qualifies can be re-trained. The real issue is "Where are the jobs for them when they have been re-trained?" I have worked for this company in excess of 20 years and I suspect they not only do not want to take any of their present employees to the new plant at Bath, but do not intend to if they can avoid it.

The reason for this is apparent. Most of the present employees are old and faithful servants of the company. The majority of them are over the age of 40, and many of them over the age of 50, and have service ranging from 20 years to 40 years. This means that if they go to Bath the question of seniority will arise, and no company, if they can get out of it, will respect seniority rights. I feel, that in a case such as this, the government should step in and insist that all employees, without reservation, be given the opportunity to move with the company. This is the honorable thing to do. How about it Canada Cement, you hold the livelihood and happiness of some 100 or more families in your hands?

In the meantime, Messers Rollins and Potter, if you can come down from leadership campaign clouds, let us hear your voices raised where it counts the most, in the Legislature to do something tangible to head off this unnecessary and callous close down.

Mr. Horsburgh Reinstated

Kingston Whig-Standard

By a vote of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, Russell Horsburgh, a former United Church minister, has been reinstated into the church. Thus it would seem that at last the United Church has seen fit to recognize innocence established by the courts.

In May, 1965, Mr. Horsburgh, minister of Park Street United Church in Chatham, resigned his ministry. He had been convicted in the courts of a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency. He was sentenced to a year in jail and served 107 days of that sentence, before the Supreme Court of Canada ruled in 1967 that a mistrial had occurred at Chatham. A new trial was ordered and Mr. Horsburgh was acquitted in 1968.

Last year, appearing before his peers in the church, Mr. Horsburgh asked for unqualified readmission to the ministry. Kent Presbytery and the London Conference ruled that he could return only if he accepted a one-year probation period and Presbytery supervision, as well as psychiatric help. Of the demand that he undertake psychiatric therapy because of alleged difficulties he encountered in working with people, Mr. Horsburgh said: "If the church makes these demands of me, it has set a precedent under which every clergyman is vulnerable because every clergyman has these troubles." He termed the condition an "insidious slur".

On Saturday following other appeal, Mr. Horsburgh, who is ill with cancer, finally won his fight for re-admission to the ministry without qualification. "I have been fighting now for three years following a battle of four years for justice in the criminal courts," he said. "It has been seven years of what could have been the most fruitful years of my ministry and my life."

As we have pointed out before, part of the difficulty in assessing this case has been refusal of the United Church to take the press into its confidence by explaining in full the reasons for its seeming lack of humanity in dealing with Mr. Horsburgh since his acquittal in 1968. Throughout Canada, however, there are many Russell Horsburghs — men and women for whom acquittal by the courts represents only the beginning in a long, tortuous struggle to erase the stigma of a criminal charge and establish their innocence in the eyes of society. Their plight tells us something about "justice". It tells us much more about ourselves.

Even Children Taunt Troops

Ulster's Agony — No Answer Other Than Military Force?

By HAROLD MORRISON

The crucial element in the Ulster riots is that the commanding authorities have no over-all strategy for curing the deep-rooted troubles that threaten to sicken the six counties for years to come.

Every idea that has been raised and every hope that has been encouraged suddenly collapse as periods of deceptive calm give way to new waves of violence.

The use of troops demonstrates that persuasion by other means has failed. Reinforcing those troops embellishes the argument that the power of civil government has ended and that Ulster must be ruled through military occupation.

Ulster Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark describes the latest outbreaks of violence as "a trial of strength between extreme Republican elements and the security forces." He maintains that this "ugly thing" holding the community to ransom will be defeated. He does not make clear how he intends to defeat it, though it is apparent from experience that it cannot be defeated through the ballot box.

Force seems to be the authorities' only answer. The argument among officials is that the troops and police will finally root out the riot ringleaders and jail them.

But they are not sure who the ringleaders are. The commanding officer has named five alleged members. But from the size of the commotion and the skilful organization of clandestine weaponry, it is apparent that many persons are involved.

The depth of this organization is demonstrated by the banding of children to tease the troops and throw bricks. The children are being taught to hate as their fathers were taught to hate and the presence of masses of troops is unlikely to lessen that hatred.

Ulster authorities are hoping that staging of a golden jubilee exhibition next spring might divert the deep-rooted division between Roman Catholic and Protestant to the larger horizon of Ulster's welfare and survival. But some observers fear the exhibition may merely heighten the crisis.

So worried are some officials that they may urge that the exhibition be quietly ditched and the jubilee recalled as just another episode in an unceasing war.

DAVID MARTELL, age 7, plays with Charlie at his uncle's home near Stouffville, 30 miles north of Toronto, after being rescued from the bush. The boy and the dog were lost Saturday, and the St. Bernard sat on David to keep him warm until they were found by rescuers. (CP Photo)

Dog Saves Boy, 7, Lost in Snowstorm

STOUFFVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Seven-year-old David Martell is alive today thanks to the common sense of a 110-pound St. Bernard called Charlie.

David and Charlie got lost last Saturday in Vivian Forest about eight miles north of here.

"I wanted to keep walking," said David, "but Charlie kept pulling me back and finally sat on me and kept me nice and warm."

David and the dog were found by his uncle, Lorne Rose, two hours after a search was started by police and 30 volunteers.

Mr. Rose said the boy was cuddled close to the dog, exhausted from walking in circles in the waist-deep snow.

The youngster was suffering from exposure and frostbitten feet, police said.

He was taken to hospital for treatment and later released. Stouffville is 25 miles northeast of Toronto.

Flin Flon Is Hard Hit by Strike of 750

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — The belt of hardship is slowly being cinched around the economic waist of this northern community.

In a one-industry mining town this means only one thing: Strike.

Three weeks ago tradesmen belonging to six craft unions voted to walk out at the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co., and this town of 13,000 people was facing its first strike in 37 years. The tradesmen number about 750 of the work force but their jobs are essential to the mines and smelters.

By the end of that week the company had shut down its operation, 2,800 workers were idle at three different sites and the town's economy braced for a slide.

Nestled in Manitoba's hinterland of the northwest and spilling across the Saskatchewan boundary, Flin Flon is one of Western Canada's oldest mining communities. A lucky prospector's bonfire melted snow and uncovered a copper ore outcrooping in 1914, and by 1932 the town was incorporated. Two years later the town had its first labor strike and has not had one since.

Flin Flon, named after a fictional character in a long-lost novel, is a rambling collection of buildings and stores perched on barren rock. In many instances sewer and water pipes are boxed in from the cold and run over the rocks.

In the present strike, money is not a key factor. The tradesmen are demanding that they be permitted to bargain for their own trades association group. They have refused to follow the company demand that tradesmen accept the terms of a wage and work contract signed last fall by the United Steelworkers of America. The steelworkers represent 1,700 miners.

Chamber of Commerce President Fred Howard says:

"We pray it ends soon. This sort of thing has a snowball effect and there are already some layoffs from the smaller stores."

He said there has been a drop in business at many stores. Clerks were being laid off and store managers and owners were starting to man the cash registers themselves.

A shortage of cash hasn't really been noticed yet because the strikers are still getting company pay cheques. The last one will come Feb. 11 and that will be for seven day's pay.

"Then, I'm afraid, things will start to get tight," said Mr. Howard.

With the mine closed, 1,700 miners are out and already more than 1,000 claims have been filed with the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Of the striking tradesmen, many, depending on their union, are already getting strike pay. The maximum, again depending upon the union concerned, is $40 a week.

But strike pay and unemployment insurance benefits are not going to match the $1.7 million monthly payroll that used to pour into the community.

Over 500 people attended the grand opening of the new Stirling farm and garden supply plant on North Street.

U.S. Professor Says Canadians Made 'Niggers in Own Country'

HAMILTON (CP) — An American professor of politics at McMaster University Monday accused his department of displaying pro-American bias in hiring instructors.

Dr. K. H. Pringhseim, at McMaster since 1966, charged that the "departmental Mafia" is ignoring the Canadian academic scene in favor of Americans'.

"The Canadian is nigger in his own country," he said. "Of 18 faculty members in the political science department, 13 of them are American."

Dr. Pringsheim made his comments Monday at a meeting called by political science students to confront faculty about Canadian content.

Students held an impromptu meeting Friday after faculty members passed a motion to change a proposed Canadian foreign policy course to a course in international politics.

Dr. Howard Lentner, chairman of the political science department, said the change was made because the Canadian foreign policy course was "too restrictive" for hiring purposes.

At Monday's meeting, students demanded that more emphasis be placed on Canadian studies and that Canadians be hired to teach all Canadian-content courses.

Dr. Lentner agreed to call a departmental meeting for Thursday to reconsider the decision to drop the Canadian foreign-policy course.

Benson Dislikes Prediction Investment Outlook Not Rosy

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson took sharp exception in the Commons Monday to the less-than-rosy picture of business investment in the medium-range future that was put forward last week by the Economic Council of Canada.

Mr. Benson said he intends to stick with a prediction by the department of industry that capital investment in 1971 will increase by 11 per cent rather than accept the council's projection of a nine-per-cent increase.

As for the council's prediction that capital investment will decline in 1972 to 1970 levels, Mr. Benson suggested that "a survey conducted in Oct., 1969, is not a very good indication."

The minister also described as a "very serious deficiency" the omission from the council's survey of investment intentions in the agricultural, fishing and housing industries. Housing in particular, he said, is going to be very strong.

The council report, released Friday, was based on a survey of medium-range investment intentions of 200 large firms accounting for close to 60 per cent of business investment in Canada. The results provided the most pessimistic projections in the six years such studies have been undertaken by the council.

Exhibition Staff Pared

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Stanbury, minister responsible for Information Canada, said Monday he has received no indication that the agency's exhibition staff is quitting.

He was replying in the Commons to Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) who said there are reports the entire professional staff of the exhibition branch is leaving because of difficulties under which it has to work.

Mr. Stanbury said he hopes the staff can be retained if sufficient work for it comes in from government departments.

Mr. Knowles said Information Canada is contracting out some of the exhibition work.

Mr. Stanbury told the Commons Jan. 18 that 17 persons being laid off in the exhibitions branch would be given other jobs in the public service.

Mr. Knowles tried earlier the same day to refer the Information Canada question to a Commons committee but was denied the required unanimous consent.

Mr. Knowles referred to the exhibitions branch dismissals and the demotion of some other personnel. He said the matter should be brought before the miscellaneous estimates committee and reported on by Feb. 1.

Lang Gives Figures

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Otto Lang said Monday that about 641,000 Canadians were registered at manpower offices at the end of December as seeking employment.

But he cautioned the Commons against using this figure as a true test of the number of unemployed. It did not include those trying to change jobs or who had found work and not notified the manpower officials.

Replying to T. C. Douglas, NDP leader, Mr. Lang said the most reliable indicator of unemployment in Canada is the report issued each month by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

DBS reported that 538,000 Canadians were unemployed at mid-December.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) that the cabinet is considering measures to ensure summer employment for students.

"It will be our purpose to promote the employment of students not only in industry in Canada but in government as well this summer."

No Decision on Welfare

OTTAWA (CP) — No federal decision has been made "at this time" to assume a larger percentage of welfare costs, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Monday in the Commons.

The federal authority now shares welfare costs 50-50 with the provinces.

Mr. Benson had been asked by David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) whether the cabinet is considering taking on a greater share of these costs.

Mr. Orlikow said welfare costs rose 25 to 30 per cent in most provinces and cities last year and are expected to increase again in 1971. He asked whether the matter would be discussed at the current federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Mr. Benson said he wasn't sure whether the subject would be raised.

PC Campaigning Is Slowed

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Campaigning for the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party slowed to a crawl Monday, two days from the start of the party's convention here that will choose a successor to retiring Premier John Robarts.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, advocating a policy of tax cuts, was the only one of the six leadership candidates making forthright campaign promises. But fellow-contender Darcy McKeough, addressing the Ontario Association of Rural Municipalities in his role of municipal affairs minister, hinted that a government he led would initiate changes in the province's property-tax system.

Education Minister William Davis, by several polls the front-runner in the leadership race, was reported resting at his cottage on an island in Georgian Bay.

Allan Lawrence, mines and northern affairs minister, remained at home in Toronto, meeting with campaign workers Monday evening.

A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, financial and commercial affairs minister, was reported to have spent the day in his Toronto office.

Robert Pharand, 26, the Ottawa graduate student who entered the field only last week to publicize the ideas of youth and French-Canadians, spent the day at home.

Six Young Men Getting Paid for Smoking 'Pot'

TORONTO (CP) — Six young men in a Toronto clinic are getting two free government-approved marijuana cigarettes a day and being paid for it, an official of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation said Monday.

And by assembling wooden stools they can earn enough to buy as many more as they want at 50 cents a cigarette.

The six are subjects in a pilot study by the foundation, designed to lay the groundwork for a larger three-month study later this year.

Gary Siedler, an information officer for the foundation, said in an interview the 10-week pilot study began Jan. 4 with former students aged 21 to 26. Its object is to acquaint the 37 staff members for the larger experiment with methods of handling the drug and the subjects.

The foundation now is looking for 20 male volunteers aged 21 to 35, who are prepared to spend May, June and July confined to a clinic.

The only qualification is that they be "normal men" able to pass a series of psychological tests to establish their emotional stability. Previous use of drugs is not a disqualifying factor.

Mr. Siedler said the test "is expected to clear up many existing uncertainties about the effects of using marijuana over long periods of time."

The volunteers will be paid $5 a day but cannot collect it until the end of the three months.

They are to be split into two groups of 10, separated from each other. Each will be required to smoke two tailor-made marijuana cigarettes a day.

But one group will get marijuana containing a high level of tetrahydrocannabinol, the active ingredient, and the other will get only low doses of THC or none at all. The marijuana was grown under ideal conditions by the Federal Food and Drug Directorate, for the tests.

Basic needs—a bed, cleaning services, heat, light and "bland" food—will be supplied but to obtain a more-varied menu, writing materials, newspapers, laundry service, candy, cigarettes and alcohol, they must pay with tokens earned by assembling square, wicker-top stools.

The tokens will buy more marijuana and such recreation as supervised car rides and trips to movies and swimming areas.

The subjects also will have to pay to watch television or listen to radio.

The volunteers may be allowed to communicate with the outside world to a limited extent, but they will not be able to meet women or other friends.

Their reactions toward the 15 nurses on the research team are one of the things to be studied.

Others are medical, psychiatric, psychological reactions, social interactions and intelligence performances.

Nationalization Is Suggested For All Railway Roadbeds

NEW YORK (CP) — R. R. Cope, vice-president of the Canadian transport commission, today suggested that all railway roadbeds in Canada and the United States could be nationalized and railways charged for using them.

He told the Transportation Research Forum of New York this proposition should be carefully studied.

"I hasten to add that this does not mean I would recommend it as a policy without favorable results from such detailed study."

Mr. Cope made the proposal in outlining ideas for operating various modes of transport—marine, road, air and railway—on a "non-discriminatory basis."

He said there seems "no justification, on grounds of efficient resource allocation, for subsidizing one mode of transport more than another."

He suggested there is a role for government in railway operations similar to its involvement in highways, waterways or airways.

Since Canadian National Railways already is owned by the government, Canada would only have to buy 16,000 miles of track owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway at a cost of $900 million, Mr. Cope said.

The government could levy a user charge of 10 per cent on railway revenues to obtain the $58 million annually needed to maintain the Canadian Pacific roadbed.

The U.S. government would have to pay about $15,000 million for railway roadbed and charge about 15 per cent of freight and passenger revenues for maintenance.

Rolls-Royce Collapse Can Affect Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of Canada Ltd. and government officials are still trying to sort out the implications for Canada of the financial collapse last week of Rolls-Royce, the giant British auto and aerospace company.

An industry department spokesman said today the department is looking at the impact of the Rolls-Royce failure on Lockheed. Rolls-Royce was building the RB-211 engine for Lockheed's TriStar wide-bodied jet aircraft.

Erik Nelson, managing director of Lockheed in Canada, said today the Rolls-Royce situation is still uncertain. He has passed on requests by Canadian companies for additional subcontracts for Rolls-Royce engine parts to the Lockheed parent company in Burbank, California.

Canadian companies have about $200 million in contracts for the TriStar. Almost all is for airframe components though Orenda Ltd. of Malton, Ont., has a subcontract for about $5 million for Rolls-Royce engines.

Series of Questions Re Drinking Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wonder how many people in your reading audience are hiding the fact from themselves that they are alcoholics. My guess is a few million. The other day I ran across an interesting list of questions that might be helpful. If a person answers "yes" to six of these eight questions, he should face the fact that he has a serious drinking problem. Here are the questions:

ANN LANDERS

1. Do you resent it when a person suggests that perhaps you drink too much?

2. Have you ever tried to get in extra drinks at a social affair . . . more than the other guests are getting?

3. Have you taken a morning drink this past year — "just a picker-upper" because you felt the need for something to get you going?

4. Has your drinking created problems at home with your spouse?

5. Have you ever taken a drink just before you left the house to attend an affair where you knew cocktails would be served?

6. Have you ever tried to stop drinking for a specified period of time and fallen short of your goal?

7. Do you envy people who do not drink at all . . . or those who seem to be able to drink less than you and quit for the night?

8. Do you find yourself being reminded of things you said — things you cannot remember because you were drinking?

9. Despite existing evidence do you keep insisting that you can stop drinking any time you feel like it? — RICHMOND READER.

DEAR RICH: Thanks for the list. I'll bet millions of readers took the test. Those who flunked should consider what they are doing to the lives of the people around them if they are not sufficiently concerned about what they are doing to themselves.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter from the beautiful, intelligent woman who was married to a drunk had a familiar ring to it. I, too, was beautiful and intelligent — or so everyone said. I made the mistake of marrying a lush, too. Whenever I kicked him out I always took him back — "for the sake of the children." Who was I kidding? My children needed a drunken father like they needed a hole in the head.

We had no social life because the only people who will put up with a drunk are other drunks. The children often went to school exhausted and nervous from lack of sleep. Their father frequently stalked the house, ranting and raving, until 5 o'clock in the morning.

I stayed with that miserable man for 15 years. I kept telling myself he was a sick man and he needed me. One day I had to admit I was sicker than he was or I wouldn't put up with his lying and cheating. A woman has to be crazy to let her husband squander his paycheque when their children need shoes and milk.

I don't know why it took me so long to get smart (or should I say well) but I thank my lucky stars I finally made it. I hope you will print my letter for the benefit of other women who are back where I was 20 years ago. Now is the time to use your famous line, Ann. Tell them to wake up and smell the coffee. — SLOW LEARNER.

DEAR SLOW: Thanks for your letter. There's a heap o'lesson here. I hope the student pays close attention.

DEAR MRS. K. W.: Do not go to school. From the way you started your letter to me I'm afraid of what you might call the teacher. A confrontation could create additional problems for your son and I suspect he has enough problems now.

Tell the boy he must go to bed at midnight — finished or not. And, if you will permit old Vinegar Veins to express an opinion, I have a hunch your son is keeping these crazy hours because he knows it bugs you.

Observer Editor to Speak

The ninth annual Presbyterial of the United Church Women is to be held this year in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville on Thursday Feb. 11 and those in attendance will be privileged to hear as guest speaker Dr. A. C. Forest of Toronto.

This outstanding speaker is editor of the United Church Observer, a position he has held since 1955. As theme for the meeting is Responsible Communication it is most fitting to have Dr. Forest as speaker at this time. He is also an ordained minister whose last parish was First United Church, Port Credit. Also a world traveller, he was in Rome for Vatican II, Geneva for the World Council of Churches, and spent a year in the Middle East.

Dr. Forest who will speak in the morning has been much in the news in the past months because of his articles on the Arab-Israeli problems.

In the afternoon there will be a skit by the Mount Pleasant UCW of the Rawdon charge. Following this the audience will be asked to participate.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

REDNERSVILLE WI

REDNERSVILLE — Mrs. H. Montgomery was hostess for the January meeting of the Rednersville Women's Institute and members were welcomed by president Mrs. W. Pulver who also expressed thanks to all who had assisted at the quilting and potluck dinner held on a previous date.

A short business period followed at which time the secretary's report was given by Mrs. A. Cairns followed by the reading of a report regarding the Institute's foster child and a letter received from him. There was some discussion on the senior and short courses ,also the food forum. A report on the district executive meeting was given by Mrs. E. Onderdonk.

The program in charge of Mrs. R. Wetherall was based on the topic "Safety" and with the help of posters, Mrs. G. Townsend showed the various traffic symbols, stop, warning, yield of highway signs and dealt with the new hazardous products act that requires certain household products to be labelled using identifying symbols. Four main hazards are poison, flammable, explosive and corrosive. Some in fact will require symbols with a warning and the danger. First aid treatment is also to appear on the labels. Slides on these symbols were shown by Mrs. Montgomery.

To conclude the program a piano solo was rendered by Miss Caroline Montgomery, current events were given by Mrs. C. Smith and Mrs. A. Cairns gave a few helpful hints. An article was also read by Miss M. Peck dealing with snowmobile regulations with Mrs. S. Dawson and Mrs. J. Doxtator giving added comments on the same subject.

Another quilting and potluck dinner is to be held in the Albury Community Hall on Feb. 18.

Lunch and a social hour closed the meeting.

"UNDER GLASS" LOOK — Suzanne Cornell, a partner in Classic Handbags, displays some of the Spring handbags in Canadian leathers. Included in the collection are the new reptile "under glass" bags which have a high gloss. (CP Photo)

Suede and Leather Combinations In Spring Handbag Display

TORONTO (CP) — "This must be the most beautiful handbag season in many a year.

For one thing, there is great interest and beauty in Canadian leathers. Suede is back. Animal or reptile prints now come "under glass"—with a high glossy look. The latest is ostrich print.

A new importance appears in leather-and-suede or fabric combinations, as John Hort's lilac ostrich print handbag with suede flap-pouch in matching color. Or there may be tone on tone in one type of leather.

The spring colors are rich and vibrant. Black is back. Classic Handbags of Toronto is showing 17 colors, including white and black, in kid "under glass," with the small lizard and cobra prints more important than the larger grains. One classic style in a glossy cobra print has a small change purse on the outside.

Owners of Classic are Ervin and Suzanne Cornell, both Hungarians. Ervin had his own factory and retail shop in Budapest before coming to Toronto in 1957. He then worked with a handbag firm before opening his own in 1965. Suzanne came here via England in 1958.

For spring, besides the kid "under glass," they are showing several styles in suede, as lavender in a square shape with a two-pockets flap. In the tone-on-tone category are several styles in winter white, taupe or red combined with another color.

Also in Toronto and also Hungarians are the Horts, John and Daisy. They started their factory in 1962. Arriving in Toronto in 1951, John worked in a factory to learn English and then was a salesman on the road for ladies sportswear and handbags. Then he became an importer.

Mrs. Hort was a designer in Budapest and still does some creative work. But their chief designer is another Hungarian, Leslie Fusel. He had worked on high-class alligator and reptile handbags until he came to Canada in 1956.

"Ostrich print is important for spring," says Mr. Hort. "It comes in all colors and is especially beautiful in the under glass gloss."

The Horts are also introducing tie-dye suede, a new development in Canadian leathers. One is smudged blues and pinks with a laced flap and wooden ring accents. There's also an envelope style in reversible brown suede, smooth on one side, rough on the other. For travellers, an overnight-size handbag in red leather has striped velvet ends.

Intended to be carried by both women and men is an elongated over-shoulder bag with two big outside pockets. It comes in either deep chocolate brown antique leather, or in canvas, jute-edged.

Many of the spring bags now carry the John Hort name in one corner, the first Canadian signature handbags.

In Montreal are the Fenster brothers. Sol is president of their Mastercraft Leathergoods and Henry is the designer After arrival from Poland, they set up their factory some 18 years ago.

For spring they are promoting a longuette style, already much in demand for both domestic and export trade. Shoulder-strap bags continue popular although straps are shorter. Considerable crinkle patent leather is being used in a wide range of colors, including the fashion color, mauve. Suedes, of course, come in all styles. Mastercraft also likes lizard "under glass."

Mothers Should Compare Notes

By DORIS CLARK

What is the answer to the silk stocking argument? Now we have pre-teens wanting to wear the sheerest of sheers to school.

Besides the too-sophisticated aspect, mothers don't want daughters' knees to freeze. The light wool or cotton leotards provide at least some protection against the wintry winds.

Trouble is, a few girls wear the silk ones and the others want them. Mothers should get together about such issues. It is embarrassing for daughters to have to wear the unattractive sensible things which just aren't being worn by their friends.

• • •

Dear Doris: Some months ago I met a man in Florida. I was a lonely widow and I guess an easy mark. I thought I was a good judge of men but I was fooled. Hen ran up bills and kept on buying more and my money helped to pay his accounts. I was weary of having no money left each month.

I am on my own now and at 70 have gone to work again. I feel relieved to be free of the burden. He fancies every woman admires him. He was like a sort of sex - sick man and he is 76, no less..

Now he is lying to my friends about me. Widows, beware! — Wiser Now — I Hope

Dear Wiser: Sorry. Perhaps you had one of those reliable husbands who caused you to trust and enjoy life and people to the point where a smoothie could put himself across. Devils don't always wear horns.

Glad you are working. Was it an unmixed curse for this parasite to drain your resources and make you into a self-supporting, going concern once more?

• • •

Dear Doris: I am sending my quilt pattern for a Dutch Girl. I hope it will be of some help because I was very grateful for the help you gave me. — Jil

Dear Quilter: I hope you like this Dutch Girl pattern. A neighbor of mine gave it to me and it looked very nice when finished. —Linda

Dear Doris: If the lady who would like the sun - bonnet boy and girl quilt would write me. I have the pattern ready and waiting to send to her. — E. B.

Dear Doris: The enclosed is a tracing from Little Dutch Girl and Little Dutch Boy quilt. This quilt was made for my husband as a baby and now I am using it on our children's bed.

They love the little figures. Will you please pass this on to Quilter? — Mrs. W. S.

Dear Jil, Linda, E.B., Mrs. W.S., Also Mrs. A.B and several others: Thank you, all of you! We never put out an SOS without a response. Handmade, artistic quilts are treasures now. Your help in preserving such skills is precious.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Economical Green Pea Soup

By MARY MOORE

How am I doing? Are you getting fed up with my economics? Letters from many of you urge me on. Yesterday one reader described my recipes as "so reasonable". I took it as a good mild compliment.

Meanwhile on the stove was simmering away a big pot of green pea soup flavored with a frozen ham bone from New Year's Sunday dinner.

So if you are going along with my winter economy program, which sacrifices nothing in flavor or esthetic enjoyment, add one pound dried green peas to your grocery list and make

GREEN PEA SOUP
(9-10 cups)

1 lb. green split peas
13 cups cold water—divided
1 med. onion chopped
¼ bay leaf
1 ham bone with a little meat attached (see note)
1 to 1½ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. pepper (optional)

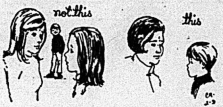
In the soup kettle soak the peas overnight in 4 cups of the cold water, in a cool place.

In the morning add the remaining water, onion, bay leaf, ham bone, salt and pepper (if used) and simmer about 3 hrs. or until peas are reduced to a puree. Remove ham bone and chop any pieces of meat that are too large. The amount of salt in the ham varies so you must taste this for salt and add some if you want it.

NOTE: One of our supermarkets regularly sells ready-to-eat hams, bone in, at 79 cents per pound. So feature a ham for Sunday dinner and use it right down to the marrow bone for this filling nutritious pea soup.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Jane: "You're lucky you don't have a little brother. Teddy makes my life miserable whenever I have company, hanging around and listening to us talk and showing off all the time. My mother lets him get away with everything."

Mother: "Teddy, Jane's friends come to see her just as yours come to see you. You must not hang around the living room when she is entertaining someone unless she asks you to help. And you are to be polite to anyone who comes into this house."

Parents should emphasize the rights of all members of the family — and courtesy to each other's guests is one of the basic rights.

Bessie Plays Same Role as Emmy in Radio

Belleville's radio station CJBQ was awarded the coveted Bessie award last week for excellence in radio advertising — for an ad produced by the continuity department. Lee Jourard, left, veteran announcer and programmer, produces the finished broadcast product. Phil Flagler, host of the daily Farm Show, supplied the mellow voice for the Culligan commercial and aided in the writing. Marcia Wildgen, a full-time advertising writer and Dick Lovering, ad-writer and host of the daily Country and Western program, play an important part in preparing the finished product.

CJBQ Commercial Wins Award

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Radio and television commercials are many and varied. They range from something that gets turned off when it is broadcast to a touch of humor that allows the listener to remember the product.

Careful planning goes into the production of every one of these broadcast ads. Agencies handle national and some local sales pitches but the neighborhood radio and television stations provide the listener with most of those brief little interruptions which attempt to put across the virtues of anything from suds to used cars.

The best - remembered commercials; the ones that have a catcry saying or maybe the one with a mum-able jingle, are the ultimate goal of the continuity department.

Excellence in this field has been honored for the past eight years by a judging panel at the Radio Commercials Festival.

Belleville radio station CJBQ this year brought home Bessie . . . the festival's official trophy in recognition of broadcast commercial excellence.

This is the first Bessie award for the station; honorable mention was received once before.

The entry, one of 760 submitted from all across Canada was a 60-second' blurb for "Pollution Solution Culligan Water Conditioning Service" with the mellow voice of veteran announcer Phil Flagler explaining the cleaner water available through the Culligan water softener, which allows use of soap instead of detergent.

The actual commercial involved use of a national musical introduction, followed by local copy written at CJBQ with the co-operation of the firm purchasing the air time.

"The commercial has to have been used . . . not just created for the festival," Mr. Flagler commented.

"Our job is to take information, plus their knowledge and shape it into radio terms to reach the audience with some sense."

Mr. Flagler, who broadcasts the daily Farm Show, explained that the award-winning commercial was produced utilizing joint co-operation in the advertising department.

Writer Marcia Wildgen, who joined the station in 1951, works closely with Dick Lovering, Town and Country broadcaster, who joined CJBQ in 1966 as an announcer-ad writer.

Although Mr. Flagler writes some of his own commercials, the ad department produces the bulk.

In charge of production, Lee Jourard, 21-year veteran of the Belleville station, records the announcer's broadcast material and then "marries" the words to music introductions, or sound effects backgrounds.

A great number of the broadcast advertising is straight - forward; simple messages, or agency - produced material that requires a minimum of time compared to the more complicated, station - produced "creative image" commercials.

Whereas more than 100 of the simpler ads may be produced in a week, only 20 of the more difficult ads are recorded, on an average.

The recording takes place during an active day at the radio station; most voice-recorded messages contained on master tapes.

Mr. Jourard then blends the message with the required material and the finished product is transferred to a large cartridge, ready for playing during regular program time.

The shining Bessie was awarded to CJBQ in the national category. Three divisions; local retail, public service and institutional and national product commercials, form the basis for judging.

"Coincidentally, this was the only one of seven we entered, that contained a national message," concluded Mr. Flagler, who joined the station in 1947 after completing training at the famous, but long-gone Lorne Greene Radio Academy.

"Hey . . . Culligan Man!"

Revised Contract Debated

LONDON (Reuter) — A complete new contract with the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. appeared today to be the only way to save the Rolls-Royce RB-211 jet engine.

"If the project is to continue there must be a completely new arrangement," Anthony Barber, chancellor of the exchequer, told the House of Commons Monday night.

The House approved the Conservative government's plans to nationalize parts of the giant company, which collapsed Friday.

The crisis came after Rolls-Royce found it could not meet the terms of a contract to supply the RB-211 engine for the Lockheed tristar airbus.

Fred Corfield, minister of aviation supply, told the Commons that he does not believe that continuance of the engine is essential to keep Britain in the air engine big league.

A report in The Times said Prime Minister Edward Heath was not interested in any British or joint Anglo-American rescue project.

The report said Heath and his colleagues are not flinching from the certain prospect of a sharp increase in unemployment, as the failure of Rolls-Royce sends repercussions throughout British industry.

A Rolls-Royce subcontractor cut 8,000 workers to three-day weeks today, the first major labor impact from the collapse of the huge British aero-engine and automobile empire.

Joseph Lucas Co., maker of gas turbine equipment for the RB-211, announced the work cut. Layoffs for up to 25 per cent of the Lucas labor force were reported likely.

The Rolls debacle, which is expected to lead to idleness for 20,000 to 35,000 Rolls workers, came when the January jobless total reached 690,000, three per cent of the British labor force. This is high for Britain.

Senator Is Opposed To Lockheed Support

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Senator William Proxmire said today he opposes federal financial support for the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to retain Rolls-Royce engines for its trijet airbus.

The chairman of the joint Senate-House of Representatives economic committee said congressional backing for a renegotiated Lockheed contract with Rolls-Royce, perhaps through a government-guaranteed bank loan, would mean aiding a foreign company.

"We would be bailing out a foreign corporation," Proxmire said. "Where the hell do we stopp"

Because of soaring costs on the Rolls-Royce RB-211 engines, the British government has said the insolvent Rolls company cannot deliver them at the contract price.

But the U.S. government has indicated willingness to help with the extra costs—about $240 million—if Lockheed can raise the rest.

Although the ingredients of a possible deal to continue the transatlantic link between Lockheed and Rolls-Royce have not been disclosed, there has been speculation that the U.S. might be asked to guarantee a further private bank loan to Lockheed, or at least nudge the banks along.

The White House said Monday that the government is watching the Lockheed-Rolls problem closely, but declined to go beyond that.

The Earl of Cromer, Britain's new ambassador to the U.S., touched on the Rolls problem with President Nixon Monday when presenting his credentials, but sources declined to say whether the president reaffirmed his previous sympathetic attitude.

His Master's Voice

Swinger, a stray impounded at the Picton Animal Hospital, has cocked an ear for his owner's voice as he waits for bail. The young golden retriever has gone up for adoption by a dog lover who enjoys the outdoors.

Friendly Retriever Faces Death Penalty

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — Swinger, a youthful golden retriever, has a bone to pick with the salesman who said "the customer is always right."

When this tail-wagging canine staged a shopping spree in a Picton five and dime store, an employee suggested he take his trade elsewhere.

Swinger demanded a shopper's preogative in growling over prices and refused to leave. Pursued by an irate sales staff, Swinger managed to evade capture until a member of the Picton police department was called to the scene. The dog was taken into police custody and lodged in the town pound.

After more than a week in stir, the retriever is still waiting for bail. Since the dog wore no collar with a tag at the time of his arrest, his owner cannot be contacted. If Swinger is not claimed within the next few days, the veterinarian who operates the pound will be obligated to destroy the affectionate stray.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis explained yesterday that there is annual publication of a municipal bylaw prohibiting dogs to run at large. When the bylaw is ignored, Picton police answer complaints by attempting to catch the offenders. Stray dogs picked up following such complaints are taken to the Picton Animal Hospital, Main Street East where they are kept for several days before being destroyed.

Mr. Jarvis noted that all dogs wearing tags can be traced to their owners and often this is the happy ending of shaggy dog stories. He commented that many animals, however, seem homeless and are destroyed at the close of the specified waiting period. The clerk added that the town of Picton receives a monthly statement of from $30 to $40 for the care and humane destruction of delinquent dogs. He estimated that the town pays $11 for each animal kept at the pound. This cost figure includes board and cost of destruction.

Mr. Jarvis agreed that some Picton residents may be unaware that the Picton Animal Hospital serves as the local pound. For this reason owners searching for lost pets could fail to contact this animal care centre.

All unclaimed dogs left at the animal hospital are not destroyed. Some of them are adopted by persons happy to provide homes for unwanted or unclaimed pets.

Although many of the strays are mutts, some of these dogs show good breeding. Swinger's obvious bloodlines should make him a stray worthy of a hunter's adoption.

His cell-mate, Sam, is a young black and tan hound also a good choice for a sportsman. Sam became notorious when he successfully escaped capture for more than three months. He was finally nabbed by the authorities as he tarried outside a supermarket. Both Swinger and Sam are convinced that indeed, it is a dog's life when playing it loose can demand a death penalty.

Computerized Report Cards For Prince Edward County

Computerized report cards have been introduced into the Prince Edward County school system.

School principal Paul Byrd last night told Prince Edward trustees that the first computerized report cards were distributed during the fall term.

He added that 160 pupils obtained first class honors with 20 percent of them coming from grade 13.

He explained that transportation presents a major problem in computerized report cards.

The first report cards were taken from Picton to Belleville and finally to Toronto for processing.

Mr. Byrd added that through error they were delayed in Whitby for several days.

The problem, in his opinion, possibly can be alleviated by future use of a computer at Loyalist College.

He feels that in a few years the school will agree to process cards for this district.

He noted that transportation and time costs would be reduced if this plan was implemented.

The principal also discussed student enrolment stating that with 1,372 students at the moment and with 1,460 students in the elementary schools coming up that "this means we will be bursting at the seams, especially for ordinary classes, art and typing."

Mr. Byrd described art and typing as the most rapidly growing classes in his school.

Drop-out, Drop-back-in School Plan Is Favored by High School Principal

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Educatin isn't for everyone, and many young people today are expected to absorb more of it than is good for them.

The opinion of a high school drop-out? Or a disgruntled elderly anti-intellectual?

Neither.

Teachers and school administrators are becoming increasingly concerned with educational over-kill.

A solid core of education professionals are taking the view that we are over - educating many young people and using schooling as a one-shot cure-all for the social and economic ills of society.

Centennial Secondary School principal W. J. Musgrove, is a spokesman for the new viewpoint.

"Schools shouldn't be institutions where people are kept for five years after they turn 14 to prevent their entering the labor market," he says. "It is the attitude of management and labor, but especially labor, that keeps adolescents from opting out of school when they've had enough. If labor takes that attitude, it must be prepared to pay for it through increased school taxes."

"There is too much controlling of entry into professions, trades and skills in order to maintain a shortage of workers," he declares.

Mr. Musgrove is one of a growing number of school administrators who would like to see dropping in and out of school become legal and acceptable.

Not because those who would drop out (and back in) under such a program can't learn, or have exhausted all that schools can give them.

But because the present setup in Ontario schools ignores the basic individuality of students, he says.

"Educators are talking out of both sides of their mouths," says Mr. Musgrove flatly.

"We're telling the student that he should be an individual and that his school experiences is an enlarging, not a confining experience. But the law says he must go to school until he's 16. There's no alternative. So teachers are supposed to make school so interesting all students will love to attend."

This is impossible, the principal asserts. Increasingly, teachers are encountering a type of student Mr. Musgrve defines as "a spirited kid, who can't stand the confinement and feels fenced in at school."

Many such students miss out on developing to their full potential because of this adolescent restlessness. They "tune out and turn off" in the classroom and leave as soon as they reach 16.

The answer is to let such a student drop out when his restlessness dictates, and drop in again when it abates after exposure to a spell in the working world.

"Extended work experience program" is the label educators put on a drop-out-and-in-again scheme.

Under the program, a student could leave school whenever he gets too fed up to continue. When he found he needed more academic work to cope with his job or get a promotion, he could return to school.

The important factor in the program would be continuing contact between the student and his school, especially its guidance department. Through the guidance department the student's work experience could be supervised and an academic program set up to meet his needs when he returns to school.

But three powerful groups work against such a program — parents, the public in general, and labor in particular.

"Parents send their kids to school to get training for a job, to be told how to behave and to be kept out of trouble," says Mr. Musgrove. "They want us to continue to keep them under control."

"Society puts a stigma on the drop-out and labels him a failure. Most important, labor wants to keep students in school as long as possible and off the job market."

Industry is shrugging off its job - training responsibility, the principal says. Apprenticeship must come back, because no institution can provide the variety of skill training needed today.

Shops in secondary school technical departments are becoming too sophisticated, and far too expensive to set up and operate, Mr. Musgrove says, as they try to cope with training every student in every conceivable skill.

A city industrialist agrees with Mr. Musgrove up to a point.

But apprenticeship in industry won't come back, he says. Industry can't afford it, and skill training will have to be concentrated in the community colleges.

Furthermore, each of Ontario's 19 community colleges should specialize in teaching one job skill.

"It's cheaper to pay a student's board and lodging in the college of his choice than to try to set up shops for every skill at every college," he says.

On the subject of secondary school shops and their equipment, the industrial executive agrees with Mr. Musgrove.

"Secondary school technical departments were not set up originally to train students in a marketable skill," he says. "They were set up to lull them into learning. The idea was to keep the kid interested by letting him tear down a car, then pump a little learning into him when he wasn't looking."

The whole thing went wrong, in this man's opinion, because of the type of teacher who went into vocational education.

"They pervert the whole thing and think they are there to teach kids how to fix cars," this man says.

But in a period of job shortages and high unemployment, what work can the drop out find to do?

"Labor and management must create jobs in the community, not sit back and expect Ottawa and Toronto to do it," Mr. Musgrove says.

"Industrialists and businessmen must sit down and brainstorm to come up with jobs that can be done on a custom basis in the community," he says.

Technology doesn't displace people, the principal asserts. There is still room for the crafts, and for people who can do custom work and don't need a full salary for doing it. This takes in the adolescent still living at home and the retired person who wants to keep busy on a part-time basis.

But first, someone must define the custom work needed in the community and sort out the craftsmen capable to doing each job.

Not every adolescent would be out looking for a job if school attendance were made optional.

"About 50 to 60 per cent of our school population would never opt out," says Mr. Musgrove, "Because it's more comfortable for most students to stay in."

A high proportion of those remaining would be girls, he indicated.

Female students don't go through the same pangs of restlessness that seem to afflict males of the same age.

"Girls are more concerned with pleasing adults, maybe because they are thrown in with their mothers more," observes Mr. Musgrove. "Boys let their natural feelings out; girls keep them concealed."

Social involvement develops to a greater extent in teenaged girls then it does in boys and acts as "a sort of compensation" for any restrictions they might smart under as a result of staying in school.

Students' Painting Presented to Board

Two Prince Edward Collegiate art students last night presented Prince Edward County school trustees with a painting to decorate the walls of their Bloomfield board room.

The art piece, created by Robert Pols in collaboration with a fellow grade eleven student William Hedger, depicts Buddha in meditation.

Painted in vivid shades of red, blue, orange and green, the buddha was portrayed through special processing on masonite.

The picture was chosen from ten others for presentation to the board members.

PECI principal, Paul Byrd last night termed the painting a sample of "the marvelous work" done in the school's art classes.

He added that two full-time art teachers are employed and interest in the course is growing rapidly.

'Stand Pat' School Budget Announced

A "stand pat" budget of $20,115,000 for 1971 operations of the Hastings county board of education was released to trustees last night.

The preliminary estimate is $2,210,000 more than the $17,905,000 budget for 1970.

It represents an increase of 12.3 per cent over 1970, considerably less than the 20.1 per cent increase from 1967 to 1970.

Business administrator Kenneth Wormald told trustees that the $2,210,000 increase is completely absorbed "by commitments already made or increases in costs which we cannot control".

Of the increase, still in the tentative estimate stage, $1,480,000 will be eaten up by fixed teachers' salary increases. Another $165,000 will be needed to cover staff changes, including the teachers required for the new Bayside Secondary School due to open next September.

The remainder of the budget increase will go for fringe benefit costs, instructional supplies for new students due to increased enrolments, inflation in costs of plant and general supplies, transportation contracts and debt charges.

Director of education Eric Runacres told trustees "Hastings will stand pat under the guidelines" (laid down by the minister of education to control educational spending).

"We will be able to survive this year without any cutbacks," he said. "Many boards have had to cut back drastically."

However, he said the board would not be able to extend services in several areas, including preventive plant maintenance, special education, audio - visual aids and psychological services.

No estimate of the amounts to be received from grants and from local tax levies could be given to trustees because the 1971 grant regulations have not yet been received.

In 1970, the province of Ontario paid 68 per cent of the total cost of education in Hastings county and the remainder came from property tax levies.

Mr. Wormald estimated that the per-pupil costs for 1971 in county elementary schools would be $526 and in secondary schools about $1,040.

One result of the budget limitations will be a ceiling on the allotment for classroom supplies.

"No per-pupil increase will be made this year for supplies, although the cost of supplies is expected to increase by five per cent this year," Mr. Runacres told the board.

Mrs. Jean Hutchison of Trenton protested the budget ceilings.

"We cut back last year, and didn't do what we wanted to do in extending special services, she said.

Ralph Weaver of Trenton warned that "we'll have to catch up eventually", especially in plant maintenance, "due to lack of a good preventive maintenance program".

MacDonald Smith of Belleville asked the director if it were true that former boards had neglected maintenance.

"Yes," replied Mr. Runacres, "We inherited a lack of commitment in terms of plant maintenance."

He said one of the reasons school costs were high in Hastings was the increased retention rate in the seven county high schools.

"In 1955, about 46 per cent of those who could be in high schools in the province stayed there," said the director. "Last year the retention rate was 75 per cent across the province. In Hastings county we expect it tops that — maybe it reached 85 per cent retention."

Trustees also learned that not all the 1970 revenue has been received from the province. Ontario has paid about 94 per cent of the 1970 grants so far.

"Bill Davis (the education minister) will see that it is paid," remarked Everett Fairman.

"If there is any left over from Loyalist he will," retorted Mrs. Hutchison.

Snowmobile Stolen Sunday

SHANNONVILLE (Staff) — A snowmobile valued at $1,000 was reported stolen from outside of the Wayside Inn here, early Sunday morning.

Edward Hayter of Shannonville was visiting the establishment at the time of the disappearance of his 1970 Arctic Cat.

Constable Brian Skinner of the Belleville OPP has reported no recovery of the machine as yet.

Variety of Signs Explained

A Herchimer Ave. man has been commended by the city traffic and light committee for a letter questioning the reasoning for different "yield" or "stop" regulations at three intersections in Belleville.

Paul Embury, 212 Herchimer, wrote to the committee questioning regulations at Cannifton Road and College, at Moira and North Front, and also at Moira and Coleman Streets.

He noted that access lanes at each of the three intersections were similar yet one called for motorists to "yield" only; at another there was a "stop" sign, while at still another there were no signs.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell stated, however, that there was reasoning for the different conditions at the intersections in question.

He said the "stop" sign at the Cannifton Road-College intersection access lane had been placed bacause of the many school children who use the roadway on their way to and from school.

The "yield" sign at the North Front — Moira intersection was to speed up the clearance of traffic from North Front Street.

At the third intersection at Moira and Coleman, the access lane is controlled by a separate traffic signal head and therefore no other signs are required.

All the regulatory signs at the three intersections had been approved by the highways department, Mr. Purcell said.

At the same time Mr. Purcell complimented Mr. Embury for his interest.

Committee members recommended that a letter be forwarded to Mr. Embury setting out the reasons for the different regulations at the apparently similar intersections, while Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie said he would make a personal explanation.

Street Widening Will Move Pumps

The proposed widening of North Front Street south of Bell Boulevard to provide for a left turn lane into the new Quinte Mall, will necessitate re-location of gasoline pumps at Elliott Motors.

Yesterday Bryce Philp, vice-president of Elliott Motors, along with Texaco Oil representatives appeared before the city traffic and light committee protesting the road widening plans which apparently eliminated two of the present three entrances to their property.

Limitation to only one entrance on North Front street would be ruinous to business, they contended.

The delegation asked that the present three entrances be maintained in the street widenin program.

But as it turned out the protest was all the result of a misunderstanding.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell told the delegation that as far as he was concerned there was no reason that their request for three entrances could not be granted.

And traffic committee member Alderman Jack Ireland held the same views.

The alderman said the committee would want to work hand in hand with existing business.

And to prove this, committee members wondered about relocation of Elliott's gasoline pumps and who would bear the cost.

To this, city manager James Reynolds noted that someone would have to pay for the relocation. Committee chairman Alderman Arthur Keegan suggested that if the relocation of the pumps was at the request of the city, then the municipality should pay.

"It should be considered as part of the over-all cost of the street widening project," he said.

Alderman E. A. Orr indicated his sympathies were with Elliotts, stating that it was unfortunate the misunderstanding had arisen.

With the relocation of the present pumps to be enforced by street widening, Elliotts now plan installations of pumps facing both on North Front Street and Bell Boulevard and also construction of an automatic car wash to the west of their present garage facility.

Damage to the truck was estimated at $650; there was no damage reported to the train engine.

The failure of last year's national championship to draw more than three or four entries for the Formula A competition resulted in the decision to switch to Formula B.

Ali Has One Edge Over Joe Frazier

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali already has one official edge over Joe Frazier for their heavy-weight title fight — mouth size.

John Condon, director of public relations for boxing at Madison Square Garden, where the fight will be held March 8, confirmed Ali's advantage Monday with these figures.

"For Ali, the figures are: Mouth closed — six inches; mouth open, or expanded — 11 inches. For Frazier: Mouth closed — five inches; mouth open — 8½ inches," Condon reported.

The measurements were taken at the suggestion of Shirley Povich of the Washington Post, who said the new measurement should be added to the tale of the tape for this fight because of the great amount of bragging both fighters have done regarding the match.

Just Like Old Times

There may be a few grey temples, but these faces are still recognizable as former National Hockey League performers who will be playing a Belleville exhibition Friday, Feb. 26 to benefit the city's OMHA and Fairways Junior B entries. The Old-timers' lineup includes, from left, Jack Hamilton, Ivan Walmsley, Bob Goldham, Harry Pidherny, Murray Henderson, Bob Robertson, Pete Conacher, Sid Smith, and manager Art Smith. Advance tickets are $1 for adults, with all children's admissions selling for 50 cents.

No NHL Records Beyond Reach Of New Breed of Sharpshooter

MONTREAL (CP) — National Hockey League records, which a few years ago appeared safer, are falling to league sharpshooters with increasing regularity this season.

Phil Esposito, Boston Bruins centre, stands today as the first player to score more than 100 points in two different seasons.

Left winger Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks has tied former Montreal Canadien great, Maurice (Rocket) Richard, as runner-up to Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings in all-time goal-scoring.

Hull has also equalled the Rocket's record of 26 regular-season three-goal games.

Bobby Orr of Boston, the only defenceman ever to win the scoring title, has moved to within 14 points of his second straight 100-points-plus season.

Until two seasons ago, when Esposito won the scoring title with 126 points on 49 goals and 77 assists, no player had cracked the 100-point barrier. That same season Bobby Hull and Howe also passed the 100-point mark.

Last season, Orr won the title with 120 points, an amazing feat considering that no defenceman had gained more than 59 points in a season before Orr began his assault on the records.

Today Esposito has 101 points, including a league-leading 46 goals.

Orr is second with 86 points, and leads in assists with 62.

Bobby Hull is fifth with 69 points, including 34 goals, second-high in the league. His career total is 544 goals in 934 games. Richard retired after the 1959 season with the same number of goals in 978 regular-season contests.

Howe remains the all-time leader with 781 goals in 1,666 games.

When the Rocket retired, he was the only player who had scored 500 regular-season goals.

Jean Beliveau, Canadiens veteran centre and captain, expects to join the other three this season. He now has 497 goals in 1,099 games.

Meanwhile, the battle for top goaltending honors continues with only one-hundredth of a goal separating the two leaders.

Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure of New York Rangers have a combined goals-against average of 2.30, followed by Tony Esposito and Gerry Desjardins of Chicago at 2.31. Esposito leads in shutouts with five.

Rangers on Spot In Hostile Boston

The pressure will be on New York Rangers tonight when they go into Boston for another "four-point" game against the Bruins in the battle for the National Hockey League East Division lead.

A win for the Rangers could put them within five points of the leading Bruins, but a loss would leave them nine points back and hard-pressed to regain a challenging position with only two months left in the schedule.

The key encounter at Boston is one of four games tonight—busiest Tuesday night yet in the current season.

At Montreal, the Canadiens will be fighting to widen their lead over Toronto Maple Leafs in the battle for third place in the East when they play host to Pittsburgh Penguins.

At the same time the Leafs, now just four points behind Montreal, hope to close the gap when they face the Blues in St. Louis.

In the other game at Vancouver, Buffalo Sabres meet the Canucks.

The Rangers were in a neck-and-neck battle with the Bruins for most of the first half of the schedule but have slowly dropped behind. In their last head-on encounter with the Bruins Jan. 27 in New York, the Rangers were lucky to manage a 2-2 tie.

They go into Boston tonight without the services of goalie Ed Giacomin, who will stay at home to nurse a case of the flu.

The Rangers called up Peter McDuffe from Omaha in the Central Hockey League Monday to back up their other regular netminder, Gilles Villemure.

The Vancouver contest could see the first appearance in a Canucks' uniform of right winger Bob Schmautz, who was purchased from Seattle Totems of the Western League.

Schmautz, a 25-year old Saskatoon native, has previous NHL experience with Chicago Black Hawks during the 1967-68 and 68-69 seasons.

In Chicago, Black Hawks' coach Billy Reay said he expects Bobby Hull to report for practice today after x-rays showed the left winger suffered no broken bones when he piled into the boards during a game Sunday night.

Hull escaped with only a badly-bruised right hip and elbow.

London to Bid At CFL Session

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League annual meeting opens here today with the college draft, proposed rule changes and a franchise bid from London, Ont., highlighting the week-long discussions.

The league will be presented with numerous proposed rule changes studied last month by the CFL rules committee and general managers from the nine teams at a meeting in Houston, Tex.

Included among the suggested changes is downgrading the clipping penalty from a deed of unnecessary roughness to a technical foul, and calling "dead" a kicked ball that strikes the goal post or crossbar in flight and rebounds into field of play.

Representatives of a London group are expected to make a formal bid to the CFL for a franchise. The CFL may also receive a bid from Halifax.

League officials will hear commissioner Jake Gaudaur's proposal for a full interlocking schedule.

In the college draft are standouts such as Bob Kraemer, all-star quarterback of the national champion University of Manitoba Bisons, Paul Paddon of the University of Ottawa, voted the most valuable player in the country, and Heino Lilles of Queen's University.

League officials will meet with representatives of the Canadian Football League Players' Association and attempt to iron out any conflicts that could interrupt fall training camps.

No Racism in Montreal

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be no racial discrimination at the Summer Olympics in Montreal in 1976, Gaston Isabelle, parliamentary secretary to Health Minister John Munro said Monday.

Mr. Isabelle said during a Commons adjournment debate that Montreal had "implicitly accepted" the International Olympic Committee's opposition to racial discrimination when the city applied for the Games.

He was replying to John Skoberg (NDP-Moose Jaw) who said Canada should state clearly that it will not tolerate discrimination at the 1976 Olympics.

Two-buck Bettor Gets Richer Break

TORONTO (CP) — The Jockey Club took steps Monday to enhance the two-buck bettor's chances of getting rich and cut down his prospects of getting even.

E. P. Taylor, chairman of the club's board of directors, announced that the exactor, in which the punter attempts to pick the first two horses in order of finish, will be offered daily in the last seven races on the nine-race card at Jockey Club tracks, subject to amendment of federal agriculture department regulations.

Exactors, which had previously applied to only two races daily, now would apply to all races except the first two, which are subject to the daily double. That is the combination in which a bettor must pick the winners of two races to cash his ticket.

At the same time, The Jockey Club abolished show betting, the wager that pays off when a horse finishes third.

In future, at the club's thoroughbred and standardbred tracks, you can bet to win or place.

In a field of seven or under, a place ticket pays off if your horse finishes first or second. In a field of eight or more, it can also be cashed on a third-place horse.

Tote Board Too Small

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There was just the simple announcement over the public address system at the New Orleans Fair Grounds that a $2 bet had just paid off $25,527.

They had to announce it over the loudspeaker because they can't fit a sum like $25,257 into the flashing lights on the tote board.

The collective gasp from the crowd of 7,000 was a mixture of astonishment, delight and envy.

"I was so shocked all I could think about was getting home," said Calvin McManus, a 21-year-old navy veteran of Vietnam who now works as a bus boy in a New Orleans restaurant. He held the lone winning ticket Monday.

McManus arrived at the horse race track "with only $10 to bet and that $2 on the exacta was my first bet of the day."

The first exacta was the fourth race. To win an exacta, the bettor must pick the winner and runner-up.

McManus was the only one at the track who managed to turn that trick in the fourth race.

For one thing, Mae W. S., the horse he picked to win, was such a long shot she paid $281.60.

The Rocket still has the last laugh.

While Hulls, Espositos, and Orrs have National Hockey League statistician Ron Andrews working into the wee hours, there is still one record that remains safe for at least one more NHL semester.

Fiery Maurice Richard solaced himself with his 50 goals in 50 games feat when modern-era snipers began taking runs at the half-century mark. The Rocket scoffed when fellow Montreal alumnus Bernie Geoffrion produced the NHL's second 50-goal season in 1960-61.

As any bubble-gum carder knows, Richard's 50 were scored in 50 games in 1944-45. Geoffrion took 64 games. The only other member of the exclusive club to this second in time — Bob Hull — has had 50, 54, 52, and 58 seasons, but all in 65 games or more.

Point Anne's prime puck-chaser this weekend took dead aim on two more Richard records by tying the Rocket's 26 lifetime "hat trick" total, and matching his 544-goal output. Hull got his in 934 games, Richard in 978.

Meanwhile Detroit's Gordie Howe, a more permanent fixture than the Olympia ice plant, is at 781 and not looking back.

Richard must have been a bit uneasy in recent weeks when Boston's Phil Esposito gave the "50-in-50" the old Sault Ste. Marie try. Lanky Phil was close to a goal-a-game pace after 40 games, but had to settle for 46 after 50.

He has 49 now, and should pass Hull's 58 regular-season record.

What is annoying to fans of the game is that, should Esposito score 60 goals, there will still be those who point to Richard's 50-in-50 as THE scoring standard.

The argument just can't be settled. Some say Richard's feat was easy to achieve in a league in which the war years spread talent thinly. Others say today's NHL expansion spreads talent more thinly and makes plus-50 goal seasons a snap.

Until someone gets 51-in-50 not everyone will be satisfied, especially the Rocket.

While all the hoopla about who's most is the most continues, debonaire Jean Beliveau sits calmly on the sidelines, far from the madding crowd.

You see, Big Jean's 47 goals in the 1955-56 schedule, and dozen more in ten subsequent playoff games gave him 59 goals, DEFINITELY more than any other National Hockey League player ever put together in a year's work.

Speaking of near-anonymous leaders, guess which NHL goalkeeper currently sports the best goals-against average?

Wrong!

It's Toronto's amazing Jacques Plante. The 42-year-old sweater-knitter from Shawinigan enjoys a 1.99 mark in 1,809 minutes of action. By comparison, New York's Ed Giacomin is 2.36 for 1,801 minutes.

Gilles Villemure's 2.08 average, however, helps give the Ranger tandem the team lead with a 2.30 aggregate.

That's vital, since the Vezina Trophy goes to the goalie who plays most games for the TEAM allowing fewest goals.

Lions Lend Hand

The Belleville Fairways find it a pleasant change to have the Peterborough Lions on THEIR side in Eastern Ontario Junior B action.

The runaway league leaders captured a 7-2 decision from Cobourg Monday night to eliminate the Cougars from the league play-offs, guaranteeing the Fairways the fourth and final play-off position.

Belleville leads Cobourg by three points with the fifth-place finishers having only one game remaining in their schedule.

The Fairways on the other hand have three games left in regular season play, before they go up against Peterborough in the playoffs.

One Belleville player who will be looking to take advantage of the remaining three contests is centre Danny Lupenette, currently tied with Rick Noves of Peterborough for tenth spot in the league scoring statistics.

Lupenette has counted 18 goals and 19 assists in 27 games to date this year.

Trenton Golden Hawks, who were forced to forfeit weekend games with Kingston and Oshawa because of an acute player shortage will be able to ice a team for their remaining pair of games with Belleville.

The Golden Hawks will be looking for their second win of the season when they play at home to the Fairways Friday night in an 8 p.m. encounter.

Quinte curlers Nina Gault and Ev Spinelli demonstrate some fancy broomwork in The Intelligencer Women's Bonspiel yesterday. Defending champion Jane Sheppard was the only Quinte rink to remain in contention for the top award as out of town entries dominated the first day's action. The competition ends today with the finals beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the Quinte Curling Club.

Sheppard Rink Last Straw

The host Quinte curling club has just one hope of maintaining possession of the Intelligencer's Women's Bonspiel for another year.

That one hope is a strong one, however, as Jane Sheppard's defending champion Quinte rink is one of six foursomes still in contention for The Intelligencer Bonspiel's first event.

Besides Jane Sheppard, members of the Quinte rink include Cathy Brown, Marlene Henderson, and Bev Deacon, the same combination which brought them a win in the 1970 event.

The Sheppard rink defeated Marge Pearce's Napanee foursome and a rink skipped by Wyn Maund of Quinte in its first two games.

Also in contention for the top prize are three rinks from CFB Trenton, skipped by Joe Hope, Lucille Scott and Fran Simpson.

Rounding out the top field after Monday's play is a Picton foursome led by Grace Armstrong and Joan Munroe's Napanee rink.

Six teams are still in contention for the second event title while the remainder of the 24 rinks entered are vying for top honors in the third event.

Play in the finals of The Intelligencer trophy competition will get under way at 7.30 p.m. tonight at the Quinte Curling Club.

Playoff Death Not Sudden For Seniors

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Hockey is one job that doesn't pay overtime, even though that is the most crucial period of a game.

If they don't spend any more money for overtime games, hockey clubs and leagues spend a lot more time than usual in laying out ground rules for it.

Monday night, it was the Ontario Senior A council's turn, and the group laid out its format in the event of tie games arising in the upcoming group playoffs.

Overtime games in the senior league's regular schedule are played on a ten-minute, sudden-death basis.

However, member clubs agreed Monday that playoff overtime would consist of a fully - played ten-minute period, to be followed by 20-minute sudden - death periods, if necessary.

The Toronto meeting also confirmed the existing playoff structure which will pit first and fourth, second and fifth, and third and sixth - place finishers at the end of February.

Woodstock A's, who have nine games remaining in their schedule, were ordered to play two postponed games with Belleville Mo-Hawks Monday, Feb. 22 in Woodstock, and Tuesday, the 23rd in Belleville — if necessary.

None of their remaining games will be of any use to the A's, who have won only two of 31 contests. But with only two points now separating fourth - place Kingston, fifth - place Belleville, and sixth - place Oakville, the postponed games will almost certainly be required to determine the finishing order of the last three league playoff contenders.

Mo-Hawk coach Dave Jones, who attended Monday's Toronto meeting, also announced a schedule change for the coming weekend. The Mo-Hawks will play Sunday night in Kingston, instead of Saturday, as previously announced. The Aces are in Belleville Friday.

Mustangs Only Gas House Marksmen

Mustang marksmen were the only ones to enjoy scoring success in the third round of the Gas House Hockey League semi-finals last night.

The league pennant winners turned in a 4-0 win over Mulroneys to grab a 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven series.

In the other Gas House contest the Merchants and Marysville battled to a 0-0 deadlock giving the Merchants two wins and a tie in the three games played.

Jim Horwood scored for the Mustangs to help back the shutout netminding of Paul Smith. Don Irvine and Tom Woodley were the other marksmen.

It was a goaltenders duel all the way in the Merchants-Marysville encounter with both Bob Harrison and Paul Nobles coming up with a number of key saves.

For Harrison it was his third play-off series. Nobles, on the other hand, was pressed into service when regular Marysville goalie Bob Sills was forced to miss the contest.

Junior Chargers Squeak by Irish

Centennial Junior basketballers managed to avert a three-game sweep by Nicholson in their Bay of Quinte COSSA action last night by turning in a 58-57 overtime victory.

The junior Chargers managed to outscore Nicholson 5-4 in overtime action after the teams had been tied at 53-53 at the end of regulation time.

Brian Morphy led the winners with 19 points, while Vahe Parmaksezian added another 15 in a winning cause. For Nicholson it was John Garvin hitting for 16 points and Tim Marta for 11.

Nicholson seniors snowballed to a 60-45 win over Centennial after trailing by 15 points at half time. Bill Hurley (21) and Tim Culhane (18) paced the comeback victory. John Henderson had 22 points for the losers.

In midget play, Nicholson dominated Centennial to the tune of 53-35. Tim Culhane showed the way with 15 points followed by Tom Rashotte with 11.

Vanderwater with 13 and Spitters with 11 points were top scorers for Centennial.

Not All Downhill

The path against Bethany Ski Club proved to be rather bumpy for Oak Hills Nancy Greene League competitors as they dropped a 145-79 decision over the weekend.

John Jevons was the top Oak Hills skier with a sixth-place finish, while Tim Harris placed ninth.

Handicaps No Problem In Twosome Tourney

Handicaps didn't prove to be a major factor in the final Youth Bowlers Family Twosome Tournament held this weekend as some of the less experienced bowlers came up with the best performances.

In Junior "A" competition Jim Calnan and Pat took the honors in Father and Son while Mariette Noel de Tilly and Louise were the winners of the Mother and Daughter competition.

In Father and Daughter play it was Orville Robb and Patti coming out on top, while Elsie Gilbert and Steven captured the Mother and Son title

Lorne Bradford and Rick took senior Father and Son honors, while Mr. Harvey and Jennifer won the Father and Daughter.

Ski Report

Oak Hills Ski Club will be open Wednesday afternoon from 1-4.30 p.m.

Two rope tows will be operating, and equipment rentals available.

Conditions GOOD.

Belvedere coach Bill Vesterfelt and team captain Gene Francis display the PM Industries trophy captured by the Quinte Hockey League pennant winners. The Hotelmen suffered only two setbacks in 15 regular season games in capturing their second consecutive pennant. Belvedere dominated the league's individual awards winning four of the seven trophies presented by the league.

Not Even MVP Stops Belvedere

Even the Quinte Hockey League's Most Valuable Player couldn't stem the tide of the Belvedere pennant winners as the Hotelmen peppered Stinson goalie Larry DiPietro en route to a 6-2 win in the opening game of their semi-final playoff round.

DiPietro, co - winner of the top goalie award last season when he was a member of the Belvedere team, was voted the Stephens-Adamson Trophy as the most valuable performer over the course of the current regular season.

Belvedere blasted their former teammate for six tallies last night, most of them on close-drives.

Gene Francis paced the PM Industries Trophy pennant - winners with a hat trick performance. Gerry Jones, Larry Marshall and Elmer Cain completed the scoring for the winners.

Scoring champion Jack Francis collected a pair of assists. The Belvedere left winger had notched 14 goals and 16 assists over the course of the season to give him the Wm. Belch and Son scoring trophy.

At the other end of the rink Bruce Symon's deflected shot and a clear cut scoring chance by Jim McGuire were the only shots to elude Claude Carr. The Belvedere backstop shared top goaltending honors with teammate Dave Hicks, combining for a stingy 1.86 goals - against average.

Dennis Ray picked up assists on both Stinson goals.

In the other semi-finals series DCA Transfer put up a suprisingly strong showing before bowing 3-2 to Central Taxi, second place finishers in the regular season. DCA was winless in 15 regular season games.

Ron Pointer tied the game just after the half-way mark offsetting an opening tally by Central's Dwight Rathwell.

Most Gentlemanly Player award - winner Andy Prudden then gave the Taximen a 2-1 lead and Al Walker added the eventual winner. Jim Drummond got one goal back for the losers with a minute and a half left to play in the game.

Prudden collected the John Ter-Haar and Bob Lambert Trophy as the most Gentlemanly player. Other award winners included Belvedere rearguard Gary Reid with the Labatt Trophy as the best defenceman and DCA's Don Robson winning the Booth TV trophy as the Most Improved Player.

PC Hoopla Starts Today

TORONTO (CP) — Three days of hoopla start tonight as candidates seeking to succeed Premier John Robarts begin wooing delegates with booze and entertainment.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch will be the first to start the rounds of parties for the 1,748 delegates to the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership convention.

He has turned his campaign headquarters into a discotheque called "Bob's Place" and the menu will feature hot dogs.

But in terms of flamboyancy, he's likely to be outdone by Mines Minister Allan Lawrence who is throwing a $4,000 calypso carnival at the Royal York Hotel, two hours after "Bob's Place" shuts down.

Mr. Lawrence has engaged fire eaters, limbo dancers and imported overproof rum from Jamaica for the bash which organizers expect to attract 2,500. There's enough punch for 9,500 drinks.

Not to be outdone are Education Minister William Davis, A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

They also have special events planned to woo votes in addition to hospitality suites spread over downtown hotels that will start early in the day and go late into the night.

The sixth candidate, Ottawa student Robert Pharand, says he hasn't any money for large-scale campaigning.

Mr. Davis, who is throwing in free breakfasts and lunches in his hospitality suites, also has a dance scheduled for midnight Thursday night for Young Progressive Conservatives and their guests.

Mr. McKeough also has his share of billboards, beauties and booze. He'll have a band performing at a pep rally and teach-in tonight, an event that will conflict with Allan Lawrence's extravaganza.

For Wednesday night, he has rented the Royal York ballroom for another bash that will follow a dinner honoring Mr. Robarts. He also has a breakfast-lunch planned for Friday before delegates head for Maple Leaf Gardens to start voting.

Campaign organizers said today that the candidates are spending up to $100,000 each to get elected but the money is not coming from their own pockets.

Most of it comes from private donations plus $50-a-plate dinners such as the one 600 supporters of Mr. Welch attended last weekend in Niagara Falls.

The money goes into travel costs, literature, hats, billboards, convention parties and to professional campaign workers.

Campaign workers say Mr. Davis' campaign is the best-financed of all and put the price tag at $100,000. They also say Mr. McKeough and Allan Lawrence aren't far behind.

Bert Lawrence is spending about $50,000 and workers for Mr. Welch, a late-starter, said he's spending $25,000. This was quickly denied by a supporter of Mr. McKeough.

"If you spend $25,000, you'll get a bus ticket to the convention, but you won't get in the door," said Phil Lind of the McKeough team.

A LOSS

RED DEER, Alta. (CP) — The Red Deer Exhibition Association operated at a net loss of more than $21,000 in 1970. A financial statement presented to the association's annual shareholders' meeting showed 1970 income of $101,839, down $8,000 from the previous year.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Anxiety Causes Breath Shortness

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've had difficulty in breathing for the past two years. I can't seem to get any help from doctors. They all tell me to see a psychiatrist. I thought the medical profession had medicines that could help shortness of breath. — Mrs. S.

Comment: "Shortness of breath" appears to be a simple, direct descriptive phrase which is unmistakable. Yet, as in your experience with it, you find that your doctors don't seem to be able to overcome it easily.

There's a reason for this. Perhaps what you say is shortness of breath is not really organic difficulty in breathing. What I mean is that sometimes anxious patients complain that they can't breathe well, when actually their breathing apparatus is in excellent condition. They have no asthma, bronchitis, emphysema, heart disease or other illnesses which are commonly known to cause difficulty in breathing.

I can only guess, but the fact that your doctors haven't found any physical causes in your case and have suggested treatment by a psychiatrist makes me think that perhaps your shortness of breath is not really that, but due to anxiety. Do you sigh often? Yawn? Many anxious people do.

For example, one anxious patient will say, "I'm short of breathe. I can't seem to fill my lungs with air." And another, "I don't get any satisfaction in taking a deep breathe any more. I can't get all the air I want. I'm short of breath."

In reality, such are not instances of shortness of breath. They are evidences of anxiety. And as the anxiety state may keep a person nervous for quite awhile, I think that is the reason why your doctors have advised you to have psychiatric advice. It might be a good idea to get such an opinion for your peace of mind.

For Mrs. J.: Colitis means inflammation of the colon — which is a part of the large intestine. Any word which ends in "itis" means inflammation. For example, appendicitis, pancreatitis, etc.

Having established the fact that there is inflammation, the next step is to find the reason for it, and the one after that, finding a way to overcome it. Diagnostically, your doctor may need to have such information as X rays can provide examination of the stool and the results of sigmoidoscopic investigation.

• • •

For Mrs. C.: When your doctor told you that you have scar tissue from the healing of your duodenal ulcer, and that your ulcer is no longer active at this time, he meant just that: the sore had healed, just as one would on your skin or elsewhere. Nature replaces it with a scar tissue — temporary or permanent.

If you feel well and X rays show no evidence that the scarring is blocking the normal passage of food from the stomach into the intestines, then be thankful that your ulcer is quiescent and behaving.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I suppose I'm prejudiced, but I agree with your recent column in which you advised people who have managed to reach the age of 70 not to change their eating habits.

I've been eating as I have all my life even though I'm a few pounds overweight. I wasn't going to begin reducing so late in life.

I am a retired nurse and am 86 years old. I worked until I was 83. I think the calendar proved your theory in my case, at least.

I'm not going to go worrying about cholesterol, etc., at my time of life. I'll fight anyone who tries to take away my weekly banana-split.

Comment: I'll be right there helping — although Idoubt that one with your spirit needs protection.

MPs Agree CN Service Can't Depend on Profit

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian National Railways must not be sidetracked on to the profit route from its mainline of public service the Commons was told Monday. The government should get a national transportation policy on the rails.

In debate on the CNR-Air Canada financing bill, MPs from all parties said the Crown-owned railway should provide transportation first, then worry about profits.

The bill, which was sent to committee after second reading, would provide CNR up to $229 million for 1970 expenses such as equipment, property, branch lines, communications and hotels.

It would provide another $80 million for the first six months of 1971 for obligations incurred before January, and a further $163 million for other capital projects in the same period.

The bill would also guarantee loans and debentures of Air Canada up to $174 million.

Today, the House is to resume debate on the reorganization bill that provides for expansion of the cabinet and the establishment of an environment department.

Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) urged a national transportation policy to replace the current piecemeal approach.

First priority should be service to the public, rather than turning a profit, he said.

Mr. Rowland said the government should exercise greater control over CNR, Air Canada and other Crown corporations. Regulatory agencies, such as the Canadian transport commission, also should be tied more closely to government policy.

The government should experiment with better passenger train methods to prevent the "absolute madness' of increased use of cars—and consequent pollution and public cost of highways.

The government should also relieve the railway of its interest payments on debts incurred when the CNR was formed in 1923, he said.

Without the interest payments, the company could operate at a profit.

Charles Turner (L—London East) agreed that "taxpayers should have some say when and where the trains will run."

The former CNR locomotive engineer called the transport commission a rubber stamp for the railways' decisions. He said J. W. Pickersgill, former Liberal transport minister, should resign as commission president.

Charles Thomas (PC—Moncton) echoed the call for a national transportation policy.

He said profits should not be the first aim of the company, and urged the government to subsidize rail transport in the same way it provides airport facilities for airlines.

Mr. Thomas criticized the government for reducing rail subsidies on Maritime runs without compensating aid to shippers.

The result of this policy had been increased costs to Maritime industries.

Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) said the railway, which had rejected inspection from outside auditors, had lost $371 million from its books.

He suggested the sum had gone into the election fund of the Liberal party, which had never wanted to reveal the sources of its campaign money.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) turned the debate to Air Canada, saying the airline should remove its first-class accommodation on domestic flights.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said Newfoundland was getting inadequate service on the ferry runs from the mainland.

He also expressed fear that CNR was planning to reduce its rail freight service on the island as well as the coastal ferry service.

Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) said the current lack of national transportation policy was imposing special hardships on rural communities that are the first to lose rail service.

There's No Zoo in Zoology

Why don't the radio and television announcers say it clear and straight:

— That there is no "grad" in congratulations, no "shul" in "actually," and no "zoo" in "zoology."

— That there is no "mash" in "machinations," no "ray" in "lingerie," and no "dye" in "digestion."

— That there is no "ex" in "Xavier," no "cull" in "culinary," and no "nag" in "monogamous." (And no puns, please.)

— That "dour" should rhyme with "moor" and not with "sour"; while "catch" must rhyme with "match" and not with "wretch."

— That there is no "etch" in "echelon," no "mo" in "memento," and no "back" in "abacus."

— That the verb "to frequent" takes the accent on the second syllable, not on the first as the adjective does; likewise, that the adjective, "August," takes the accent on the second syllable, not on the first as the name of the month does.

— That there is no "pasture" in pasteurized milk, whose name comes from the French scientist and should be pronounced "pasterized."

— That "assuage" rhymes with "wage" and not with "lodge"; and "demise" rhymes with "eyes" and not with "knees."

— That there is no "ham" in Bethlehem, which is a Hebrew word, and not an English place name on the order of Birmingham or Nottingham.

— That "desultory" takes the accent on the first syllable, not the second; that "elixer" takes the accent on the second syllable, not the first; and that "exquisite" takes the accent on the first syllable, not the second. (Remember that there is no "quiz" in "exquisite.")

— That there is no "pen" in "penalize, which is derived from the word "penal" and not from "penalty."

— That "lichen," a kind of moss, does not rhyme with "kitchen," but takes the same sound as "liken."

— That the fabric, "covert," comes from the French word meaning "to cover," and the first syllable is pronounced like "cover," not like "over."

— That the "g" should be clearly pronounced in both "lengthen" and "strengthen", just as the "c" should be carefully articulated in "Arctic", and the "r" in "library" and "February."

— That "suffrage" is a two-syllable word and has nothing at all to do with suffering; while "rigmarole" is a three-syllable word with no "a" between the "g" and the "m".

Charges of Back-room Politics Worry Ontario PC Leaders

TORONTO (CP) — Charges of back-room politics in the organization of this week's convention to choose a successor to retiring Premier John Roberts have again caused concern among leaders of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

The latest controversy centres on the refusal of three riding associations, one in Toronto and two in the Ottawa area, to name Young Progressive Conservatives to their slates of voting delegates.

Sean O'Sullivan, YPC president, said Monday in a telephone interview from his Niagara Falls, Ont., home that if "backroom boys" are allowed to have their way in choosing delegates it will do "irreparable damage" to the party.

Early in the leadership campaign, party president Alan Eagleson was forced to reply to reports that a committee had been set up to structure the convention in favor of Education Minister William Davis, who at that time had not announced his candidacy.

Mr. Eagleson acknowledged at the time that four of the seven members of a formative committee established to initiate convention plans "might have gone a bit too far" in recommending specific persons to head various sub-committees.

But the reports of a power-play in favor of Mr. Davis were "erroneous" and there would be "no backroom politics" because "every group in our party is guaranteed representation on every committee," said the party president.

YPCs have no argument about the make-up of the convention committees, but are incensed over the refusal of three ridings to name YPC members as formal delegates—meaning a loss in voting power to the party's youth group.

Mr. O'Sullivan, 19, a second-year student of political science at Brock University in St. Catharines, said his association is ready to ask for a court injunction or to start "a real battle" on the convention floor.

The ridings in question are Toronto York-Forest Hill, Ottawa East and Carleton, near Ottawa.

Mr. Eagleson said after a meeting on the issue last weekend that the ridings have refused to comply with an order from the party's credentials committee that all ridings name four women, four men and two YPC members or persons under 30 as delegates.

"In Ottawa East all the delegates are men," said Mr. O'Sullivan.

Mr. Eagleson said he hopes a solution can be resolved before the three-day convention begins in Toronto Wednesday.

Mr. O'Sullivan said:

"Now it comes down to a question of whether the regulations which everyone else in the party must live by will be enforced or whether a select group of self-appointed power brokers can subject their personal wishes upon the rest of the party.

"Mr. Eagleson has assured me that none of the delegates from the three ridings will be registered until the matter is settled," said Mr. O'Sullivan, who at 15 was the youngest voting delegate at the Conservative's federal leadership convention in 1967.

Mr. O'Sullivan said he will meet in Toronto today with six delegates chosen by the YPC for the three ridings.

"By Thursday we will have determined how we are going to handle this situation.

"If the party starts changing rules in the middle of the game then we shall have no hesitation in registering a formal complaint about several ridings which have contravened various aspects of the constitution.

"I certainly would like to hear what the six leadership candidates think about the delegates from the three ridings."

Bourassa Is Dodging Nationalist Booby-traps

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa is stepping carefully through a political minefield at the sixth annual constitutional conference, trying to avoid nationalist booby-traps on either side.

On one hand, the 37-year-old Liberal premier wants to return to Quebec carrying some proof of progress in the long series of negotiations toward a new Canadian constitution.

On the other, he does not want to appear to be backing Quebec against a constitutional wall— at the mercy of the federal government and the other provinces.

The two political dangers were on his mind Monday as the leaders of the federal and provincial governments moved slowly toward agreement on a formula to amend the constitution.

Mr. Bourassa says Quebecers will not remain patient with the federal system of government if drafting a new Canadian constitution or substantial amendment to the present one is delayed much longer.

The current series of constitutional negotiations has dragged on for years with what he regards as few concrete achievements.

He feels that if Quebec is not given the necessary powers within the next few years to enable it to develop according to its own political, social and cultural characteristics, Quebecers may opt for political independence from Canada.

But he would like to show Quebecers tangible proof that federalism can work for them —a satisfactory amending formula.

Mid-way through the conference Monday he said "substantial progress" has been made toward reaching agreement on such a formula.

"It was one of the most fruitful days in several years of these discussions," he said, before going off to Prime Minister Trudeau's official residence for dinner and further talks on the plan.

The conference was expected to issue early today a communique expected to deal with at least a tentative agreement on an amending formula.

Mr. Bourassa said the 11 government leaders have agreed to try and work out a final formula by June, when they are to meet again in Victoria.

However, an amending formula in itself probably will not be enough to satisfy Quebec nationalists, if the experience of former premier Jean Lesage is any indication.

In 1964, Mr. Lesage accepted the Fulton-Favreau amending formula at a federal-provincial conference, only to withdraw his approval a year later under heavy fire from Quebec intellectuals, the opposition Union Nationale party and nationalist members of his own Liberal party.

The formula was named for Davie Fulton and Guy Favreau, the federal justice ministers who led the talks on the formula from 1961 to 1964.

Mr. Bourassa wants Quebec to be given the right to veto constitutional amendments ha affect Quebec directly or indirecly.

He said Quebec would probably not accept an amending formula which did not include this veto power, although the province would agree to other provinces having such power.

The veto power would allow Quebec to protect the constitutional powers it now has against possible future attempts to centralize power in the federal government, which Quebec strongly opposes.

Mr. Bourassa also wants a tentative agreement on an amending formula to be submitted to the federal and provincial legislatures for discussion and a public debate before a final agreement is reached.

This would enable him to avoid embarrassment by allowing him to hear the reaction from Quebecers to the plan before he has to make a final decision.

While pressing for a satisfactory amendment formula, Mr. Bourassa is also trying to get the federal government and the other provinces to accept his government's income-security proposals.

The proposals would give Quebec the power to legislate and administer in the income security field although the federal government would continue to finance such programs.

Mr. Bourassa said he wants discussions to continue on both the amending formula and income security, but he would neither confirm nor deny that Quebec was holding out agreement on the amending formula against support for its income security proposal.

Laporte's Seat Filled

Quebec Labor Minister Easy Winner in Byelection

MONTREAL (CP) — Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer won his first seat in the Quebec national assembly in a provincial byelection Monday in Chambly riding.

For the Liberal party he represents it provided a show of support for its policies since taking power last April.

Unofficial results provided by the Quebec Liberal party gave Mr. Cournoyer almost 66 per cent of the vote.

Pierre Marois of the Parti Quebecois had nearly 33 per cent of the vote, almost the same proportion as in the provincial general election last year, an indication that the separatist party did not lose support despite belief in some quarters that voters associated it with a terrorist crisis last fall.

The Liberal party breakdown of the vote showed Mr. Cournoyer got 22,550 votes while Mr. Marois had 11,354.

Clement Patry polled 443 votes under the Creditiste banner; independent Luke Dougherty had 169; Lionel Desjardins, independent Parti Quebecois, had 22; Jean-Paul Poulin, Credit Social Uni, had eight, and Claude Longtin of the newly-formed Parti Republicain had four.

Mr. Desjardins and Mr. Longtin had both withdrawn, but were too late to have their names removed from the ballot.

The Liberal party's figures showed a total of 34,450 or 65.3 per cent of the 52,795 eligible voters, cast ballots.

Official results of the byelection were not expected until late today.

Standing in the 108-seat Quebec national assembly now is: Liberals 72; Union National 17; Creditiste 12; Parti Quebecois seven.

The opposition Union Nationale party did not contest the byelection because they said they had no criticism of Mr. Cournoyer's fitness as labor minister, a post he held in the Union Nationale government before the general election last year.

Premier Robert Bourassa congratulated Mr. Cournoyer for "a great victory" and said he was happy that the Chambly voters, "with a support louder than ever," had confirmed "the merits of government action in its first nine months of administration."

Mr. Marois, who said during the campaign that if the Parti Quebecois lost no support compared to the last election it would have scored "an enormous victory," also had reason to be pleased.

His support, at 33 per cent, was a shade above the 32 per cent scored in the previous election.

Last April, Pierre Laporte polled 25,641 votes, or 57 per cent of the votes cast. Mr. Marois had 14,368 votes, or 32 per cent. Turnout in that election was 85 per cent.

The seat was left vacant by the death of Mr. Laporte, then labor minister, at the hands of terrorists last October.

Mr. Cournoyer has long experience as a lawyer involved in labor relations, and his appointment Oct. 29 as the Liberal government's labor minister was his second appointment to the post without holding a seat in the legislature.

The Union Nationale had appointed him but he lost his bid for a seat in the assembly when Premier Bourassa's Liberals swept the Union Nationale from power in the election last year.

Paul Rose Is Banished For Remainder of Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols of Court of Queen's Bench will decide today on the question of legal representation for Paul Rose, banished from the court Monday for the duration of his kidnap-murder trial.

Rose, a 27-year-old former school teacher charged with non-capital murder in the Oct. 17 strangling of former Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, was thrown out of court Monday morning after he referred to the judge and court officials as prostitutes.

Rose has been conducting his own defence at the trial, with lawyer Pierre Cloutier sitting beside him as legal adviser.

Mr. Cloutier attempted to leave after the accused was expelled but was ordered to stay in court for the rest of the Monday session.

"I cannot defend him," said Mr. Cloutier. "The lawyers of Quebec are afraid to get mixed up in these cases. I ask your permission to withdraw."

Mr. Cloutier stayed in court, but took no part in the examination of jury candidates during which three new jurors were chosen bringing the total to nine.

Eight more candidates were turned down—three for being partial. Five were rejected without explanation by the Crown.

At the start of the afternoon session, Mr. Justice Nichols asked Rose if he intends to amend his behavior.

"That depends on whether you intended to continue with the same gags," Rose replied.

The judge then ordered him expelled for the duration of the trial and as Rose left, he shouted:

"The comic opera continues. We shall overcome."

In explaining his decision to expel the accused, the judge showed the strain of keeping order in the face of daily abuse. He told the court:

"Since the trial started Jan. 25, I have tried to show patience. I have given the accused many warnings and have found him in contempt on one occasion.

"I cannot permit the degradation of this court over which I have been asked to preside."

He said he believed it was the first time in Canadian jurisprudence that such a decision had been made and he accepted "full responsibility" for it.

With Rose acting as his own lawyer, it had taken a week to select six jurors. His Monday morning outburst came after the sixth juror was selected.

"You're all prostitutes here," he stormed. "At least the girls earn their money."

The sixth jury candidate had stated under questioning last week that he felt he would be "partial" as a juror. However, he was declared impartial by two already-sworn jurors appointed by the court to decide on the acceptability of prospective jurors.

In the same courtroom earlier, the kidnap-murder trials of three other young men were put off until the spring assizes of Court of Queen's Bench, opening March, and two of them were found in contempt for shouting at the judge.

Accused with Paul Rose of the October abduction and slaying of Mr. Laporte are his brother Jacques, 23, Francis Simard, 23 and Bernard Lortie, 19.

Jacques Rose and Simard were cited for contempt of court.

Fourteen others facing charges arising from the October kidnapping crisis had their trials postponed until the spring assizes.

Lise Balcer and Jean-Luc Arene, both 21, are charged with being members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec. Film cameraman Francois Roux, 22, is charged with obstructing justice.

The three were later granted $1,000 bail each in another court.

The other 11 whose trials were postponed—six men and five women—are charged with being accessories after the fact to the kidnap-killing of Mr. Laporte.

This Criminal Code charge, like the charges of non-capital murder and kidnapping, carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

Among the 11 are two brother-and-sister pairs who shared an apartment on west-end Queen Mary Road last fall—Richard Therrien, 20, Colette Therrien, 22, Francois Belisle, 19, and Francine Belisle, 22.

The other seven are Yves Roy, Robert Dupuis, Claude Lariviere, 26, accountant Michel Viger, 30, Louise Verreault, 20, Denise Quesnel and her daughter Helene, 18.

Judge Re-admits Spectators

MONTREAL (CP) — The trial of five Quebecers charged with seditious conspiracy was highlighted Monday by the judge's decision to readmit the public to proceedings, an apology from one of the accused and arguments on a motion to quash the charges.

Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet agreed to readmit spectators to the court after four of the defendants argued that the public was not responsible for interruptions in last Friday's proceedings.

Labor leader Michel Chartrand apologized Monday to Mr. Justice Ouimet for his hasty departure from the courtroom. He said he was responsible for interruptions when he launched a verbal attack on the Crown lawyers.

Another of the accused, author Pierre Vallieres, who left the court on Chartrand's heels Friday, admitted Monday he had raised his voice but said there was "useless provocation" by Gabriel Lapointe, one of the Crown prosecutors.

He and two other defendants, teacher Charles Gagnon and lawyer Robert Lemieux, joined Chartrand in asking that the public be readmitted.

Mr. Justice Ouimet ruled spectators be readmitted on condition there be no more interruptions—from the accused or the public gallery.

Toll of Quake Now 44 Killed

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Authorities kept a wary eye on a cracked main reservoir dam for fear aftershocks might cause it to burst, and rescuers sifted wreckage of a big hospital for bodies today in the wake of a killer earthquake that left at least 44 persons dead and more than 1,000 injured in Southern California.

The rumbling quake that struck Tuesday at 6:01 a.m. PST and the hundreds of aftershocks dealt heavy destruction to a wide area of Los Angeles County and its environs.

Officials said 25 persons were missing, some buried in the rubble of two collapsed buildings at a Veterans Administration hospital in the hard-hit west end of the populous San Fernando Valley.

Twenty-five bodies had been found in the hospital wreckage; 45 persons were rescued. One hundred persons were injured.

So heavy and so interlocked were huge chunks of concrete from the virtually levelled three-storey structures that rescuers said it might be another day or more before all victims could be reached.

Although cries of "Help me! Help me!" could be heard Tuesday night, authorities said there was little likelihood of more survivors being found. The bodies of five persons were extricated in the night and early morning hours.

It was too early to give a full damage estimate, but it will run in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Los Angeles is the third-largest city in the United States and the area around it is one of the most populous. Some 400,000 Canadians who emigrated to California live there.

The panic and confusion, and the many fires that broke out when gas mains were fractured, led to nine deaths due to heart attacks.

President Nixon declared the quake-stricken scene a disaster area, making it eligible for government help, including low-interest loans to rebuild.

Tens of thousands of residents in the San Fernando Valley were ordered to leave their homes lying in the path of the big dam's lake holding billions of gallons of water for the city of Los Angeles.

National Guard troops moved into the ghost towns to prevent looting.

The main shock Tuesday was centred 26 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

It crumpled much of the concrete facing of the 150-foot-high dam of Van Norman Lakes, the city's largest reservoir, and cracked its main structure of earth fill.

As water experts began draining it, police ordered a forced evacuation Tuesday night of some 100,000 persons in a 20-square-mile area of the San Fernando Valley. Officials said that barring a strong new aftershock, the dam should hold.

Hundreds of commercial buildings and factories were damaged, along with uncounted homes, highways, bridges and public buildings. Los Angeles County estimated loss to its buildings alone of $125 million, with 427 damaged structurally and 42 evacuated.

Gov. Ronald Reagan surveyed the damage and said: "It's shocking. When you look at this you feel pretty helpless."

The quake was centred near the town of Newhall, 35 miles to the northwest, but the northwest corner of San Fernando Valley—part of the Los Angeles area—was the worst hit.

The freeway leading from San Fernando to Newhall looked as if it had been chopped with a giant axe and hit with a sledgehammer.

Newhall, with a population of 7,000, suffered extensive property damage but few casualties. Police reported every house had windows out and merchants boarded up their smashed store fronts. Police said the paving on the town's roads was shredded up in ribbons like strips.

But police gave the final Decision in June

Parley Etches Outline For New Constitution

OTTAWA (CP) — The outline of a new constitution has been accepted as feasible by the 10 premiers after a two-day conference here. Prime Minister Trudeau said the conference marked "a substantial breakthrough" in the march to patriate the British North America Act.

"Here indeed you might begin to see the shape of the future constitution," enthused Mr. Trudeau at a news conference, referring to a 2,000-word statement issued Tuesday following the discussions.

He and the premiers will meet in Victoria June 14-16 to either scuttle the proposals or endorse them. Public reaction between now and then probably will decide whether the embryo lives or dies.

The framework etched in the statement would:

—Provide an amending formula by which six of the 10 provinces, plus Ottawa, might make constitutional changes. Approval of the British Parliament would no longer be required.

—Entrench fundamental rights, including elections "at least every five years," in the constitution.

—Give English and French constitutional protection as official languages. Still under discussion is a way to extend this right to education.

—Make the Supreme Court of Canada a child of the constitution rather than Parliament, making it rather than Parliament "the court of final appeal."

Key aspect is the amending formula, sought off and on for nearly 50 years.

If the formula is endorsed at the June meeting, Parliament and the legislatures would then be asked to approve it.

Once they did, the stage would be set to ask the British Parliament to recognize a proclamation giving Canada absolute control over its constitution for the first time.

The proposed formula would require consent for constitutional changes from the federal government, Quebec and Ontario, two western provinces representing 50 per cent of the West's population, and two of the four Atlantic provinces.

Quebec and Ontario would be

Robarts Pleased

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Premier John Robarts expressed satisfaction Tuesday that "substantial progress" was achieved at his last federal-provincial constitutional conference.

As the conference broke up, Mr. Robarts described it as having been pivotal. "We had to be able to demonstrate that we were able to achieve our objectives."

He said agreement had been reached on "a flexible means of amending and patriating the constitution."

"What we have to do now is hammer it out in the kind of language acceptable in a formal document."

Convention to Rule On Delegate Dispute

TORONTO (CP) — Six senior delegates to the leadership convention of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party will be asked to promise to turn their delegate buttons over to youth delegates if the convention asks them to do so.

Alan Eagleson, president of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, announced the requirement after a meeting of the executive of the Young Progressive Conservatives Tuesday night.

He told the executive he is asking for the promise to protect the interests of six young delegates who are seeking the right to represent three riding associations that have failed to name youth representatives.

The dispute over the six delegate berths is expected to be debated on the convention floor Friday, shortly before voting on the leadership starts.

Mr. Eagleson said the six senior delegates from York-Forest Hill, Carleton and Ottawa East ridings would be asked to sign a letter when they register this morning as a pledge to give up their buttons if asked.

The meeting between the YPC and Mr. Eagleson was called after the party's youth wing heard of an appeal by York-Forest Hill riding against a ruling by the convention's credentials committee which said local associations should set aside two of their 10 delegate buttons for YPC delegates.

During a four-hour discussion, Mr. Eagleson told the YPC the party constitution would not permit him to refuse to recognize the senior delegates and to recognize the youth delegates instead.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A disturbance crossing Lake Superior is bringing snow to Northern Ontario. The disturbance will move across the lower lakes today and spread snow over all of southern Ontario. Southwesterly winds ahead of the disturbance are causing snowflurry activity along the north shores of Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario. Snowshowers are causing poor visibility along the shoreline east of Toronto to Kingston. Some clearing is expected overnight in most regions. Cloud and snow along with milder temperatures will again move across most of the province Thursday.

Today's Snowstorm Last for This Week

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The five- to 10-inch snowfall across Southern Ontario that ended Tuesday should be the last major storm this week, a weather office spokesman said Tuesday night.

He said a number of "weak systems, hardly worthy of great concern," will cross the Great Lakes into Southern Ontario bringing snowflurries.

"There will be very little in the way of wet weather and there will be a tendency toward milder weather."

The weather office said storms this winter have dumped 13 to 14 inches more snow than usual on the southern part of the province.

Moonmen Are Healthy and Snug in Quarantine Aboard Ship

ABOARD NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Apollo 14's moon heroes, healthy and snug in a quarantine trailer, steamed aboard this aircraft carrier toward Samoa today after safely completing man's third lunar landing mission.

From Samoa they'll be flown to the Manned Spacecraft Centre near Houston, arriving early Friday. They'll get a glimpse of their families, then continue their isolation against possible moon germs until Feb. 26.

Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa parachuted to a precision landing in the South Pacific Tuesday, climaxing a nine-day lunar voyage which scientists say will greatly enrich man's knowledge of the moon.

The spacemen hit the tropic waters less than four miles from this helicopter carrier and quickly were hoisted aboard by helicopter. They were just seven-tenths of a mile from the landing target.

Hundreds of sailors cheered and snapped pictures, "Welcome Apollo 14" banners unfurled, and a band played as the three smiling spacemen walked smartly from the copter to the quarantine trailer.

On the remote possibility that they returned harmful germs from the moon, Shepard, Mitchell and Roosa wore protective masks.

The Canadian flying doctor, William Carpentier, who is in the quarantine van with them, reported that a preliminary medical examination showed them all to be in good health.

Carpentier, a native of Edmonton who was raised in Cowichan, B.C., is a flight surgeon attached to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He was the flight surgeon that went in quarantine with the first astronauts to land on the moon in July, 1969.

Also in the trailer is R. H Culbertson, a NASA engineer who maintains the van systems and helps with cooking and other chores.

After retrieving the astronauts, the New Orleans set sail for Samoa, 880 miles to the north. When the ship is in helicopter range, about noon EST Thursday, the spacemen will be flown to Pago Pago, where they'll transfer into a quarantine van aboard an air force transport plane.

The aircraft will ferry them to Houston's Ellington Air Force Base, arriving at 1.30 a.m. Friday. They will go to the Lunar Receiving Laboratory at the Manned Spacecraft Centre to complete the 21-day quarantine period that began the day Shepard and Mitchell left the moon.

The lunar rocks they gathered in the ancient Fra Mauro highlands will go into another section of the laboratory, where scientists eagerly wait to start examination that will take months or years.

Scientists believe the moon walkers may have gathered primordial rocks dating back 4,600 million years to the creation of the moon.

Scientists hope study of these rocks will unlock many secrets of the birth pangs of the moon, the earth and solar system. All were believed created at the same time in the convulsive coming together of space dust and rocks in a mammoth gas cloud.

Leadership Candidates Jockeying For Position

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

TORONTO — There are only 48 hours left before the next premier is chosen, yet no clear-cut choice has emerged as the man to succeed retiring premier John Robarts.

Convention hysteria swung into high gear this morning as delegates alternatives and press scrambled through the convention floor of the Royal York Hotel in efforts to get registered.

And in the back rooms, the jockeying for position and power has already begun.

The biggest question left unanswered is whether any of the five serious candidates are ready to make a deal.

Association president Alan Eagelson says feelers have been put out by all camps, qualifying this, however, by saying he feels this is being done by the campaign workers and not by the candidates themselves.

"All the candidates are saying they will win. Right now they don't want to admit they will not be in there in the end", says Mr. Eagleson.

Although there is no way of substantiating it, many observers say William Davis heads the polls. However, with all five camps agreeing that "up to 40 per cent of the delegates are not yet committed, there is no way of telling how many votes Davis will get. His supporters — and even his opponents — say he will need 600 on the first ballot to give him a position of power. It remains to be seen whether he can muster this amount.

The name of the game is to try and erode Bill Davis' support and all candidates are chipping away. Davis' campaign strategy, to steamroll the delegates by announcing strong support by sitting members of the legislature, shows signs of slowing down.

The MPP's are in evidence - wearing Davis buttons — and marching around preaching the Davis creed. However in the background are their riding delegates wearing the badges of Davis' opponents.

Prime example was the arrival of the Northern Ontario group from the Lakehead with MPPs Jim Jessiman and Leo Bernier, Davis buttons and all, almost pushed into the background by many of the 50 voting delegates erupting their support for Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence.

What will happen Friday?

Biggest plus for those who enjoy the politics of manoeuvering was the late entry of Robert Pharand. Sure to go out on the first ballot his appearance gives those candidates who would otherwise be the low men on the totem pole two ballots to stake out positions and attempt to make a deal.

Bert Lawrence seems to be in the most vulnerable position and will either be next to go or will likely voluntarily drop out if his support is less than 100 votes.

Allan Lawrence at this moment rates the nod as being in second place (if not first) behind Davis.

The convention crunch will come with what happens to Darcy McKeough and Robert Welch. McKeough has a solid base of support which, if it were thrown en block to either candidate, would be enough to hit the scale in his favor. If the voting shreds, however, it could possibly lead to Robert Welch — the candidate who hasn't offended anybody — emerging from the pack as the compromise.

What will happen? Everybody will know in 48 hours.

R. A. Pattison RIA Speaker

The President of the Society of Industrial Accountants of Ontario, R. A. Pattison, is coming to Belleville to speak to the members of the local chapter.

He will be here for a meeting on Feb. 15, and his topic will be the RIA — Action Central.

He will discuss a change in the diploma course curriculum for Registered Industrial Accountants.

The course, which is designed to extend over a period of five years, can only be taken for the first two years in the classroom situation. The remaining three years must be taken by correspondence. This is due to the limitation of educational facilities.

The meeting will be held at the Sun Luck Gardens, Feb. 15, at 6 p.m.

PUC Members Seek Raise

A nine per cent raise for the chairman and two commissioners of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission was approved at the monthly meeting of the commission yesterday.

Chairman Gerry O'Connor now receives a salary of $1,100 for service with the PUC; commissioners Lyle Langabeer and Dr. J. Russell Scott receive $1,000.

The increase, if approved first by city council and then by Ontario Hydro, would raise these figures to $1,200 and $1,090 respectively.

A Bigger Edge

That's what the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans of Canada are trying to give Canada's promising figure skaters by selling key chains for the Canadian Figure Skating Association's bursary fund. The project got a local sendoff Tuesday when Mayor Russell Scott purchased the first key chain from Duke of Edinburgh Unit president John Browning and Ladies' Auxiliary vice-president Mrs. Alice Storms. Sports Editor Maurice Switzer's synopsis of the project appears on the first page, second section.

Bridges Closed By Blizzard

With more than 15 inches of snow falling in the past two days and high winds piling it into almost insurmountable drifts, Prince Edward county was virtually isolated today as provincial police closed main highways except to area residents.

Provincial police at Belleville said shortly before noon that Bay Bridge to Rossmore and also the canal bridge at Carrying Place south of Trenton had been closed to through traffic.

"We are checking all cars and only county residents living within a mile or so of the bridge are being allowed through," said an OPP officer at Belleville.

Conditions were particularly bad on No. 33 highway in the Carrying Place area, according to the police.

"There's a long line of cars backed up from the bridge and many of them can't even get turned around."

Even two police cruisers are bogged down in the Carrying Place area as officers were sent out in what turned out to be a futile attempt to direct traffic.

Confounding the problem on Highway 33 was the fact that a Department of Highways snowplow ran out of gas and another was dispatched to assist it.

Light, Paint Passed by PUC

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission yesterday approved installation of an overhead light for the neighborhood arena situated behind Docter's Hotel on Station Street.

The commission jointly commended the residents who have joined together to support this facility.

Approval was given yesterday for expenditure of $1,500 in retaining the services of Benjamin Hubbs to freshen the offices with a new coat of paint and varnish for the grained woodwork.

Power Rate Increase Studied

Luking on the horizon is the possibility that the Belleville Public Utilities Commission might have to call for an increase in retail electric power rates.

"With costs rising, are we charging enough . . . we'd just like to know," asserted PUC chairman Gerry O'Connor.

To this end, H. A. Beach, consumer service superintendent for the Ontario Hydro Eastern region, is conducting a retail rate study.

"The Ontario Hydro has to look into it and justify it," E. L. Burnham, manager of the Belleville PUC said this morning.

Mr. Burnham explained that, although an increase in rates was received by the commission last year, they were not passed on to the ratepayer.

"They were absorbed," he said.

He explained the last power rate increase to the consumer was made in August of 1969.

"The utilities commission is not allowed to operate at a deficit," he commented, again referring to the rising costs.

Break in Main Cuts Off Water

TRENTON (Staf) — All of northwest Trenton, above Frederick Street was without water service for much of yesterday afternoon.

The 3½-hour disruption in utility service ended at 6.30 p.m. with replacement of a single length of 6-inch water main along Front Street, near the CNR bridge.

The trunk main along Front the only one serving the area —had broken at a joint, Barry Box, public relations officer for the Commission said today.

Welfare Recipients Up 30 per cent

The number of people receiving some form of welfare assistance in Hastings county is up 30 per cent over last year.

Figures given by Reginald Tucker, Hastings county welfare administrator, show that in December, 1970, a total of 2,470 people were receiving assistance, an increase of 514 over the December 1969 total of 1,856.

Those receiving help under the General Welfare Assistance Act are broken down into a number of categories—from those totally dependent on welfare to those receiving only minor assistance for extraordinary expenses such as payment of bills for VON nurses' visits.

But in December, the latest month for which figures are available, 241 employable heads of families were dependent on welfare. In December 1969, the number was 175.

Of these 241 heads of families, 106 lived in Belleville, 106 in the county and 29 in Trenton. They had 867 dependents.

Single employable people receiving welfare in December totalled 85. Forty - three of them lived in Belleville, 32 in the county and 10 in Trenton.

In addition, county welfare services looked after 16 provincial charges — people who have not lived within a municipality in Ontario for 12 consecutive months immediately before making application for assistance.

This makes a total of 1,209 people — heads of families who could be employed if they could find jobs and their dependents — who exist solely on welfare allowances in the county.

People who cannot work because of physical or mental infirmity also qualify for welfare. In December, there were 165 unemployable heads of families on welfare in the county and 178 unemployable single people.

The county welfare service also looked after 15 dependent foster children and 148 people in nursing homes. The number of unemployable provincial charges was 12.

Those under governmental benefits who received supplementary aid up to a maximum of $20 a month totalled 145.

Another 165 "persons in need" were given special assistance — usually to meet the cost of some medical need such as drugs or dentures.

The welfare department helps out when a family needs special assistance to pay for visiting nurses or for a homemaker to take over when the mother is ill. It also runs the day nursery, where children of working parents are cared for, with fees assessed on the basis of ability to pay.

Mayor Suggests PUC Credit Check

The Ontario Municipal Electric Association will receive a recommendation from the Belleville Public Utilities Commission calling for province - wide mutual co-operation in dealing with unpaid accounts.

Mayor J. Russell Scott, in proposing the suggestion, described a method of issuing slips to ratepayers, certifying their payment.

He explained that, in moving away from a community, the ratepayer would be required to produce his utilities receipt before receiving water and power at his new location.

He cited one particular commercial ratepayer who left town owing the utilities commission more than $200.

"What's to prevent him from opening up in another town, and keep moving around, owing utility commissions" for unpaid accounts.

The absence of the slips "would make sure that somebody moving away from here doesn't get service" at their new location, the mayor said.

Gerry O'Connor, chairman of the PUC, backed up the proposal.

"I suggest that we help each other; it would help keep costs at a minimum.

"Provincially speaking, we'd be accomplishing something," the chairman commented.

The proposal came to light during yesterday's PUC meeting, when uncollected accounts totalling $1,732 were announced. The utilities commission collected in excess of $3 million for water and power services in 1970.

Although the uncollected accounts represent only about .05 per cent of the total bills, E. L. Burnham, PUC manager, yesterday explained that by law "the utilities commission is not allowed to operate at a deficit."

The Mayor commented that "it may be peanuts . . . but it all adds up."

A list of the uncollected accounts was tabled at the meeting with bills ranging from 50 cents to $200.

Most of the reasons given for non-collection were unobtainable addresses of parties and deceased and no estate funds.

The PUC will seek the advice of the city solicitor to receive any suggestions on how to legally retrieve due rates.

IN MEMORIAM

McKENNA — In loving memory of a loving husband and father, James McKenna who passed away Feb. 10, 1970.

What we would give if we could say,
Hello, Dad in the same old way.
To hear your voice, see your smile,
To sit with you and chat awhile.
So you who have a father,
Cherish him with care,
For you'll never know the heartache,
Till you see his vacant chair.

—Never forgotten by wife Marjorie and family.

McKENNA — In loving memory of a dear grandfather James A. McKenna who passed away Feb. 10, 1970.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There's not a day dear grandfather,
We do not think of you.

—Always remembered by grandchildren.

McCRORY — In loving memory of a wonderful mother and grandmother Mildred Myrtle McCrory who passed away Feb. 10th, 1969.

We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find,
If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of mother dear,
Come smiling through the door.

—Always remembered by Doug, Joyce, Steven, Karen and Kevin.

LEE — In loving remembrance of beloved Harry A. Lee who passed away two years ago today, February 10, 1969.

Eternal rest grant unto him Lord and let Perpetual Light Shine Upon Him.

McCRORY — In loving memory of my dearest wife Myrtle, who passed away two years ago, Feb. 10, 1969.

If I had seen you at the last,
And held your dying hand,
And heard the last sight from your heart,
I would not have felt so bad,
I did not know the pain you had,
Nor did I see you die,
I only know you went away,
And could not say goodbye,
I mourn for you in silence,
So no one could see me weep,
But many silent tears I shed,
While others are asleep.

—Sadly missed by husband Andy and son Alan.

JOHNSON — In memory of my brother John Wilbur who passed away February 10, 1961.

He bade no one his last farewell,
The heavenly gates were opened,
I often sit and think of you,
And wonder why you had to die
Without a chance to say goodbye.

—Sadly missed by sister Mary.

Theatre Weekend In Napanee

The light touch, in both fantasy and comedy, is offered theatre - goers in Napanee this coming weekend.

On Friday and Saturday nights for the next two weeks the Lennox Theatre Guild will present two one-act plays.

The first is a fantasy, The Public Eye, directed by Miss Helena McKean, who trained at the School of Dramatic Arts in London, England.

The second is a comedy, The Palmar Way, directed by David Hay and featuring two actors familiar to Pinnacle Playhouse audiences, Ron McPherson and Robert Lawton.

At the Sunday matinee performance, Brockville players will offer a bonus production their theatre-of-the-absurd one act play One Man Masque. This was a 1970 festival winner directed by John Lawlor.

The new intimate-type theatre in Napanee seats 110. Belleville people may have tickets held for them by calling 354-3569.

One Hill, Two Legs

MARMORA (Special) — Two Marmora children sustained a broken leg in two separate accidents at the same place last Sunday.

Kimberly King, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon King, broke her left leg about 11 a.m. while tobogganing on the Sacred Heart Church hill.

Around 4 p.m. Mathew Hanley, 5 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hanley, suffered a very bad break to his right leg while tobogganing with his brothers on the same hill.

Both children were treated by Dr. H. G. Parkin. The Hanley child was transferred to Belleville General Hospital by ambulance. Kimberly is in a cast at home.

Also in Belleville Hospital is Miss Gertie Burns of N. Hastings St. with a broken leg, sustained in a fall at her home on Saturday afternoon.

Play Accepted

Belleville's Lion in Festival

By SUSAN KORAH
Staff Reporter

Belleville theatre lovers can rejoice. Yesterday Donald Endicott, acting chairman of the Eastern Ontario Drama League (EODL) arrived from Peterborough with the news that the Belleville Theatre Guild production of The Lion in Winter has been accepted, with three other plays for entry in the drama festival to be held at the Centennial Secondary School auditorium from March 10 to 13.

At a meeting of the festival committee, Mr. Endicott also announced that Mme. Jeanine Beaubien, founder and director of the Montreal International theatre, La Poudriere, who is highly respected in theatrical circles, will act as adjudicator at the festival. This means that Mme. Beaubien will evaluate each play as it is being presented and, at the end of each evening's performance wil take the stage herself and give the audience and actors the benefit of her expert comments and criticisms.

On opening night (March 10) the Peterborough Theatre Guild will present The Imaginary Invalid, a 17th century French farce translated and adapted by Miles Malleson. The Lion in Winter, a historical comedy by James Golden will be performed by the Belleville Theatre Guild on March 11 while A Taste of Honey, a drama by Shelagh Delaney will be offered by the Cornwal Little Theatre on the 12th. The last presentation of the festival will be Jimmy Shine, a modern comedy by Murray Schisgal, to be performed by the Camelot Little Theatre of Ottawa. These four plays were selected at the preliminary adjudications held in each centre from among the original six entries.

Mr. Endicott who was the founder of the Peterborough Theatre Guild, formed in 1965, has been active in the EODL for 10 years and has been a governor of the Dominion Drama Festival for eight years. He emphasized that he was pleased with the calibre of thq plays that were entered and said the program is a balanced and interesting one since it includes such a wide variety of plays ranging from straight drama to historical comedy.

Mr. Endicott also pointed out that this is only the second year in which preliminary adjudications were held. This is the procedure by which the plays are judged at the dress rehearsal stage by an expert. Mrs. Norma Springford, in the case of this festival, decided whether they conformed to the standards required for a festival. This process, Mr. Endicott feels, has raised the artistic standard of the presentations at the festival.

Ross Allan, who is responsible for promoting youth participation in the festival, reported that Eric Runacres, director of Hastings county board of education has approved of the plan to prepare high school students for this cultural event by providing them with a theatre guide and some preliminary instruction in order to develop their powers of critical appreciation.

Concrete Poles For Dundas St.

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission yesterday approved an expenditure of $2,200 for cement power poles along Dundas Street East from Bleecker Ave. to First Street when reconstruction commences.

The utilities commission had weighed the merits of wooden poles as against the concrete power supporters and decided he added expense would be more attractive and longer-lasting, in keeping with the section of Dundas St. West under construction.

"After all, that's our showcase," said Mayor J. Russell Scott. "We've very little to dress up the streets with."

The PUC anticipates future installation of this type of pole along the entire stretch of Dundas St. East, from the new bridge to Bleecker Ave.

Total expenditure for the new poles in two stages, is anticipated at a cost of $7,100.

Gambling May Not Be Legal But It Sure Is Popular

Belleville district residents are becoming lottery minded.

Since last summer two 50-50 lotteries have been organized in the city and the take in each is rapidly increasing, with the monthly pot in one now reaching nearly $3,500.

The Belleville CN Yardmen commenced their 50-50 lottery month prize totalling $725.

Since then the monthly pot has mounted rapidly and in January amounted to $3,401.

Another 50-50 lottery is that operated by Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion which commenced last November with a first month prize of $915.

With the so-called 50-50 lotteries, the monthly prizes represent half of the total amount realized from ticket sales, the balance being retained by the sponsoring organization.

Profits from the Canadian Legion lottery are earmarked to asist in the construction of the new Legion hall on Pinnacle Street.

The CN Yardmen are also planning a clubhouse on the waterfront in the Belleville harbor area.

The above two are the only major lotteries licensed in the city, although city licensing officer Gary Reid says there are one or two other lotteries confined to club membership.

But two local service clubs operate bingos with prizes ranging from $300 to $500 for each event.

Authority to operate lotteries or bingos by provincial legislation is limited to charitable organizations and all have to be licensed by the local municipality.

If the lottery prize amounts to more than $3,500 applica- to assist in the construction of tion for licensing approval must also be made to the finance and commercial affairs department in Toronto.

In addition to the raffles operated by the local organizations, lottery tickets from out of the province with big prize possibilities are also readily obtainable.

These raffle tickets range all the way from the ever-popular Irish Sweepstakes, to lotteries operated in other provinces, including Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and even state lotteries from across the border.

Sale of out-of-the-province lottery tickets in Ontario is, of course, illegal but authorities for the most part adopt the shut-eye policy.

A year or so ago, representatives of the Belleville United Community Services suggested operation of a lottery as a money-making venture but the idea was dropped.

But the lucky winners and the sponsoring organizations are not the only ones to benefit from local lotteries.

The city also stands to benefit to some extent and last year took in about $200 through its licensing department.

Prince Edward Plugged By Latest Snowfall

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County residents again were taken by storm fell, drifting across streets when seven inches of snow and county roads.

Schools remained closed for the second consecutive day as county plows worked steadily to open snow-plugged roads.

A spokesman at Prince Edward County barns observed road conditions today were "terrible".

He remarked that although the snow was light, heavy winds made visibility poor. Snowplow operators were reported making "little headway" as they attempted to clear roads during lulls in the storm.

Driving conditions were described as more hazardous in the Cherry Valley and Milford areas than in other parts of the county.

A total of 15.2 inches of snow has been dumped on Picton during the two - day period.

Although driving conditions are hazardous owing to bad visibility, the Picton police department reported no accidents last night.

A spokesman for the Picton Public Works Department described the storm as "a miniature crisis" and added "It wouldn't be so bad if people would leave us alone."

He said that 12 full-time public works employees have worked 19 to 20-hour days since the storm broke Monday night.

Three snowplows worked steadily yesterday, but it was necessary to rent three trucks and an extra loader to clear Picton streets last night.

The public works spokesman reflected that Main Street had been cleared but the work seemed in vain following last night's snowfall.

"Just trying to keep up with it is our biggest problem."

Taxi drivers are steadily transporting town residents to and from their jobs and from their homes to the shopping areas.

None of the cab companies was attempting out-of-town calls this morning because of storm conditions.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police reported two minor accidents this morning.

The mailmen in Prince Edward County have been temporarily stayed from their appointed rounds until roads are cleared.

Picton Postmaster Robert Carter said there will be no rural mail delivery in Prince Edward County today.

Couriers attempting their routes yesterdav often were unsuccessful and the postmaster noted "very little mail" was delivered

TV's Image

Not Canadian content but rather excellent programming is what is wanted on television today, Patrick Watson (former co-host of the now-defunct CBC program This Hour Has Seven Days) told the Canadian Club of Toronto recently.

It was a hard-hitting address in which Watson called for a public broadcasting system independent of advertisers. "Most commercials lie," Watson said bluntly, and he called on his audience to insist that advertising "call attention to availability, function and price of the product, and not raise impossible hopes for the scratching of all our emotional itches."

What about violence? According to Watson this results less from violence shown than from the desires created by television. The medium, he said, "generated a part of it, not in news reports of violent events, but in programming about the good life, creating insatiable appetites, unrealized myths, unachievable expectations and all the anger and frustration that must follow them."

Watson continued in blunt fashion. Much of television, he said, is a "con job" that does us more harm than good. On public affairs programming, he said that "much that poses as controversy is mock controversy, ritual confrontation, the playing out of journalistic fads, off the target or obsolete and irreverent."

We could point to recent examples. A CBC newscast on Saturday said what amounted to "open warfare" between troops and civilians was going on in Belfast. Perhaps it was, but it can have been on only a limited scale (one soldier, two civilians dead) and in the usual anarchist, ghetto areas of the city. In the summer the CBC talked of the threat of civil war in Northern Ireland, but this was far from the truth. The same kind of misrepresentation and exaggeration has characterized reports from other trouble spots.

Watson's comments are a reminder of the need of the Canadian public to sharpen their critical faculties, and not be taken in by everything that is served up to them.

Astronauts Home

The Apollo 14 astronauts are home from yet another exploration of the moon, and while the world is now accustomed to these visitations the technical marvel of it all is still a cause for wonderment.

It is a reminder of the observation that a sense of our own insignificance in the cosmic scheme of things is not a bad thing to carry round with us. This latest flight was not without its moments of drama, but the battles with balky computers and docking mechanisms served only to enhance the skills with which the astronauts and mission control people are so amply endowed.

Another Apollo flight is scheduled for the summer. Between it and the one just concluded the world's store of scientific knowledge should surely be further enriched; for if they are to prove anything it is that the earth and the moon and the stars and other planets are part of a universe which in many ways is still beyond man's comprehension.

Sobriety Is The Aim

Drunk driving is one of the major causes of traffic accidents and in this country we could do worse than emulate what is being done in West Germany to tackle this problem.

German Features says that a massive campaign has been launched under the banner "Aktion Fahr ohne Promille (roughly translated, "Action for driving with a zero blood-alcohol content"). Singing stars, politicians and athletes are lending their support, and filling stations are distributing window signs to drivers to emphasize the virtues of sober driving.

Headed by Transport Minister Georg Leber, the government is spending $137,500 on the campaign.

Meanwhile in the United States, where drunk driving is the leading cause of traffic deaths, one city is taking drastic — and as it turns out — effective action. The city is Chicago where Supervising Traffic Judge Raymond Burke has been imposing automatic seven-day jail terms in cases where alcohol is involved. The result: a sharp decrease in fatal accidents.

A Veteran Journalist Looks at Report on Media

The following is an extract from a recent speech in the Senate by veteran Canadian journalist and senator Gratton O'Leary. He was speaking on the Report on the Mass Media.

Honorable senators, my first word must be to say that I think, on the whole, the inquiry undertaken by Senator Keith Davey into the Mass Media has been a good thing. I think it has been a good thing because, on the whole, it rescued the press from a state of complacency and euphoria in which it had dwelt all too long. Socrates once said that the unexamined life was unfit to be lived. That applies to the communications media, to organizations as well as to individuals.

I am afraid that as a journalist I have to say, quite frankly, that in my view the press of Canada has been living an unexamined life. I have attended many meetings of editors and publishers, mainly held once a year, and what you got from such a meeting was a pentecostal feast of self praise, a sort of mutual admiration society. If they admitted to guilt at all, they swept everything under the rug of venerable and sanctified cliche about the freedom of the press.

I have spent many years of my life as a journalist trying to impress upon my colleagues of the press that there is no such thing as press freedom, that all the newspaper owner, publisher, editor or reporter had was a tradition woven into law, which meant that the freedom of the spoken word was made the freedom of the printed word. Freedom of speech, freedom of the spoken word, was transmitted to the written word, and the little publisher in his garret, getting out a tiny pamphlet, had just as much freedom, just as much privilege, as the most powerful and the most wealthy newspaper publisher. I am afraid that this has not been too often understood. The newspaper publisher, editor or reporter has no more freedom, no more privilege of any kind than the humblest citizens among us. That has been stated again and again by the highest courts in the United Kingdom, the United States and even in Canada. I repeat that there is no such thing as press freedom. There is only freedom of the printed word, just as there is freedom of the spoken word. That is what the press has; that and nothing more.

Honorable senators, I am sorry to have to say that I just cannot go along with a press council. I would object to a press council the chairman of which, whoever he is, is appointed by the state. I am suspicious of the state. I do not want the state to have anything much to do with the press or if you like, with any other activity in Canada. In any event, I do not see how a press council would bring any good to the press. It has certainly brought no good to the press of England. England has had a press council for eight or ten years, and it has been headed by very able people, the last of whom was Lord Devlin, one of the most distinguished jurists.

What has happened to the press of England under a press council? I lived through the golden years of British journalism. Those were the years when you had C. P. Scott of the Manchester Guardian and Henry Nevinson who was a knight errant of journalism. Those were the years when you had E. C. Montague, and you had Justin M'Carthy, the great historian, who was writing the leaders for the News and Leader. Those were the years when A. G. Gardiner, the well known author of Prophets, Priests and Kings and Pillars of Society, was the editor of the Daily News. Those were the days of Wickan Stead of the London Times, Northcliffe, and J. A. Spender of the Westminster Gazette. Those were the giants of journalism.

I was in England about two months ago, and naturally, I took a good look at the British press. The British press today is little short of a disaster. Even the London Times, over which our own Lord Thomson has charge, is not nearly as good as it was 10 or 15 years ago. He has improved the financial page a bit, but otherwise it is not as good a newspaper.

Humane Society's Valuable Work

The following letter appeared recently in the Picton Gazette.

The Humane Society really is . . . humane, that is!

How many times have you hesitated to call in the Humane Society in the case of some known abuse of an animal, fearing its members to be a group of ogres whose main purpose is to collect poor unfortunate animals, herd them into a pound for a waiting period and then consign them to an ignominious death at the end of that time.

For those of you who are of this opinion and who are skeptical as to the value of the Humane Society in the community, following is a true account of a recent occurrence involving a valuable dog, owned originally by a Prince Edward County Kennel.

The dog, being a Canadian Kennel Club registered female, was tattooed with a registered number on the inner flank of her back leg, shortly after she was whelped. In due course, she was sold to a supposedly reputable person from a neighboring city, said buyer having previously purchased a registered male dog from the same Kennel. All this took place several years ago and, presumably, as far as the Kennel was concerned, all was well.

Imagine the shock and chagrin of the original owners upon receiving a phone call from the Humane Society in Toronto, 150 miles from the home of the aforementioned animals, stating that they had in their possession the miserable remains of what was once a beautiful animal, and that by searching the files of the Canadian Kennel Club they had finally traced the dog to them.

How easily it would have been to just ignore this wretched beast until the waiting period had ended and then let her be mercifully 'put to sleep'; but, no, the Society, and one very fine member in particular, noticed the tattooed number under the matted filth on her flank, and personally searched through the CKC registration files to find the owner's name. The purchaser was identified and the Humane Society of that city was contacted only to find that not only had the female dog been terribly mistreated, but that the previously purchased male dog had come under the Society's care because of neglect and abuse, and had been removed to a proper home. The Toronto member then searched deeper to find the name of the original Kennel owners and notified them as to the plight of their dog. Needless to say, they lost no time getting to Toronto to have her restored to their possession.

Because people are quick to criticise and slow to praise, this story is being made public, not only as a means to publicly thank the humane society in general, and one very fine member in particular, but also to help enlighten an ill-informed public as to the far-reaching efforts of the society to be humane in very instance, rather than destructive, as most people think.

Perhaps you know of some similarily unfortunate animal and have hesitated to call for help. The Ontario Humane Society, Quinte Branch, can be reached by telephoning Belleville, 967-1423.

An Animal Lover

Man's Best Friend

By Dr. Claud Ducolon in the Kingston Whig-Standard

A pathetic "personal" notice has appeared daily in an American newspaper for three years now: "Lost — a black Persian cat, answers to Fluffy. If someone has seen, contact Box 7 — $200 reward!"

Pets are becoming increasingly popular in North American society because interpersonal relationships are diminishing; competition, either social or economic, is on the rise, and loneliness in the separated and aged is alarming. And many feel that pets can be trusted.

The spiral of personal isolation, apart from polite neighborliness, is orbiting into seclusion and mental asphyxia. Tranquilizers are used to reduce personal tensions. Alcohol numbs the brain into a pleasant lethargy. Yet the need for each human to have an unguarded relationship with another living being, whether human or animal, is expressing itself more and more as people search every crevice of their emotions for satisfaction.

VD an Increasing Problem

Montreal Star

An estimated 500,000 Canadians are suffering from venereal disease, and most of them either do not know they have it or are ignoring it. In Ontario alone the number of reported cases doubled between 1965 and 1969. A Toronto school trustee said recently that VD is "more rampant than ever" in that city.

There have been significant increases elsewhere — in the United States, Britain and Scandinavia. Recently the World Health Organization reported that gonorrhea now ranks alongside influenza as the most common infectious disease in the U.S. and has "got out of control." California's public health director says that VD has reached such "absolutely epidemic" proportions that medical authorities are unable to deal effectively with it; and he points out that the 2,000 new cases of gonorrhea reported each week in his state represent only about one-sixth of the actual total.

The disease is not restricted to particular groups. It is as likely to strike an upper-middle-class suburb as a city slum. It is no more common among hippies than among "straight" citizens. At a time when VD is spreading fastest among teen agers, these facts are worth pondering. According to Dr. R. L. Persad, medical officer for VD in the Ontario Department of Health: "The new youth cult, with its new freedom of permissiveness means there is more sexual intercourse—ergo, more VD."

A Los Angeles medical authority believes that public apathy and stigma attached to VD are the primary reasons for its uncontrolled spread. While the answer, of course, is not scare stories, VD should no longer be treated as a taboo subject. It should be included in sex education courses in schools. It should be discussed frankly and factually by adult organizations as well.

Capitalism, Socialist Theorists, and the World's Ills

Montreal La Presse—It could be said that North America now is passing through a crisis of pessimism and defeatism. This crisis probably arises from the great thirst for equity and justice felt by the younger generation from which has sprung a new school of often-moralistic sociologists and economists.

If their statements are to be believed, our society is dangerously sick. Some even believe it is condemned beyond help. Their diagnosis is based on the fact that there are still unemployed people, poor people and welfare recipients in our world and they blame capitalism, the bourgeoisie and the rich in general for these abominations.

This thesis . . . appears like a dogma in the eyes of many, especially the young. This is understandable because it has the merit of being simple and entirely in the spirit of the old dualism: On one side the good, that is the poor and uneducated; on the other the evil . . . the rich, dishonest capitalists. . . .

There is no longer any question of minimizing the great responsibilities of government. But all the same, it is necessary to avoid false perspectives. . . . It is true there are poor and even destitute people in our society of abundance. . . . It is true that the capitalist system has not enriched the whole world but it must be recognized that it has without reservation given everyone the liberty to criticize. . . .

It is also trickery to insinuate that governments and fortunate classes purposely increase unemployment so the poor will remain in misery. . . .

Some over-simplifiers present the government as the jealous holder of power and money. Now this is false. Power and money do not come from the government, nor from the sky but from the taxpayer. . . .

In Quebec the problem is being considered seriously. The Nepveu-Castonguay commission has just recommended a system guaranteeing the needy an income up to $6,700 a year for families with five children.

This is certainly a bold initiative. For it to be realized, the taxpayer will have to pay more but it will be up to the state to see that industry also does its fair share and that everyone conforms with goodwill to this new . . . law.

Basic Constitutional Points to Be Put Before Legislators

automatically included under a provision that would give any province with 25 per cent of the Canadian population veto power. This might someday include growing British Columbia.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said the proposal is "a considerable improvement" over the Fulton-Favreau formula accepted in 1964 by government leaders but rejected by Quebec a year later.

Because the Fulton-Favreau formula didn't give Quebec veto power and required approval of all provinces for amendments on federal-provincial division of powers, Quebec nationalists described it as "a constitutional dog-collar" and forced its rejection.

Mr. Bourassa, anticipating a fight at home, was guarded. He said his province might accept the formula.

Other premiers ranged from reluctant to enthusiastic in acceptance of the formula.

Ontario's John Robarts, who provided the initial thrust for the current round of talks, said his last conference made "substantial progress."

Nova Scotia's Gerald Regan, attending his first conference, was among the enthusiasts.

"While it may appear somewhat cumbersome, it really reflects what Canada is all about," he said of the regional aspects of the amending formula.

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba was an enthusiast and Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan gave the formula grudging acceptance.

The initial impetus of the conference Monday towards agreement on the formula faltered slightly as Quebec put forward income security proposals.

Premier Thatcher said the proposals might "wreck the federal system." However Prime Minister Trudeau and other premiers felt they could be met.

The conference statement quoted Ottawa as saying that the Quebec proposals on family allowances, old age pensions, income supplements and the Quebec and Canada pension plans are "very similar" to federal plans in these areas.

New Brunswick's Richard Hatfield, another newcomer to the conference, appeared intrigued by the Quebec proposals. The money would come from the federal government, but there would be increased provincial jurisdiction.

"More input at the ground level," Premier Hatfield said with interest. But he considered it essential that Ottawa retain sufficient power to aid needy regions.

The conference statement said reduction of regional disparities should be referred to in the preamble and body of a new constitution.

Forty Attend Youth Weekend

MARMORA (Special) — A Youth Weekend at the Marmora Free Methodist Church attracted 40 young people of the district.

Rev. K. J. Snider of the Free Methodist Church in Peterborough addressed the young people at a dinner held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Hardy on Saturday evening.

A group called the Happy Traces provided instrumental music during the evening and at the church services on Sunday.

Quake Toll Moves Higher

death toll as one, and said that was from a heart attack.

In the worst-hit San Fernando Valley area, roads were ruckled and chopped with deep cracks.

A strong smell of gas from broken mains hung over the suburbs and water coursed down gutters from cracked pipes and swimming pools.

Many residents of the San Fernando foothills were left without light and gas.

A big cleanup already was under way. In downtown Los Angeles, and in communities in the San Fernando Valley, whose western edge is but 10 miles from the quake's centre, the glass and bricks and crumbled mortar that littered streets and yards were being scooped up and carted away.

Several major freeways remained closed because of crumpled paving or fallen overpasses.

Scientists attributed the tremor to a little-known fault that rates as a pipsqueak. It is the Soledad Canyon fault in the rugged San Gabriel Mountains. A scientist who visited the scene found signs of vertical slippage —one side of the earth fracture higher than the other—but said he could easily step across the crack in the earth.

Gov. Reagan at one point urged evacuation of 250,000 persons near Van Norman Lakes after the dam cracked and began leaking, but only 100,000 were actually ordered out.

Van Norman Lakes, twin reservoirs, contain water piped south from the High Sierras and when full hold 6,700 million gallons. Both lakes were being drained into river beds and officials said safe levels should be achieved by tonight.

Aftershocks, some of magnitude 5 or more, continued by the hundreds and were expected to last for months.

The first massive shake lasted nearly a minute and caused widespread alarm among Los Angeles County's nearly 7 million residents. Windows shattered by the tens of thousands. Chimneys toppled. Roads buckled or cracked. Dishes and books fell and furniture flip-flopped.

Despite noticeable swaying of tall downtown buildings a survey showed they came through well, although some had window breakage. Engineers called this a tribute to modern "earthquake-proof" design. Since a 13-storey height limit was removed in the 1950s, buildings have soared 40 storeys or more.

The damage to homes and apartments was not immediately calculable, but officials said thousands suffered varying degrees of loss.

Insurance sources said little of the damage was likely to be covered.

Earthquake insurance is available on a special risk basis, but it is so expensive few buy it. Most policies have a five-per-cent deductible provision. Thus on coverage of a $30,000 home the first $1,500 of damage would be excluded.

Yukon Sights Apollo Re-entry

TRENTON (Staff) — The crew of a Canadian Forces Yukon crossing the South Pacific yesterday had a bird's-eye-view of a space-age spectacle.

In the skies, 20 miles south of Auckland, New Zealand, personnel aboard service flight 5212, witnessed the fiery re-entry of the Apollo 14 command module into the earth's atmosphere.

They reported, by radio, to the flight operations centre here, sighting of the bright orange object changing to silver on its descent high above them.

The Yukon, from Trenton's 437 Squadron, is on a round-the-world tour and was en route to Fiji when Apollo 14 was observed coming in for splash-down, 897 miles south of American Samoa.

Valentine Cream Cake

By MARY MOORE

You can buy a pair of 8" crimped heavy foil hear-shaped cake pans for 39 cents, which will be handy to use every Valentine's Day for heart-shaped dishes.

In preparing this beautiful cake dessert you must make and chill the lemon filling first.

After reading the list of ingredients you will see that this cake batter is inexpensive and easy. If you do not want to make the cake from scratch bake and cool two 8" heart-shaped layer cakes from a white layer cake mix. Obviously this cake may be baked in regular layer cake tins and assembled in the same way.

VALENTINE CREAM CAKE

Filling:
2 large eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
4 tsps. flour
6 tbsps. soft butter
Grated rind of 1 lemon
3 tbsps. lemon juice
1 cup whipping (32 per cent) cream (for sides)

Cake (one egg):
6 tbsps. shortening (half butter if desired)
1 ¼cups sugar
1 large egg
1 tsp. vanilla
1⅞ cups sifted cake and pastry flour (2 cups minus 2 tbsps.)
1½ tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
⅞ cup milk

To make filling combine all filling ingredients (except cream) in top of double boiler and mix thoroughly. Place over gently boiling water and stir constantly until thick. Remove from heat. Cool in pan of ice water, beating occasionally, then chill thoroughly in refrigerator while you make the cake.

To make Cake combine in beater bowl the shortening (or shortening and butter), sugar, egg and vanilla and beat until light. Remove beaters. Sift together sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Fold alternately with milk in thirds, into creamed mixture until blended. Line bottom of 8" heart-shaped pans with greased wax paper and grease sides of pans. Pour in batter evenly. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 23 min. Let rest in pans 5 min. then turn out on racks to cool.

When cakes are cool and filling is cold put one layer on fancy cake plate and cover with half of lemon filling. Cover with second layer and spread with remaining half of filling. Frost sides with unsweetened whipped cream. If desired decorate rim with halved maraschino cherries.

NOTE: This cake may be made 24 hrs. in advance if it is stored well covered in a cold place.

UCW MEETINGS

ROSLIN UCW (PLAINFIELD UNIT)

Mrs. Arnold Dilts spoke on "A Quest for a New Humanity" at the February meeting of the Plainfield Unit UCW held at the home of Mrs. Clayton Hall. Mrs. Dilts stated that man has left footprints on the moon, his voice can travel millions of miles and he accepts no boundary as final. Man is the indispensible ground for hope she said and religion shapes his conduct. She closed by reading a poem by Ethel Chapman.

Earlier, Mrs. Grant Kerr opened the meeting in the usual manner and Mrs. Frank Hodgens who was in charge of devotions used as her theme "pettiness". She was assisted by Alma Kerr who used a skit to underline the theme.

It was reported that four quilts had been made this year and some were to be used for a bale. It was announced that the UCW members were to provide a supper for the young peoples' national weekend at the church. All were reminded of the World Day of prayer on March 5 to be held at Roslin Trinity where the neighboring churches will be entertained.

WEDDINGS

ROBINSON — TWIDDY

FRANKFORD — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Reid, Main Street, Frankford, was the setting for the wedding recently when their niece Paula Suzanne Twiddy, Stockdale, became the bride of John Robinson of Kingston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Twiddy, Stockdale, and the bridegroom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Stockdale. Rev. J. Dunlop officiated at the 10 a.m. ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a short length bridal dress of white raschel lace over taffeta featuring long sleeves with a wedding ring collar. Her bouffant shoulder-length veil was held in place with a lace cap similar in style to the collar of the dress. Her flowers were a crescent of red rosebuds.

The maid of honor was Miss Bethel Twiddy, cousin of the bride of Kingston. She wore a pastel turquoise dress with long sleeves and featuring a cummerbund of white lace with ribbon inserts. Her flowers were yellow roses. Attending the bridegroom was his brother Richard Robinson of Milton.

At the luncheon reception held at noon in the recreation room, the bride's mother received the guests dressed in powder blue silk fortrel knit with a corsage of yello roses. She was assisted by t mother of the bridegroom wearing navy blue crimp crepe dress topped with a corsage of deep pink roses.

For a wedding trip to Montreal the bride changed to a winter white wool dress over which she wore a matching hat and coat ensemble of green and blue check with a corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson will reside in Kingston.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Previous to her recent ma riage, Mrs. John Douglas Robinson (nee Paula Suzanne Twiddy) was honored at a kitchen shower given by Mrs. Ruth McCrory and her sister Cheryl Robinson.

Ann Landers

Housewife Irresistible To Opposite Sex

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is my third letter to you. I have torn up the others because they sounded so stupid. I am determined to mail this one because I need an answer. Will you please tell me why a housewife with five little kids, no beauty on anybody's list (thirty pounds overweight), with a marvelous, devoted husband, gets pounced on by men of all types.

ANN LANDERS

Recently I was talking to the TV repai man about the weather. Without warning he slid his arm around my waist and kissed me on the neck. I nearly passed out. Last week I was chatting with our minister about a recent church service. He suddenly pulled me toward him, kissed me on the lips and whispered, "You are irresistible." Three months ago my doctor made a pass at me in his office. Today the mailman rang my bell and handed me a package. He said there was 60 cents due but he'd settle for a kiss.

What is this madness? I do not give these men any encouragement. I don't want anyone but my own husband. Has the world gone crazy? Please explain. — READY TO RESIGN FROM THE HUMAN RACE.

DEAR READY: My first reaction to your letter was . . . "Ah ha — the Yale boys are writing phony letters again — ". So I checked the postmark and to my surprise I see your letter comes from St. Louis.

I don't know what you've got, honey, but if you find out you ought to bottle it. I have a hunch you're sending out coded vibrations that are being picked up by some local decoding experts.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I used to think, "Oh hell, why no take drugs — get as much pleasure out of life as possible. Th world is in lousy shape. Trouble everywhere you look." Then one day I met a woman with a mentally retarded child. He was a sweet little boy about eight, but he couldn't do much for himself. He was like a two-year-old. His mother had taken the boy all over, trying to get help — hoping and praying that maybe somewhere a doc had something new, something that would help her boy's mind develop.

I began to think about what I was doing to myself. Here was a mother who would give anything in the world if her boy could have a normal brain, and I was screwing mine up with pot and LSD. — freaking out four nights a week. It was like wild. I'm off the junk now and it was easier than I thought. All I needed was to keep reminding myself of that mother and her little boy. The preaching and scare stuff didn't make a dent, but somehow that mother got to me, Ann. Please print my letter. It might mean something to somebody. — OFF IT.

DEAR OFF: Here it is. I hope it connects.

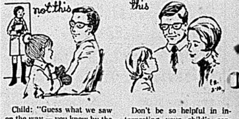
* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please answer a question for me. I am going nuts trying to figure something out. My husband is addicted to TV. The minute he comes home from work he turns on the set. Sometimes he watches for a few minutes then goes to the basement and gets involved with his hobby — model ships and airplanes. If I turn the set off he hollers from th basement, "Leave the TV alone." The same thing happens when he falls asleep in front of the set, after supper. If I turn the TV off he wakes up immediately and gets mad. I can't figure out how he knows whether the TV is off or on. Please explain. — MYSTIFIED IN OL' MISS.

DEAR MISS: A continuous sound can keep some people "relaxed" or asleep. When that sound stops they miss it. This may seem illogical, but it's true.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Child: "Guess what we saw on the way — you know by the street light — up by Jimmy's house — uh, uh, we saw . . . it wasn't a sow . . . uh, uh, it was a big animal."

Mother: "What she's trying to say is we saw a deer run across the road right in front of us."

Don't be so helpful in interpreting your child's conversation or finishing her sentences, or you may stifle her desire to converse. Let her tell a story of an adventure in her own way, even though it may stumbling and slow.

Listen attentively and politely and treat a small child with the same courtesy you would an adult.

THE WIZARD IS FORGOTTEN — When Mercedes Benegbi was younger she used to wish the Wizard of Oz would give her normal arms. But now the eight-year-old Montreal girl, a victim of the drug, thalidomide, never mentions the wizard. Attending School Eases Her Handicap

MONTREAL (CP) — For eight-year-old Mercedes Benegbi, going to school has meant the end of a longing for a magician to give her arms and hands like her playmates.

In the inquisitive but accepting friendship of her school chums she has found little time to agonize over the ravages of her limbs by the drug thalidomide.

At four, life was not so happy. Mercedes longed for the Wizard of Oz to make her normal.

Once she was with other children at kindergarten, the dream and the magic were forgotten. Now in Grade 3 at Chenier school, Mercedes never mentions her wizard.

The children at school are curious about her tiny hands that have no arms, but they don't insist with their questions.

"They are surprised at what they see," says Colette Benegbi Mercedes's mother, "but then it's finished."

When she was younger, Mercedes was fitted with two artificial arms. But today she prefers to do without them, depending on the hands and fingers growing from her shoulders.

Using them she can write, draw and color, hold one end of a skipping rope and play well the $30 electric organ her parents bought her last spring as a therapy device.

"The organ was a good investment because it's given Mercedes so much pleasure," says Mrs. Benegbi.

"That's what my husband and I have set out to do—to make life as easy and as happy as possible for our daughter."

For Mrs. Benegbi, now 43, and her 46-year-old Moroccan-born husband, Marco, a Montreal glass company shipper, it wasn't easy at first.

"The initial shock of having an abnormal child was so great," says Mrs. Benegbi. But never did she want to give up her daughter for adoption.

Persuading parents of thalidomide victims to keep their babies instead of hiding them away in institutions was the first task facing those who would help.

Thalidomide, the now-banned tranquillizer prescribed to child-bearing mothers in the early 1960s, left in its wake 5,000 babies born with cruel deformities, some grotesque, some bearable and some remedied by artificial limbs.

In Canada, 74 of the 115 thalidomide babies survived and many were treated and fitted with artificial limbs at the Rehabilitation Institute of Montreal, given a federal grant for that purpose.

Except for a few who were mentally retarded, the 43 children treated at the institute now are attending regular public schools.

Most are happily accepted by their classmates. Ahead of them are the problems of adolescence. Will they have other kinds of problems to surmount as well?

Says Clare Janelle of the institute's medical social service: "We'll have to wait and see."

Women's Institutes

MELROSE WI

Mrs. F. R. Wellman, district president presented a program on education at the January meeting of the Melrose WI held at the home of Mrs. K. McMeehan. Mrs Wellman began with a questionaire which involved the WI past and present. She continued with a talk about the work of the WI in the community and its outstanding development during the past 50 years. Mrs. Wellman concluded her talk by quoting a poem from the back of the WI magazine Home and Country. She was presented with a sterling silver coffee spoon as a token of appreciation.

Mrs. Charles Bates was in charge of the entertainment part of the program. Scotch songs were sung with the program convener at the piano honoring the Scotch poet Robert Burns whose birthday was on January 25, 1759. His remains rest in the poet's corner in Westminster Abbey. In the absence of Mrs. Jack English (co-convener for the Scotch program) Mrs. R. Badgley read her prepared paper entitled "Scotland Forever". Mrs. Bates in Scotch costume assisted by Mrs. M Lazier appeared in a skit which included Scotch characters. Mrs. N. Demille was the winner of the contest conducted by Mrs. G. Blatherwick.

During the business part of the meeting a letter was read from the Provincial Board reminding the branch women's Institutes that the 75th anniversary of the WI comes up in February 1972 and every branch is asked to celebrate.

A motion was carried that the $50 donation from Melrose WI towards the building addition at Ontario Agricultural College will be the last contribution to the fund.

It was announced that the 23rd officers' conference comes up on April 27, 28 and 29 and the pooling fee is $35. The PRO Mrs. G. McLaren plans to attend. Members were told that the euchre parties held at the township school have been satisfactory and a third one will be held on February 4.

Mrs. Ruth Long reported on resolutions and stated that none had been dealt with as yet in the branch. She quoted an appropriate poem to conclude her remarks.

At the close of the meeting the hostess and the social committee served refreshments.

Parisian Night Club Singer Starts New Career in Toronto

FRENCH GIRL "TOO EUROPEAN" — Chanteuse Ann Liber found it difficult to get work in Montreal when she came to Canada from France. After a few engagements she was told her interpretations were "too European." Miss Liber, a 27-year-old Parisienne, now is trying to get her career started in Toronto.
(CP Photo)

TORONTO (CP) — It is extremely difficult—even impossible—for a French chanteuse who has talent but is not yet recognized as a "big star" in France to make a name for herself in Quebec television and radio, or in Montreal's small, intimate night spots, Anna Liber has found.

The Parisian singer first went to Montreal when she came to Canada, but in 10 months she couldn't find enough work in the world's second French city. In fact, she says, after making a few appearances on TV and in two small clubs, or "boites a chanson" she was told that her songs and interpretations were "too European."

So a few months ago she decided to start a new career in Toronto. Band leader Moxie Whitney, after having heard one of her tapes, told her he would put her on in the Black Knight Room of the Royal York Hotel—if only she could sing half her songs in English.

Right now she is trying hard to learn English, and has made a few TV appearances here. Recently she was part of the entertainment troupe that went to Cyprus to perform for the Canadian UN forces there.

Miss Liber is 27, dark-haired, vivacious and with all the charm one expects in a Parisian artist. She has a warm voice, somewhat in the style of Juliette Greco. But she shows a tinge of bitterness about not having been accepted by the French-speaking artistic milieu in Montreal.

Wearing a "gavroche"—or street-urchin-type cap—on her closely cropped hair, she expressed bewilderment at the "big misunderstanding" and lack of comprehension that exist between the promoters in Quebec and the foreign artists there.

"In Paris," she said, "everyone thinks that it is charming to be a Quebecois. But to be French from France in Montreal—that means you are a "maudit Francais.'

"They send Quebec performers to Paris, but they don't want to accept singers who come from France to work in Quebec. They only want Quebec artists, whereas in Paris everybody is welcome—and especially the Quebec artists—if they have talent."

She said artists like Monique Leyrac, Felix Leclerc and Gilles Vigneault were given enthusiastic receptions in Paris, even before they were stars in Quebec.

"The artistic world should be above differences in races, all over the world."

RIVER VALLEY WI

The theme of the February meeting of the River Valley WI which was held on Thursday at the centre was "How the Institute could be promoted in the year ahead which begins on April 1". A playlet on this subject was presented by three members. The president, who had just returned from a convention in Toronto gave much information regarding Institute activities to the two enumerators Mrs. Ernest Carr and Mrs. James Hoard who promised to attend the next meeting.

The program opened with a message on homemaking. A report of the 60th anniversary held in October 1970 was read by the secretary and Mrs. Roy Bush read her poem composed for the occasion.

The resolution convener, Mrs. Percy MacMullen who has held that office for six years gave an informative message on the subject. She outlined resolutions that had been sustained at the Provincial Board meeting and also at the national convention in Manitoba.

Mrs. Roy Tucker chaired the meeting. It was authorized to send $35 to the Guelph officers' conference. Mrs. George Grills will be representing the Rivery Valley WI.

The public relations officer displayed a large picture of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother when she officially opened the new building at Denman College. She was the presiient of the Sandringham WI in 1940 and has always taken a deep interest in the movement.

The ACWW convener told about the County Farm Bureau in Minnesota entertaining 34 field service students on four farms. These students came from 20 countries. Mrs. Philip Conley was in charge of the song contest.

The "pennies for friendship" were gathered. There will be seven card parties in February and March and a potluck supper for the River Valley community on February 19 at the centre. A generous donation was received from Mr. and Mrs. Earl Morrow who are unable to attend the card parties. The March meeting will be based on historical research with Mrs. Ed Kent as hostess.

The members displayed a large array of old post cards which everyone found attractive and interesting. The hostess at the meeting which was attended by 17 members was Mrs. Philip Conley. The lunch committee served refreshments in the kitchen and at the close of the social hour Mrs. Charles Wilson voiced appreciative thanks to everyone who had contributed to the meeting.

OTTAWA (CP) — Mothers nursing babies should not take birth control pills, the Canadian Pediatric Association cautions. In a statement released at the 40th annual meeting of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, the association said that in experiments with animals, conducted with steroids which include hormones such as estrogen and progesteron, which are contained in the pill it was shown that a single dose given to mothers with new-born children at critical times can cause sterility for life.

Artists' Choice Show at Library Gallery

One of the rare occasions when a painting enthusiast (who has just finished his first picture) can exhibit his work side by side with that of more experienced painters is at the Artists Choice show currently being held at the Belleville Library Gallery.

The show which opened on Tuesday, Feb. 9 and will continue till Feb. 27, is an exhibition of paintings by members of the Belleville Art Association who were invited to send one or two works each, regardless of their experience in painting. This is a non-juried show which means that the paintings do not have to go through a preliminary judging process in order to be approved for exhibition.

The show consists of 35 paintings contributed by Dorothy Brown, Lillian Peddie, Oscar Bonin, Georgina Graham, Kathryn Garland, Gwynn Noyes, Eva [illegible], Donnah Cameron, Bea Williamson, Ethel Evans, Audrey Davies, Evelyn Luttrell, Muriel Andrews, Charles Booe, Lois Clarke and Joan Reive.

The Belleville Art Association is a member of the Quinte Arts Council and all those interested in developing their interest and talent in art are eligible for membership. The officers of the association are Oscar Bonin, president, Mrs. Allan Cameron, vice president; Mrs. Les Lennox, recording secretary; Mrs. O. F. Bradley, correspondence secretary, and Mrs. Doug Duminie, treasurer.

Successful Living

Don't Give Up On Your Teenagers

By DORIS CLARK

Youth is so eager to grow up! Parents are so eager to keep their children young! How do you strike a balance?

We don't want the little girls to turn into young ladies overnight. On the other hand, we don't want them to stay dependent on their own adults any longer than they must. Living means growing, developing, reaching maturity and independence.

We don't want our young teen-agers to be so knowing and so worldly wise that they are old before they are grown up. We don't want them to look at the world with disillusioned eyes at 16, with teen-age type experiences already old hat.

It takes the wisdom of Solomon to help our boys and girls stay on the beam. Keep trying. Solomon was just a human being and he managed quite a bit.

• • •

Dear Doris: My boy friend and I are quite sure of our love for each other. We'll get married in two years, but we do not want to wait that long before we can express our love in sexual ways.

We can communicate about such things and are mature enough to handle the responsibilities that such a relationship may bring. But we know too little about methods of birth control.

How effective are the various methods, ad what do you recommend? — Nineteen and In Love

Dear Nineteen: No contraceptive method is 100 percent. The Pill is the nearest to it while the intra-uterine device is about 97.5 percent. But accidents can and do happen with disconcerting regularity.

What I would rather send you is a pile of evidence (or the name of a book) to the effect that there is not a blessed thing wrong with waiting for this fufilment — and a good deal that is right about it. Contrary to popular opinion, everybody is not "doing it".

Physical expression should go with a lifetime commitment and that is only made at the altar.

• • •

Dear Doris: I am separated; have a daughter who is five. I have been going with a man, but now he seldom comes to see me.

We used to see each other nearly every night and we got along so well that he gave me a little inexpensive ring that meant just as much to both of us as the other kind.

I always thought his relatives liked me but I honestly think that when he moved in with them his aunt helped change his mind about coming to see me. He was even trying to help me get my divorce. — Let Down

Dear Let Down: It calls for a showdown. He is trying to get out from under the understanding which apparently existed between you. Let him — but find out where you are at.

Next move should be for a divorce. It could be that your friend's aunt feels he gets nowhere by going around with a married woman. Separation is not divorce.

• • •

Is it better to put up with misunderstandings or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.

Commons Will Debate Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment was scheduled to raise its contentious head in Commons debate today on the second-last day devoted to dissecting Finance Minister E. J. Benson's Dec. 3 budget statement.

Both today and Thursday have been set aside to finish debate on a government motion calling for approval of its current economic policy, with opposition members expected to get in full-scale critical licks over what they maintain are insufficient federal measures to expand the economy.

The sittings should spark the House. With the spotlight trained on the nearby federal-provincial conference Tuesday the Commons plodded through a drowsy day that even the subject of pollution failed to enliven.

Members spent the first part of the day considering the government's reorganization bill in committe-of-the-whole, focusing on the part of the omnibus bill that would create a federal environment department.

Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) introduced three amendments.

One, which would have permitted the establishment of a national environmental advisory council to comment on the progress of anti-pollution efforts, was ruled out of order on the ground it would involve the expenditure of money.

A second, designed to give the proposed environment minister jurisdiction over all federal pollution matters rather than those not designated by Parliament to other ministers, was defeated.

A third to insert "prevention and control of pollution" into the bill as one of the minister's duties was set aside for later consideration.

Donald MacDonald (PC—Egmont) claimed the insertion was necessary to ensure that the department would work to prevent pollution, and not just to take "nice-guy" measures to control it.

C. M. Drury, treasury Board President, maintained that the word pollution was too difficult to define, and said the issue was covered by the bill's inclusion of the minister's duty to "protect and enhance the quality of the natural environment."

Later in the day third and final reading was given to three bills, including one to expand the scope of the Export Development Corp., another to tighten trade ties between Canada and New Zealand, and the third to give the Dominion Bureau of Statistics access to corporate and personal income tax returns.

Air Pollution Fines Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — Fines of up to $200,000 for industries found guilty of air pollution are provided for in a proposed clean air act given first reading Tuesday in the Commons.

The legislation makes the elimination of air pollution and preservation of clean air a top priority in the soon-to-be-established department of the environment.

Forestry Minister Jack Davis, who is to be in charge of the new department, said air pollution costs in Canada—including health, housing and building maintenance, laundry and cleaning costs—now amounts to $1.5 billion a year.

Under the bill, the federal government would be empowered to:

—Set national air quality objectives;

—Set national emission standards where there is a significant danger to health or where international agreements on air pollution are involved;

—Set specific emission standards for all works, undertakings or businesses under federal authority;

—Regulate the composition of fuels that may be produced or imported into Canada.

Penalties for infringing the emission standards would be as high as $200,000. Fines of up to $5,000 daily are provided for producing or importing prohibited fuels.

Contaminated Air Makes Ills Worse

TORONTO (CP) — A medical consultant to the Ontario health department said Tuesday contaminated air apparently does not cause chronic bronchitis, lung cancer, asthma or heart disease. But it does make them worse.

Dr. Max Fitch told a conference on air pollution that little is known about actual disease caused by polluted air and still less about the long-term effects of slight pollution on general health.

"But we now have presumptive evidence that it plays a part in a number of disease processes and that it probably interferes with full physical development to some extent."

Dr. Fitch referred to these research projects:

—The health department now is studying a group of asthmatic children to see whether they have attacks of asthma when air contamination is high. Suspicion is that air pollution brings on attacks.

—Another study had shown that heart-attack victims have a much lower chance of surviving if the attack occurs when there are high levels of carbon monoxide in the air.

—Another, in Britain, had established a statistical relationship between air-pollution episodes and incidents of chronic bronchitis.

—Statistics showed that although the over-all death rate from lung cancer is twice as high among city-dwellers as among farmers, the rates among rural and urban non-smokers showed little or no difference.

No Decision Reached On Bid for Home Oil

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Tuesday no decision has yet been reached on the bid by a Kentucky firm to take over Home Oil of Calgary, last major Canadian-owned oil company.

Discussions are still going on, he told the Commons in replying to T. C. Douglas, the New Democrat leader.

Mr. Douglas earlier had unsuccessfully sought an emergency debate on what he said is the imminent takeover of Home by Ashland Inc. of Kentucky.

Mr. Douglas asked the government to exercise the same powers as it had last year to prevent Dennison uranium mines from falling into the control of non-residents.

Mr. Sharp said the case with oil is "not quite as clear" as it had been with uranium.

MP Wants More Pay

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians should pay their federal members of Parliament more money if they want full-time value from them, Alastair Gillespie, Liberal MP for Toronto Etobicoke, said Tuesday.

Addressing the Toronto Liberal Businessmen's Club, he urged acceptance of the Beaupre commission report which suggested a raise to $25,000 plus expenses for members of Parliament.

Present pay rate for MPs, which has not been altered since 1963, is $12,000 plus $6,000 tax-free expenses.

Allan Lawrence Close on Heels Of William Davis

TORONTO (CP) — Mines Minister Allan Lawrence is hot on the heels of Education Minister William Davis in the campaign for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, campaign managers said Tuesday.

The campaign strategists for Mr. Davis, Mr. Lawrence and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch agreed that the two men each could have about 600 delegates committed to them on the first ballot in Friday's voting to choose a successor to retiring Premier John Robarts.

To win, a candidate will need 875 votes from among the 1,748 delegates attending the convention which starts today with policy discussions and an evening tribute to Mr. Robarts.

The upsurge in apparent support for Allan Lawrence has given added impetus to the campaigns of Mr. Welch, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs.

In a series of interviews, the campaign managers for these three men said their candidates now are in position to become the consensus choice of the delegates in the event of a knockdown battle between Mr. Davis and Allan Lawrence.

However, they all stressed that there is a large number of uncommitted delegates, and that delegates committed to a specific candidate on the first ballot need not necessarily vote the same way on subsequent ballots.

PC Organizers Have Been Busy For Two Months

TORONTO (CP) — Organizers of the Ontario Progressive Conservative convention which starts today have been going full tilt for more than two months.

Candidates criss-crossed the province many times each in a tough winter campaign.

Delegates have been streaming into city hotels since the weekend.

Carpenters are pounding the final nails into staging and interview booths at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Parties, dances and hospitality suites were in full swing Tuesday night as candidates attempted to woo votes from the estimated 35 per cent of the 1,748 delegates reported to be uncommitted.

But the big push starts today.

And geared for it are candidates Education Minister William Davis, Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs.

A sixth candidate, Ottawa student Robert Pharand, 26, was a late entry in the race to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts.

The delegates meet the candidates in a series of policy discussions today, then go to receptions and a dinner to honor Mr. Robarts.

The convention will gather momentum Thursday with nominations and acceptance speeches by candidates and reach a climax with Friday's voting.

Today's policy sessions will allow candidates to explain their views on two of 10 topics chosen by the provincial association.

Topics to be discussed include economic nationalism, Northern Ontario in an age of change, education costs, pollution, priorities in social justice, and regional government.

None of the candidates chose to speak on the needs of rural Ontario, consumer protection, recreation and leisure time in the 1970s or urban transportation.

Nomination speeches for the leadership candidates start at 3:30 p.m. when the scene shifts to the Gardens and the candidates will make their acceptance speeches at 7 p.m.

Both sessions are expected to be full of hoopla as blocks of delegates charge onto the convention floor to show support for their candidates.

Friday's climax will start at 2 p.m. with a one-hour plenary session before the voting starts.

To be elected, a candidate must receive a majority of the ballots cast. Therefore, if all eligible 1,748 delegates are voting the magic number is 875.

If no candidate receives a clear-cut majority, the last man on the ballot will be dropped.

Robarts Liked Question Time

TORONTO (CP) — Some time within the next week or so, John Parmenter Robarts will walk away from Queen's Park for the last time as the political leader of one-third of Canada's population.

He has only one regret in retiring from the premiership and leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party he has held since 1961.

"It breaks my heart to think that I'll never walk in that legislature again just before the question period, without knowing what I'm going to be asked.

"That was the part of the job I really enjoyed most."

Tonight, the 53-year-old premier will be in the public spotlight above all others for perhaps the last time.

More than 2,000 party members from across the province will gather in the Royal York Hotel to pay him tribute before getting on with the task of choosing his successor.

Also on hand will be two other symbols of party power which has been unbroken in the province since 1943. Former premiers George Drew and Leslie Frost, now in their 70s, will be on the podium, as will national party leader Robert Stanfield.

Flanking them will be the men who hope to don the mantle of the premiership: Education Minister William Davis, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Ottawa graduate student Robert Pharand.

When the last speech has been made and the last toast drunk, Mr. Robarts will begin to prepare for his departure, for a return to the law practice in his home riding of London.

Also foremost in the premier's mind in deciding to give up the reins of power has been his family, the wife and teen-age son and daughter who have remained well away from the rough and tumble of his political life.

"I've teen-age children at home—the old man should be home occasionally," he said in announcing his retirement in December.

Although there has been speculation over the years that Mr. Robarts might at some point be in line for the national party leadership, or for a seat in the senate, he has given no indication he wants to do anything more than go back to the law.

"My name is still on the door," he says in reference to his law office in London, where he has represented the riding of London North for the last 19 years.

Personally, he is known as a gregarious man who likes sports — he played football in his younger day — and is not above leaving his suite at the Westbury Hotel to visit a downtown tavern.

He also cuts across the grey-suited chairman's image on occasion by becoming involved in a situation normally linked with a more flamboyant personality. An example was his flight with two friends in a helium balloon last summer. He was the chairman drifting calmly across the London landscape, quaffing champagne and obviously enjoying himself.

He also is one of the leading figures on the national political scene and his job has been described as the second most powerful position in the country — after the prime ministership.

An indication of the importance he attaches to this image was given in his recent statement that of all his achievements in office, the one he takes most pride in was his action in convening the Confederation of Tomorrow Conference in 1967. This conference generally is considered the forerunner to the continuing federal - provincial constitutional talks.

Despite his recognized achievements and the day-to-day control he has held over the people of the province, the picture that many of his supporters and opponents will hold is that of John Robarts saying:

"I'll miss the legislature. . ."

Fun Time Precedes Business

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates who can avoid the parties and demonstrations surrounding candidates for leadership of the provincial Progressive Conservative party settle down today to the serious business of choosing the man who will emerge Friday as the next premier of Ontario.

The convention to find a successor to Premier John Robarts gets under way with 1,748 delegates invited to a series of meetings where they will have a chance to question the six men on policy matters.

But in the early stages at least entertainment appears to take precedence over business with parties, luncheons and breakfasts the order of the day.

Judge To Rule On FLQ Motions

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet will rule Friday on motions to quash charges of seditious conspiracy against five Quebecers.

The latest of the motions was presented in court Tuesday by teacher Charles Gagnon, one of the five being tried on the charge of seditiously conspiring to overthrow the Canadian and Quebec governments by force.

Gagnon contended the charge does not specify the crime he committed and therefore should be dismissed.

Lawyer Robert Lemieux, labor leader Michel Chartrand, author Pierre Vallieres and Jacques Larue-Langlois, a broadcasting producer, are being tried with Gagnon on the seditious conspiracy charge.

Prosecutor Gabriel Lapointe told the court Tuesday that the charge is clear and legal. Furthermore, he said, the motion "is premature."

He also disputed the contention of the accused that they were illegally detained and illegally arraigned on the charge which is laid under the Criminal Code.

Government decree of the War Measures Act, a contested point, is "conclusive proof" of the validity of the act and the charges that flow from it, Mr. Lapointe added.

Lemieux and Vallieres presented motions Monday to have the charges quashed.

The conspiracy allegedly took place between Jan. 1, 1968, and Oct. 16, 1970, the day the War Measures Act was invoked by the federal government.

Seditious conspiracy is punishable by up to 14 years in prison. All five men are also charged with being members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec which carries a penalty of five years imprisonment or a $5,000 fine or both.

Gagnon, a former sociology lecturer at the University of Montreal, said Canadian jurisprudence has established that charges must include "time, place and matter."

"The accused, according to the Criminal Code, cannot be accused of a type of crime."

Bar Told To Name Observer

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols said Tuesday he has asked the Quebec Bar Association to send an observer to the kidnap-murder trial of Paul Rose, who has been banished from the court for the duration of his trial.

Mr. Justice Nichols said he asked the president of the bar association to delegate "an observer who would act as a friend of the court and would have the right to intercede" on the behalf of the accused who has refused to appoint a lawyer of his own.

In Ottawa, federal legal officers said Tuesday that Mr. Justice Nichols may himself end up acting in effect as counsel for Rose, one of four men charged with the October abduction and murder of Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister.

The law officers said that if Rose by misconduct has deliberately chosen to be barred from his trial, then he has forfeited his right to present his defence.

However, they added that the courts will do their utmost to make sure that trials related to the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec are as fair as possible.

This could mean that the judge will end up acting in effect as counsel for the defence.

Rose was banished from his trial Monday and was offered a chance to get back in Tuesday but turned it down.

Mr. Justice Nichols told Rose he would be readmitted if he was ready to amend his behavior and apologize to the court for his insults.

Rose was sent out of the court again when he accused the judge of discriminating against him.

Before he left, the accused said he wanted to withdraw the mandate of Pierre Cloutier, who had been acting as his legal adviser.

Mr. Justice Nichols agreed to the request.

Anyone for 6,000 keychains? There must be that many locks in Belleville.

Really, Dominion Army-Navy-Air Force Veterans Association president Jack Lundberg isn't looking for people with doors. He's looking for people who want to support figure skating.

"We're just providing the vehicle," he explained Tuesday in the local kick-off for the 50,000-member veteran's organization new pet project — the raising of funds to help swell the Canadian Figure Skating Competitors' Bursary Fund.

Through sales of striking $2 gemstone keychains, ANAVIC hopes to really put Canada on the world figure skating map.

The project, which came about after Dominion President Lundberg was approached by the Canadian Figure Skating Association, couldn't be more timely, its adoption coming just a month before Karen Magnussen snatched headlines from hockey players by winning last weekend's North American Championship in Peterborough.

Locally, Operation Keychain got its send-off Tuesday, with Mayor Russell Scott officially purchasing the first trinket. The ceremonial first presentation was intended as a gift, but the mayor proferred his $2, leaving the city's Duke of Edinburgh ANAVIC unit merely 499 dozen and 11 sales left to make.

"There are about 500 members of our Association here in the city. All we're asking is that they sell keychains to a dozen friends," Lundberg explained, turning the local drive over to 1971 Duke of Edinburgh president John Browning.

But figure skating as a veterans' project?

To paraphrase the Dominion president, Operation Keychain will show many Canadians that veterans have a greater interest in ice than putting it in a glass.

"Too many people think of veterans in terms of a group of guys sitting around drinking beer. Well, for over 25 years, Canada has taken pretty good care of her veterans and we were looking for a project that would give us more community involvement. We thought we'd dedicate the Seventies to helping develop some of our young people.

"What could be more fitting than assisting the Bursary Fund to help keep this country in the forefront of international sport."

Lundberg Leads Offensive

Lundberg has done his homework. He points out that since World War II, Canada has produced a dozen global skating champions, and two Olympic gold medallists.

This despite virtually no assistance in the costly development of blooming figure skaters.

The Bursary Fund has kicked $60,000 into the kitty in the decade since its inception, but that's not nearly enough in a sport where promising youngsters must rent arenas for themselves at $20 hourly, and need individual instruction from $10-an-hour professionals.

A blitz by ANAVIC's 50,000 members is aimed at raising at least $250,000 in the next two months. "It's pretty tough trying to ask for donations for figure skating after the tulips are up," Lundberg chuckled.

The project drew enthusiasm from two executives of the Quinte Figure Skating Club, some of whose 175 members may be future applicants for Bursary Fund assistance.

President Al Reid was optimistic the local skating club would join Army-Navy vets in selling Belleville's 6,000-keychain alotment. Past-president Eunice Driscoll said the skating club had been growing leery of canvass campaigns. "For years, our kids have sold everything from peppermint patties to shoelaces, and we were afraid to ask them to do any more.

"But with another organization this big pitching in, I think it would work."

Beyond boosting Canada's future sporting odds in world competition, the keychain sale is also supporting the work of Rehabilitation Industries, a March of Dimes project for disabled employees. Lundberg noted that two of the program's 11 workshops were going to be shut down before they got the massive keychain order.

The project is one of those that make governments sit up and take note of the plight of our athletes. While skaters from countries like Russia are completely subsidized, our hopefuls endure a hand-to-mouth existence as far as grants are concerned.

"In Russia today they have a better system for scouting figure skaters than the NHL has for scouting hockey players in North America," a Canadian Figure Skating Association executive said last month.

Now the biggest Canadian veterans' peace-time offensive since the Poppy hopes to give the CFSA more to scout about.

Jane Sheppard's Quinte Curling Club foursome became only the second repeat winners in the 11-year history of The Intelligencer Women's Bonspiel Tuesday night. Holding the trophy they also won in the 1970 competition are Bev. Deacon and Cathy Brown, while vice Marlene Henderson wields a broom for skip Sheppard.

Winning Sheppard Rink Fills Takeout Orders

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Filling "take out" orders isn't the usual line of work for the members of Jane Sheppard's Quinte Curling Club rink, but it proved to be a winning style in The Intelligencer Women's Bonspiel last night.

The Belleville foursome became only the second team in the 11-year history of the event to record more than one victory, emulating consecutive wins by Kingston skip Fran Miller in 1963-64.

"We were playing more of a takeout game, rather than outdrawing our opponents", noted vice-skip Catharine Brown, who has been curling for eight years.

"We mainly just tried to match shots and then capitalize on the other teams' mistakes", agreed second Marlene Henderson, a seven year veteran.

Lead Bev Deacon was the least experienced of the foursome having curled for six years, while skip Jane Sheppard has been participating in bonspiels since the Quinte Curling Club opened.

"It was a team win. There was no one particular member that was playing exceptionally well, but it seemed that everyone managed to come up with shots when we needed them", noted Mrs. Sheppard.

The event marked only the second time the foursome has competed as a team, with the other occasion being their 1970 Intelligencer Bonspiel victory.

The members agreed that the toughest of their five matches was against a CFB rink skipped by Marj Merklinger, in their next-to-last contest although they had been forced to go into extra ends in their opening pair of games.

The finals of the bonspiel's second event was an all-Quinte affair with Ann Acton's rink winning out over Belleville counterpart Hazel McNevin.

Included in the Acton rink were Miriam Graham, Marilyn Watson and Bev Neill.

The third event went to a Napanee rink skipped by Sally Lambert and including Ann McDannold, Vi Silver and Marie Knuth.

A total of 24 rinks took part in the two-day bonspiel.

McIntosh Drops Opener

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP) — British Columbia, Northern Ontario and Alberta posted first-round victories Tuesday as the Canadian Forces curling championship opened at this Fraser Valley city.

The B.C. rink from Comox, skipped by Dennis Vickland, downed Ontario's Trenton rink, skipped by Hector McIntosh, 11-5; Northern Ontario's Falconbridge rink, skipped by John Roy, defeated the Europe rink skipped by Lorie Can 13-6; and the Merv Payne rink from Edmonton dumped a Quebec rink from Bagotville, skipped by Ed Wood, 15-8.

The Maritimes rink from Summerside, P.E.I. had a bye.

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Oakville Oaks snapped a four-game losing streak and climbed back into a fourth-place tie by whipping Woodstock Athletics 8-1 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game Tuesday night.

Ron Robinson scored two goals and Charlie Cipolla, Frank Hincks, Pat Bester, Larry Gibbons, Ken Knapton, and Dunc McDonald got one each for Oakville.

Defenceman Doug McGowan scored the only Woodstock goal before only 50 paying customers.

The win moved the Oaks into a tie with Kingston Aces, one point ahead of Belleville Mo-Hawks.

Belleville has played 34 games, Oakville 35, and Kingston 36.

Helping Hand for Hull

Chicago Black Hawks' star Bobby Hull, second from right, is helped by unidentified trainer after he was injured in second period of game with Pittsburgh Penguins Sunday in Chicago. Teammates at left are Chico Maki (16) and Paul Shmyr. Hull, who had to leave the game, earlier scored his 544th goal, to tie Maurice "Rocket" Richard for second-highest career goals. Hull's goal enabled Hawks to win 1-0. (AP Wirephoto)

Rangers Couldn't Cope With Bruins' 600-pound Threesome

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When you put together three hockey players who each stand six-foot, one inch and together weigh a total of almost 600 pounds, there's not much that can shift them as New York Rangers found Tuesday night.

The heavy trio was the line of Ken Hodge, Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman who had a hand in every Boston goal in a 6-3 Bruins victory over the Rangers.

The Bruins thus dealt a hard blow to Ranger hopes of regaining a challenging position for first place in the National Hockey League East Division. New York now is nine points behind the leading Bruins.

Elsewhere Tuesday night, Rosaire Paiement scored four goals to lead Vancouver Canucks to a 6-3 victory over Buffalo Sabres, Montreal Canadiens downed Pittsburgh Penguins 4-1 and St. Louis Blues tied Toronto Maple Leafs 3-3.

"No one can push us off the puck," said right winger Hodge who was credited with assists on all siv Bruin goals. "It's not a finesse line. We have to bowl people over to get to the puck."

The Rangers outshot the Bruins 43-40 in the game and fought hard to hold Boston to a 1-1 tie at the end of the first period and 3-3 at the end of the second.

But the big Bruin line broke through for two third-period goals by Cashman and one by Bobby Orr.

It was Orr's second goal of the night and his 26th of the season. Esposito got his 47th goal in the second period.

KEN HODGE

Centre Walt Tkaczuk was the outstanding Ranger with two power-play goals in the second period.

The Rangers pulled goalie Gilles Villemure for an extra attacker in the final minute, but the tactic failed when Cashmen got his second goal into the empty net, and Orr beat Villemure 17 seconds later for the final goal.

The Bruins stretched their undefeated streak to 10 games and their home-ice unbeaten stretch to 21.

Vancouver, missing the leadership of injured captain Orland Kurtenbach, had a take-charge guy for one night at least when Paiement went wild with his spree of checking and scoring.

The four goals ran his season total to 16.

His first goal tied the game 1-1 in the first period and his second in the second period gave the Canucks a 3-1 lead.

The Sabres, led by two goals from Dick Duff came back to tie it 3-3 in the third period but Paiement banged two more behind Buffalo goalie Roger Crozier to put the game out of reach.

Jacques Lemaire's 19th and 20th goals of the season sparked the Canadiens to their win over a hard-checking Pittsburgh club that couldn't beat goalie Rogatien Vachon despite pelting him with 33 shots. The one goal that got by him came on a goal-mouth scramble.

The third-place Canadiens widened their lead over Toronto to five points in the East Division. The Leafs were in a position to keep pace when they held a 3-2 lead over St. Louis but a goal by Blues centre Chris Bordeleau tied it early in the third period.

Leafs centre Dave Keon set an NHL record for short-handed goals when he scored his 28th season goal in the first period. It was the eighth goal he has scored while the Leafs were shorthanded this season.

Boston's Jerry Toppazzini set the previous mark of seven in the 1957-58 season.

The Leafs move to Chicago to meet the Black Hawks tonight while Philadelphia Flyers are at Pittsburgh, Minnesota North Stars at New York, Detroit at Los Angeles to meet the Kings and Buffalo in California against the Seals.

Sanderson Stung Most by Campbell

MONTREAL (CP) — Derek Sanderson was the biggest individual loser as president Clarence Campbell levied almost $12,000 in fines against players from five National Hockey League teams for recent bench-clearing incidents.

Sanderson was fined $500 for his part in an altercation last Dec. 12 in Philadelphia when several members of Boston Bruins became involved with some Flyers' fans.

The other incidents were a Jan. 23 brawl at Los Angeles where Toronto Maple Leafs were visiting the Kings and a Jan. 24 battle at Detroit involving players of the Red Wings and the visiting Vancouver Canucks.

The Leafs were the only teams to receive a club fine—$1,000 against the Toronto management for failure to control its players on the bench.

Sanderson was named by Campbell as the prime instigator in the Philadelphia incident. After receiving a minor penalty, he entered a penalty box and was subjected to some baiting by the fans.

The incident developed into a mutual slanging match and then into a spitting duel.

Eventually, a group of Boston players left their bench, climbed into the penalty box with Sanderson and began exchanging blows with several fans.

Aside from Sanderson's fine, other Bruins penalized by Campbell were Garnet Bailey, Wayne Carleton, John McKenzie, Dan Schock and Wayne Cashman.

DEREK SANDERSON

Bailey's fine was $300, because it was the third time this season he left the players bench to join a melee. Carleton, McKenzie and Schock were tagged with $200 penalties because it was their second offence and Cashman received a $100 fine for his first such violation.

WINNIPEG (CP) — In a one-year experiment, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has switched from the playoff system to a four-team tournament to decide the Western Canada senior hockey champion. Earl Dawson, president of the CAHA, announced Tuesday that Yorkton, Sask., has been awarded the 1971 tournament which offers $8,000 in prize money. Dawson said if the tournament system proves successful the organization will press for its adoption in Eastern Canada next year.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Captains and assistant captains of teams in the Southern Junior A Hockey League of the Ontario Hockey Association won't be permitted to question game officials over calls, beginning Friday, the league convener said Tuesday. Hugh McLean said the rule is aimed at speeding up games and will serve as a pilot for other leagues. He said players who approach an official to question a call will automatically draw a misconduct penalty.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Angelo Mosca, the double threat of the football field and the wrestling ring, Tuesday was remanded without plea to Feb. 16 on a charge of creating a disturbance by swearing in a public place. The 33-year-old Hamilton Tiger-Cats' star was arrested Monday night after what police described as a disturbance. Police said they handed Mosca a traffic ticket for illegal hitch-hiking and he became obnoxious and began swearing. Officers said they warned him several times to stop and then took him into custody. Mosca, wrestling professionally in Vancouver, was released in $50 bail.

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Orr Enterprises and All-Canada Sports announced Tuesday they have joined forces to complete a closed-circuit television arrangement that will carry the March 8 Muhammad Ali - Joe Frazier heavyweight championship fight to more than a dozen Canadian centres. Lawyer Alan Eagleson of Orr's commercial organization and boxing promoter Irv Ungerman were the spokesmen for the two companies. Ungerman said pre-sale ticket orders have been so heavy there are no seats left for the actual fight at Madison Square Garden in New York City and all 600 seats at $20 in the club circle at Maple Leaf Gardens are gone.

Oscar Robertson might be overshadowed in Milwaukee by Lew Alcindor, but he still can do it all. The Big O proved it Tuesday night against Detroit as he led the Bucks to a 107-106 victory over the Pistons for Milwaukee's 48th triumph in 59 National Basketball Association games. Oscar had 25 points to keep the Bucks within two points of Detroit and then passed to Alcindor for the tying basket. Seconds later, he hit Greg Smith with a long pass with 22 seconds to go for the go-ahead basket. Then, after Terry Dischinger of Detroit connected on only one of two free throws with eight seconds left, it was Robertson who grabbed the vital rebound and dribbled out the remaining seconds. In other games, Los Angeles Lakers held off Cleveland Cavaliers 116-111, Atlanta Hawks beat New York Knicks 114-109.

Bombers Better At Draft Table

WINNIPEG (CP) — The team with the worst record in the Canadian Football League last season did much better in the CFL's draft in college players Tuesday, getting five of the seven players they had hoped for.

Paige Speech Amuses Commissioner Kuhn

Legendary 'Satchel' Joins Hall of Famers

NEW YORK (AP) — When Leroy (Satchel) Paige threw his last hesitation pitch in the major leagues he was, by his own estimate, 59. By some other estimate, he already qualified for social security.

Either way, Paige had established that he was able to hurl in the major leagues with Kansas City Athletics in 1965 at an age when few men leave their rocking chairs.

The tall, lean pitcher had these six rules on how to stay young:

—Avoid fried meats which angry up the blood.

—If your stomach disputes you, lie down and pacify it with cool thoughts.

—Keep the juices flowing by jangling around gently as you move.

—Go very light on the vices, such as carrying on in society. The social rumble ain't restful.

—Avoid running at all times.

—Don't look back. Something might be gaining on you.

Whether Paige lived by those rules is open to question, since his career has been so embellished by legend it is difficult to separate fact from fiction.

But there are enough facts to understand why Paige was chosen Tuesday as the first black star of the pre-1947 era to enter the Hall of Fame.

The 6-foot-3½, 180-pounder was the biggest name ever to come out of the black leagues that spawned such stars as Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella and Larry Doby.

From 1926 until 1948 when he joined Cleveland Indians, Paige toiled in the negro leagues for about 250 teams —most of them on a one-day basis.

Advertised as "Satchel Paige, World's Greatest Pitcher, guaranteed to strike out the first nine men," he appeared for any team that could pay him the $500 to $2,000 he commanded for three innings.

Paige had unbelievable control and a wide assortment of pitches, including the famous hesitation pitch in which he stopped in mid-throw before throwing toward the plate.

In 1946 when he was 42 years old he joined the majors—the oldest rookie in big-league history. He left behind 2,500 games in the negro leagues. He said he won about 2,000 of them, including 100 no-hitters.

Bench Proposes $500,000 Plan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Bench, 23-year-old catcher who was the National League's most valuable player in 1970, wants a three-year contract in the neighborhood of $500,000 from Cincinnati Reds.

Bench admitted he is making big money in relation to his age but added: "I don't want people to think I'm out of bounds."

He hit .293 for the National League pennant-winners and slammed 45 home runs.

Rules Said Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — The amount of window dressing in presentation of the government's proposed packaging and labelling bill has convinced the housewife that the whole thing's a "snappy deal," Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington) said Tuesday.

But if the bill is put into force, the housewife will end up paying more for her weekly groceries, he said.

Mr. Hales spoke in Tuesday's second meeting of the Commons health committee, studying the proposed legislation.

The bill is intended to regulate the packaging industry in an attempt to reduce the many sizes and shapes of product containers and to establish uniform labelling regulations.

In theory, the legislation would bring savings to shoppers by allowing easier comparison of prices.

Two associations Tuesday sharply criticized this assumption and complained that the legislation would merely increase the burden of regulations already placed upon them by government.

The Canadian Food Processors Association, a voluntary trade organization representing 102 firms, said its industry already is regulated by the Canada Agricultural Products Standards Act, the Food and Drug Act, the Hazardous Products Act and the Combine's Act.

The food processors joined the Canadian Manufacturers Association in asking the government to forget its packaging legislation.

Halibut Held Off Market

HALIFAX (CP) — "I figure with fish that's down that deep this mercury thing has always been there," says halibut skipper Garfield Anstey. "I don't figure it's anything new—they're making too much out of it."

Nevertheless, high levels of mercury contamination have been reported in the larger halibut—over 100 pounds—following closely the discovery of intolerable amounts of mercury in swordfish off the North American east coast. Large halibut are being withheld from market until more testing has been done.

The mercury scare has brought the $4 million Canadian swordfishery to a standstill, and halibut men are worried that the same thing may happen to them.

The halibut, a big fat fish that feeds on the ocean bottom, is worth about $1.2 million annually to Nova Scotia fishermen.

"This is a good industry," says Captain Anstey, who operates two 92-foot halibut boats out of Halifax.

"Our men are happy. Some have been with us five years and more. We have eight men in a crew. We could do with seven, but the extra hand means somebody can have a holiday ashore. Wages are good—$7,500 to $9,000."

One crew, coming ashore with good catches recently, earned $1,200 a man in less than a month despite the fact that all fish over 100 pounds were seized for inspection and could not be sold.

Meanwhile, fish merchants say the effects of publicity about mercury-contaminated fish "are instant and disastrous." One merchant said his sales had dropped off by a third and were still falling.

"I don't know when I'll be able to sell a pound of halibut again," he said.

It appeared to him the fishing industry was being "picked on." He understood the permitted level for mercury content in bread in Winnipeg, for instance, was four times as high as the tolerance for fish.

Captain Anstey, whose vessels range as far as the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, says he dismisses the suggestion that halibut have become contaminated recently.

"This is something that's always been there," he said in an interview. "It's got to be. Halibut like the deep water and a clean bottom. I can see the swordfish—they feed on the surface."

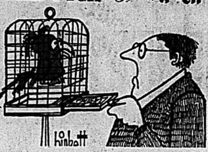
THE PICK OF Punch



"Not the 'Sunday Times' business section again!"

The Library Corner

By O. D.

THE EMBROIDERED SUNSET by Joan Aiken

Among all the uncertainties about the two old ladies who had lived together so long nobody could tell them apart, one thing was absolutely certain — one of them was dead — murdered. The other one was gone — vanished. Which was which? The search for an answer, and the murderer, makes this a novel full of suspense, and plot twists.

LOST ISLAND by Phyllis Whitney

The heroine of this suspense novel is a young woman who returns to the island off the coast of Georgia, where she spent her childhood — a return she hopes will free her from the island's mysterious spell, and from the love of another woman's husband. A dramatic story, set against an intriguing background.

LOVERS ALL UNTRUE by Norah Lofts

This is a Victorian novel—full of suspense — which successfully combines a heartless father, a passionate love affair, murder and mental collapse. The book instantly involves the reader in its terror and Miss Lofts uses her remarkable imagination to create an intricate plot full of unexpected twists and surprises.

THE ARCHBISHOP by Clay Blair Jr.

Set in Washington, DC, this tale centres around Pope Paul's encyclical on birth control. The Favrots are a typical Catholic family with a brood of nine. The wife is beginning to question the guidance of the Church, and the husband is holding firm. Jean Favrot comes to the priest for advice about the pill — advice that leads indirectly to an affair with a divorced man. By delving into complexities of character and situation, this story conveys the confusion and sadness inherent in a contemporary religious struggle.

HOW A PEOPLE DIE by Alan Fry

This is really a documentary novel about life and death on a Canadian Indian reservation today. The plot centres on an investigation into the death of an Indian baby who died in her crib, while a drunken party went on around her. The investigation causes white and red man alike to examine the whole question of the rights and responsibilities of a people bewildered by the standards of a world they never made.

THE EXILES by James M. Fox

Wartime London is the backdrop for this panoramic novel about men and women without a country — the exiles — as they struggle against the pressures of war, uncertainty about the future and fear for those left behind in their native lands.

THE MALADY IN MADEIRA by Ann Bridge

Julia's husband has been killed mysteriously and Aglaia's baby was stillborn. Madeira offers both women the rest and comfort they need. An epidemic, striking animals and children on the island is strangely linked to Julia's husband's death by the astute Dr. de Carvallo.

Crash Blame Spread

OTTAWA (CP) — Blame was spread widely Tuesday in the official inquiry on a July 5 Air Canada crash near Toronto that took the lives of all 109 people aboard the DC-8 jetliner.

In a report tabled in the Commons by Transport Minister Don Jamieson, Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson of the Exchequer Court of Canada confirmed premature deployment of a landing-brake system as the crash cause and specified no outstanding contribution by any one party.

His 214-page report dated Jan. 29 said the crash was due to failures by Captain Peter Hamilton of the flight crew; First Officer Donald Rowland; McDonnell Douglas, the aircraft manufacturer; Air Canada; and the transport department, which has regulatory responsibility for flight safety.

Mr. Jamieson refused comment Tuesday until he had a chance to discuss the report further with department officials and McDonnell Douglas withheld comment until officials were able to read and assess the report.

It singles out the "ground spoiler" braking system as the main cause of the crash and recommends steps which McDonnell Douglas and Air Canada can take to prevent recurrence.

The transport department is criticized for accepting the system and for allowing non-uniform flight manuals.

Doctors Oppose Snowmobiling During Night

TORONTO (CP) — The assistant secretary of the Ontario Medical Association says the association has conducted a study which indicates misuse and a basic instability in the machines are the major causes of snowmobile accidents.

Dr. Robert Baxter said Tuesday the year-long study recommends that snowmobile drivers have adequate instruction in operating the machines, refrain from drinking, and be prohibited from driving at night.

Dr. Baxger said helmets are included in what the report calls "a mandatory safety equipment package."

U.S. Anti-war Groups Mount Demonstrations

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Anti-war groups today mounted the first major demonstrations against the American-assisted South Vietnamese plunge into Laos.

But even their supporters expected the protests to be mild compared with the nationwide turmoil and campus disorders which followed the American incursion into Cambodia April

In Washington, members of Congress opposing the incursion planned news conferences and major speeches following Tuesday's testimony by Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and State Secretary William Rogers.

Congressional actions, however, are expected to concentrate more on future developments rather than in attacking the push against North Vietnamese troops and supplies moving along the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos.

Organizers said that today's actions will be aimed at arousing Americans to oppose what they consider is an attempt by the Nixon administration to expand the Indochina war.

Demonstations led by the student mobilization committee have been organized for Washington—where the executive office building next to the White House will be picketed—and in Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago and Philadelphia. Other groups are planning protests in other cities.

Air View Shows Massive Damage

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Trails of smoke from a handful of fires appeared as minor landmarks of the earthquake damage in this sprawling urban area Tuesday. From the air, the real damage was evident in the rubble of buildings and gaping land cracks.

During helicopter flight of an hour and 10 minutes, which covered most of the area apparently hit hardest by the early morning earthquake, I saw a scene of destruction that appeared to be right out of a war.

Most of the damage appeared in the northern fringes of the heavily populated San Fernando Valley.

The Veterans Administration Hospital at Sylmar was in ruins.

There were perhaps half a dozen fires—two big ones—in the area I covered. One of the largest blazes was at a San Fernando shopping centre, where seven buildings were engulfed. The other was also in that area, where an aircraft manufacturing firm burned.

But one of the most amazing sights was in the area of the Van Norman Dam, at the apex of a triangle formed by the northernmost end of the San Fernando Valley.

There, giant cracks etched the water side of Los Angeles's largest reservoir. Great chunks of cement—some as large as buses—had been turned up.

To the north, near a smaller lake that is part of the dam, huge cracks had cut the earth around the water area. One was big enough for a man to fall into. Others appeared six to 12 inches wide.

Witness Describes Slaying

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Susan Atkins, in a dramatic witness stand confession, has said it was she who stabbed actress Sharon Tate and used the victim's blood to scrawl the word "pig" on a door during a nightmarish mass slaughter.

"I killed her. I stabbed her and she fell," Miss Atkins said.

"And I stabbed her again. I don't know how many times I stabbed her and I don't know why I stabbed her."

Dark-haired Miss Atkins 22, her voice husky and sometimes tearful, told jurors Tuesday that members of Charles Manson's hippie-style clan—two of them 'stoned' on drugs—stabbed and shot the pregnant Miss Tate and four visitors.

She also said she was the killer of a Malibu musician the previous month.

"I didn't even know these people," she sighed incredulously as she vividly recounted the killings at the Tate mansion.

"She kept pleading with me, 'Please don't kill me.' And I said, 'Shut up. I don't want to hear it.'

"I threw her down on the couch. She said, 'All I want to do is have my baby.'

"Tex came in and looked down at her and said, 'Kill her,' and I killed her."

Charles (Tex) Watson, a member of Manson's clan, was described by another witness at the murder trial as Manson's chief lieutenant in two murder missions—to Miss Tate's hilltop mansion the night of Aug. 9, 1959, and to the home of market owner Leno LaBianca and his wife the next night.

Watson is to stand trial separately.

Miss Atkins, the first defendant to take the stand in the nearly eight-month trial, told her story at the penalty phase in which the jury must decide on life imprisonment or death for the convicted clan leader and three women co-defendants, of whom she is one.

She said she was under the influence of LSD and Watson was on the drug STP at the time of the slayings.

Davis Backers Active

By PC Establishment Pressure Said Used

TORONTO (CP) — The convention to choose a successor to retiring Premier John Robarts opened today amid claims that supporters of at least one candidate have brought establishment pressure to bear on delegates.

Top officials representing three of the five cabinet ministers in the running said in interviews Tuesday night that pressure tactics have been used, although they gave no specific instances.

Walter Baker, campaign manager for A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, said members of the legislature who support Education Minister William Davis were responsible for the tactics.

Although the other officials declined to pin the blame, they agreed the tactics went beyond normal attempts to delegate persuasion.

"A tremendous resentment is developing among delegates as a result of establishment pressure on some delegates," Mr. Baker said.

"The pressure is being put on by cabinet ministers, backbenchers, etc., who support Mr. Davis."

The education minister's campaign office now believes he has the support of 12 of the 22 cabinet ministers and more than 40 of the 46 backbenchers.

John Latimer, campaign manager for Mr. Davis, said he had received "nothing out of the ordinary in the way of reports of pressure.

"We asked everybody at the start of the campaign not to over-pressure delegates; but to ensure people's rights are respected."

Area Jobless Increase

The famous directive alleged to have been sent to Manpower directors across Canada, asking them not to release unemployment figures, didn't arrive at the Belleville Manpower office in the Federal Building.

H. W. Karn, director of Canada Manpower here, said this morning he had never seen the directive. But he did get a reminder to make sure that enough background information was given out with unemployment statistics to make them meaningful to the public.

Comparisons of unemployment figures for this year and last, for instance, cannot give a true picture because Manpower's method of computing the figures has been changed.

But there is no doubt unemployment in Hastings county and Ameliasburg, the area covered by the Belleville office, is up.

On the second last day of January, 1971, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 1,337 males unemployed and 1,323 females.

But, noted Mr. Karn, not all unemployed people register with Manpower for jobs, so the figures from Manpower will never jibe with those given out by the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Although the figures for December, 1969, were not immediately available, Mr. Karn said there is no doubt the number unemployed in January is higher than the number for the month before.

Workers hired for seasonal Christmas help were laid off after the holiday season and small layoffs have occurred in local industries.

Tax Bills On the Way

Interim tax bills covering the first two instalments of 1971 city taxes wil be mailed out from city hall this week.

City tax collector Frank Morrell said his office would commence mailing the approximately 10,600 tax bills today and indicated all would be in the mails by Thursday afternoon.

The first instalment of the interim bill is due on Feb. 26 and the second on April 30. This year's interim billing is based on 50 per cent of last year's mill rate and at 24 mills is the same as last year's interim tax bills. The commercial and industrial rate is 26 mills.

The tax bills are printed by the Welby computer services in Ottawa and forwarded to city hall where they are placed in envelopes for mailing.

After city council has set this year's levy, the final billing will be made. The three final instalments will be due on June 30, Aug. 31 and Oct. 31.

There has been no indication so far from city hall as to what this year's total mill rate might be.

Carnival Skating Results

Boys' race winners in the 5-7 class were Larry Deighton, David Ashton and Clarey.

Janet L'Esperance, Helen Everard and Barbara Folwarczncy, took first to third place in the Girls' 8-9 race.

In the same age class, Wayne Deighton, Glen McQuaid and Andy Plane, took the top honors.

Winners in the girls' 10-11 class were Anne Ashton, Donna Brett and Kerry Ellerton.

Boys winning in the 10-11 category were Barry Fleming, Alan Kunetsky and Garry Stapley.

Winner in the girls' obstacle race was Kerry Ellerton, Derek Hume in the boys' obstacle event.

Snow Plowing Fees Are Set

MARMORA (Special) — Marmora and Lake Township roads department will plow lanes and driveways for private residents and, with this winter's heavy snowfall, undoubtedly there is no need to look for work.

At the February meeting of council a schedule of rates for snowplowing lanes was set up. The rates are a minimum of $2 with $4 for half-hour jobs and an $8 maximum for residents with long lanes.

(In Belleville the city works department doesn't plow private driveways, although in Trenton emergency plowing of driveway entrances will be carried out.)

Other business conducted at the Marmora township council meeting saw the purchase by tender of a new half-ton truck from Elliott Motors in Belleville at $2,546.25.

Also specifications have been drawn for a new addition to the township garage and tenders will be called in the spring.

A grant of $150 was approved for the Winter Sports Association and approval was given for the purchase of 500 feet of 1½-inch hose and 100 feet of 2½-inch hose for the fire department.

Council will investigate the possibility of the township recreation committee receiving a government grant to assist in the operation of the township rink.

The township will co-operate with the village of Marmora in the investigation and operation of a garbage disposal site.

NEW YORK (AP) — With the return of Apollo 14 to earth and the southern California earthquake, daytime television Tuesday was filled with real drama.

The networks moved fast to handle news of the destructive quake by interrupting regular programming with brief, printed bulletins. NBC had a short summary in the early afternoon and pre-empted a soap opera in mid-afternoon for an excellent, comprehensive preview which included some live pictures and showed rescue efforts in some crumbled buildings. It followed with a 15-minute special report after its movie broadcast.

A television report of the moon visitors' return never has been so clear and complete. Viewers could see the spaceship as it shot into view, dropping the drogue chute and breaking out the three yellow-orange parachutes that carried it into the Pacific waters. A camera in a hovering helicopter made it possible to watch the entire recovery operation from a front row seat.

While the network teams were well prepared, the presence of astronauts made for some interesting commentary. Alan Bean on NBC, especially, added an extra dimension to the splashdown coverage by recalling his emotions and activities in the minutes before leaving the space capsule. NBC's audience research department estimates that 52 million people saw all or some of the Apollo coverage during the day.

Marmora

MARMORA — Gordon Jones and George Fox attended the No. 3 District Fairs Convention at Club Canara in Belleville on Thursday, Feb. 4th.

They report that Labor Day has been reserved for Marmora Fair.

The new director of No. 3 District is Albert Vader, Reeve of Wollaston Township.

A 75-lb. female brush wolf was shot within three miles of Marmora last Thursday morning. A former Marmora resident, John Herman, of 37 Stewart Place, Peterborough spotted the wolf near No. 7 Highway in the vicinity of the County Kitchen Restaurant.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

One-time Drinker Didn't Have DT's

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Will you explain the DT's? I have a friend who never had a drink until a few weeks ago when he started celebrating a promotion he got at the office and ended up almost dead drunk.

When he got up the next morning he was shaky, nervous and kept trembling as if the weather were 20 below. For about a week he said he felt like a nervous wreck. He swears he'll never take another drink. Is it possible that he had an attack of delirium tremens? — Mr. H.

• • •

Comment: From what you tell me I can only guess that your friend did not have delerium tremens. I suppose you might call his attack a bad "hangover." Delirium tremens is more violent. It rarely involves those like your friend who have never taken alcohol before.

It occurs in chronic alcoholics. Usually, after a prolonged drinking session has come to an end and the alcohol level in the blood has dropped. Then come what we call "withdrawal symptoms," due to hyperirritability of brain cells.

• • •

Once you see a patient with DTs you never forget it. I recall a middle - aged executive of a large corporation. Few suspected that he was an alcoholic.

After a weekend drinking bout, he became tense, restless, agitated and could not sleep. Then he became dizzy and confused, had hallucinations, and his tremors ended in convulsions. (Seeing elephants and snakes is real, not a joke, for the one suffering this condition.) He had to be restrained by nurses and attendants.

Even after a few days, when he seemed much quieter, he tried to commit suicide by jumping out of a window. A nurse returned to his room and caught him in time.

Fortunately, he was well in about a week. Most patients with delirium tremens —especially with repeated attacks — do not do so well. Some die. In about another week he returned to work.

During his treatment he was not allowed to taper off his drinking. It was cut off. Intravenous feeding, proper sedatives and later, a full diet with addition of vitamins and minerals at last brought him back to normal.

You might show this column to your friend. If he gets into the habit of celebrating all future promotions with alcohol, one morning he may wake up with more than just a hangover.

Once a wag said, "DTs must be fun. Just like going to the zoo and seeing all the animals without having to leave your room." Fun? Some fun!

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is there anything now or in the near future that will be used to reduce the size of large feet? (Urgently, Big Feet).

Comment: Nothing now. In the near future the answer will probably be the same. Are you still growing? Later on the problem may not seem as important as it is now.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is an IUD (Intrauterine contraceptive device) as effective as the pill? — Mrs.

Comment: I believe that the pill is more effective — but that does not mean that I recommend it in your case. Leave the decision to your gynecologist.

Some women shouldn't take the pill while others shouldn't have an IUD inserted. Much depends upon the patient's history and physical condition.

For example, a doctor will hestitate to prescribe the pill for a woman who has had attacks of phlebitis. Likewise, he will discontinue the IUD in the patient who has bleeding or other discomforts from its use.

For "hopeful teenager": do not hesitate to take an antibiotic for your acne if your skin specialist has prescribed it. In many cases a broad-spectrum antibiotic has been quite helpful.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Organized Mirth Sours

Can your 12-year-old boy spell "embarrassed," "succeeded," "kaleidoscope," "Havana," "noodle," "vegetable," "ethereal,' and "coroners'?

If he can't, don't feel too bad about it. Neither cou'd Thomas A. Edison — and he was 38 years old, a widower with three children, and already famous, when he misspelled every one of those words in a single page of his diary for July 12, 1885.

As reprinted in facsimile in the December issue of "American Heritage," this diary extract of Edison's shows a lively mind, much imagination and humor, and acquaintanceship with the works of Darwin, Galton, Hawthorne, Plato, Macaulay, Dickens and De Quincy — and a pathetic inability to spell even a simple word like "noodle."

Matter of fact, Edison dropped out of school before the age of 12, and was considered a "dullard" in classes. His mind was simply too busy or too impatient to learn how to spell correctly — or maybe the basic illogicality of English orthography offended his sense of order.

Sir Walter Scott was a trouble to all his teachers, and so was Lord Byron. Pestalozzi, who later became Italy's foremost innovator in education, was regarded as "wild" and "foolish" at school.

Thomas Aquinas, the greatest thinker in the Catholic Church, was called "the dumb ox" at school. Both Linneas and Volta did badly in their conventional studies. Newton was last in his class. Sheridan, the brilliant British playwright, wasn't able to stay in one school more than a year. In our time, Churchill, that inspiring master of English prose, had a deplorable academic record, and flunked out of Sandhurst.

This is not to suggest that correct spelling is to be despised, or that children ought to be allowed to grow up without formal training in the elements of spelling. It is to suggest, however, that too often the form takes precedence over the content in school, and all that is wanted of children is to memorize the forms, regardless of their comprehension of the words and ideas themselves.

Being a good speller has nothing to do with intelligence, or even with education, properly speaking. It is simply a knack that some acquire faster and more easily than others; good teaching can make it pleasant, and bad teaching can stultify the spelling ability in almost anyone except those with the natural gift for it.

When a child is made genuinely interested in a subject, he soon learns how to spell all the words associated with it, just as he quickly learns the words of a song he cares about. Who would doubt that Edison could rattle off "incandescent" in his sleep?

Havelock Fare Up

TORONTO (CP) — CP Rail will increase fares next Monday on its controversial run from Toronto Peterborough and Havelock, Ont.

Railway officials confirmed Tuesday from Montreal they have filed a tariff with the Canadian Transport Commission that would allow these increases to commuter stops outside Toronto:

To Leaside, 45 cents one way from 30 cents; to Agincourt, 95 cents from 65 cents; to Locust Hill, $1.50 from $1.05, and to Claremont, $2.05 from $1.45.

Railway spokesmen said the new fares are needed because the service, always a money-loser, has lost more since a second car was put on the one-car train a month and a half ago.

The second car was added after commuters complained of crowding to a hearing of the Canadian Transport Commission's railway transport committee. The hearing was into an application to abandon the service. The committee has not ruled on the application.

The entire wedding party they called on Mrs. Essie Reid, grandmother of the bridegroom who was unable to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrie E. Barton marked the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary recently, at their home in Springbrook. The couple lived in Rylstone for several years when Mr. Barton was cheesemaker at Rylstone Cheese and Butter Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Stewart of Peterborough were weekend guests of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stewart.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

QUESTION: My wife and I are driving to California at the beginning of April and expect to spend about a month in San Francisco. Are there any special features about driving in the city, and can you advise on the type of clothing we should have there for this time of year?

ANSWER: In driving around San Francisco, remember that Market Street, the main thoroughfare, runs diagonally through the city. Visitors often forget this and lose their sense of direction. Major east-west arteries are Bush and Pine, one-way streets with synchronized traffic signals; Bush goes into the city, Pine out. The numbered streets are in the eastern section of the city, the numbered avenues are in the western part. The many one-way streets make a street map particularly helpful.

The downtown speed limit is 25 mph. or as posted; 15 mph at blind intersections. Unless a sign explicitly prohibits, it is legal to turn right at a red light after coming to a full stop. Rush hours, 7 to 9 a.m. and 4 to 6 p.m., should be avoided if possible.

Parking in hilly San Francisco is strictly regulated and strictly enforced. Besides tow-away signs, the color of the curb also governs parking. Red means no parking whatsoever. Green and yellow indicate limited parking, usually only while loading or unloading passengers. White curbs, often found at entrances to public buildings, are limiting only while the given building is in use.

It is unlawful to park any vehicle on any grade exceeding 3 percent without effectively setting the brakes and blocking the wheels by turning them against the curb or by other means. In parking uphill, the front wheels must be "heeled" or turned out so that a tire is resting against the curb; when parking downhill they must be "toed", or turned in. If there is no curb, a block must be used. The emergency brake must always be firmly set. It is recommended that motorists have their brakes thoroughly checked before driving or parking in San Francisco.

As to climate and clothing, the temperature of the city is noted not for its extremes but for its year-round lack of variation. Mark Twain once remarked that the coldest winter he ever spent was a summer in San Francisco. Average temperatures rarely go above the 70's or below the mid 40's. September and October are the warmest months, January is the coldest.

At all times of the year at least a light coat is recommended. For bay excursions and visits to windy hilltops, women should add a headscarf. Most of the yearly rainfall, which averages just over 20 inches, falls in the winter. But summer fog also dampens the air in the mornings and evenings, making a raincoat welcome throughout the year. San Francisco is a sophisticated metropolitan centre and visitors should dress accordingly; resort wear and summery sundresses are rarely seen in the city. The better restaurants and nightspots require coats and ties for men. Women will feel more comfortable in suits during the day, and cocktail or dinner dresses or other evening wear for evenings out.

By far the most indispensable item to be included in feminine wardrobes is a pair of comfortable flat-heeled walking shoes; one tottering trip down a hill and those high heels will be relegated to the suitcase bottom for the duration of the visit.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 11

Your birthday today: In the year ahead you realize you are not so much providing drive and and guidance. Today's natives are practical, prone to take the nearest available channel of expression. Many have succeeded in public relations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Check words and figures carefully. Emotional concerns are distracting. It will pay to put on your most charming smile. Refrain from practical jokes.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You are a benefit to your family and those who know you well. Ask favors, assistance. A cheerful visit tops off the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You're back now to the subtle game of confusion. There's no basis for alarm, though you let yourself in for unjust criticism. Prudence could prevent much of this.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your courtesy must be unfailing as conditions and people encounter changes, confusion. Emotional ties may surprise you.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): If you really mean it today, do it and stick with your deed. Otherwise, skip the pretense. An early start is of no help. Make notes on your thoughts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Unfavorable news or estimates are the norm. Check for positive facts; muster your resources. Your frame of mind isn't conducive to coping with those you dislike.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): In esthetic matters cultural ventures or even practical management, life can be pleasant today. Entertain modestly this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your mood is low for the moment, but looking into yourself for the origins of your discontent requires help. Accept crowded conditions as temporary.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): There is no substitute for care in working out details. Expect people to express views and positions they are not really sure of. Revise plans this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): New responsiblities don't always carry with them the needed authority. Think before taking on more. Get a variety of opinions for repair work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Minding your own affairs and keeping the peace with mate or competitors are delicate concerns. Seek solitude. Meditation shows you a simpler path to follow. Do what you can.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Resist provocation — no real basis exists for quarrels now. Let money arrangements alone. Avoid neglecting personal obligations.

Prince Edward Digs Out After 'Worst Storm Ever'

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — All schools in Prince Edward county remained closed today as residents dug themselves out after what an Ontario Provincial Police officer called "the worst storm we've ever had around here."

The peninsula county was virtually isolated yesterday at the height of the blizzard that dumped about 15 inches of snow Tuesday night and Wednesday.

The county was accessible only by snowmobile for most of the day. A Trenton ambulance service had to rush oxygen to an Ameliasburg man by snowmobile when he suffered a stroke. He was transferred to Trenton by ambulance Wednesday night and was reported in good condition.

Schools were closed yesterday, no buses ran into Hastings county secondary schools from the county, and all Picton factories shut down at noon.

Police sealed off the Bay Bridge at Belleville and the canal bridge at Carrying Place on Highway 33 late yesterday morning in an attempt to restrict traffic. The Glenora ferry ran, but approach roads were almost impassible.

County engineer Donald Clark said snow plows were ordered off roads shortly before noon yesterday because of hazardous operating conditions.

They went out again about 6 p.m. as winds abated and the last came in about 2 a.m. this morning.

The 11 plows serving the county have cleared all major roads and are now widening the shoulders. Warnings have been lifted, except for Highway 49.

January Jobless Up to 8 Per Cent

Boost Below Past Years

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of unemployed rose sharply last month to an estimated 668,000 from 538,000 at mid-December and 485,000 a year earlier, it was announced today.

It was an increase of 130,000 in the jobless count in a month, and put the unemployment rate at eight per cent of the January labor force of 8,336,000.

But in making the announcement, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department said the underlying unemployment situation improved last month.

The increase of 130,000 was the smallest December-to-January increase in unemployment in many years, the DBS-manpower report said.

Putting aside the usual high incidence of unemployment in the dead of the Canadian winter, the statisticians said the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment really fell last month to 6.2 per cent of the labor force, from 6.6 in December.

The last time the actual rate of unemployment touched eight per cent was in the winter of 1962-63, when it hit 8.3 in January and rose to 8.4 in February and March.

The eight-per-cent unemployment rate for January compares with 6.5 in December and 5.7 per cent last November. It was 6.1 per cent in January last year.

The goal of relatively full employment is usually regarded as equivalent to an unemployment rate of about three or 3.5 per cent for Canada, though some economists think four per cent would be tolerable.

Another increase in unemployment this month is being freely predicted.

As for those who had full or part-time jobs last month, the report said there was a drop of 123,000 to 7,668,000 from 7,791,000 at mid-December.

This was a smaller decline than usual for two reasons, the

Benson Fears New Inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has to worry about the possibility of another inflationary spiral, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Wednesday in the Commons.

Replying to David MacDonald (PC—Egmont), the minister said unemployment now is the prime concern of the government.

But there was also a worry about another round of inflation next year because government policies would result in economic expansion this year.

Mr. Benson said he raised the problem of inflation at the federal-provincial constitutional conference here Tuesday.

He denied the assertion of George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) that his response to the provinces concerning the unemployment problem was for them to raise their own taxes.

Rogers Favors Asian Parley On Indochina

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William Rogers has endorsed a proposal that a conference of Asian countries, including China and the Soviet Union, be convened to write a lasting peace for Indochina. But official Soviet sources today rejected the idea of a "new Geneva."

"We would support any kind of conference for peace in Indochina," Rogers said.

80,000 Kept From Homes

LOS ANGELES (CP) — With the known death toll in the California earthquake reaching 52, Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles extended for 48 hours the no-return order for 80,000 persons evacuated from the valley below a cracked reservoir dam. It was feared the dam might crumble if another sharp tremor occurs.

Searchers continued to sift ruins of a Veterans Administration Hospital wing where 34 bodies were found. Four patients and five nurses still are missing.

Police have put the number of persons injured in the rolling quake and series of aftershocks at more than 1,000, and a county engineer said property damage could total more than $1,000 million.

Yorty said Wednesday residents would not be arrested if they are found in the 20-square-mile area of the San Fernando Valley menaced by the cracking of the dam in the earthquake Tuesday morning.

"But it would be very prudent for a family not to risk its life before this 48-hour period is up," he said.

Yorty consulted with Earl Richter, inventor of the Richter scale for measuring the strength of quakes, and said afterward that one strong aftershock usually followed a major earthquake.

But Yorty said that Richter was not definitely predicting there would be a strong aftershock this time.

However, he said this was one of the reasons why it was necessary to prevent residents of the Van Norman Dam area from returning until the water in the dam had been siphoned down to a safe level.

"We haven't had that aftershock yet," Yorty said. "If we did have it, it would be unsafe to be below that dam."

Police continued patrols of the deserted streets of the Van Norman Lakes section. Thirteen

Emotions Run High

Robarts Bids Party Farewell

TORONTO (CP) — Retiring Premier John Robarts bade an emotional farewell to the Ontario Progressive Conservative party Wednesday night as the battle to suceed him blazed into what appears to be a two-way fight between Education Minister William Davis and Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs.

A banquet honoring the 54-year-old premier at the Royal York Hotel temporarily cooled political fires, but they were expected to be rekindled today during official nominations and acceptance speeches by the six leadership candidates.

Mr. Davis, 41, and Mr. Lawrence, 45, appeared to be in a tight race for the first-ballot lead in voting Friday by the 1,748 delegates to the three-day leadership convention.

Wednesday night the two leading candidates attended the Robarts dinner with four other candidates scattered among the 1,500 banquet guests: Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Financial Affairs Minister A. B. R. Lawrence, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch and graduate student Robert Pharand of Ottawa.

They heard Mr. Robarts say that whoever wins the 875 votes necessary for victory Friday can expect to become Ontario's 18th premier "in a matter of weeks, or days, as the case may be."

For Other Stories On PC Convention See Pages 5, 10, 11 and 12

The premier steadfastly maintained the political neutrality he has observed since announcing his decision two months ago to step aside after nine years in office.

"Five of them (the candidates) are what I term my boys," he said. "I brought them into the cabinet."

"Nothing ever stands still in poitics. I don't want to stand in the way of the progress that can be made in the next few years. I leave in anticipation of the next great epoch in the on-going process of our party.

Mr. Robarts' low-key speech contrasted sharply with the near-pandemonium that prevailed in the corridors of the downtown hotel earlier in the day.

Campaign teams of mini-skirted girls were at the hotel early Wednesday morning during convention registration passing out badges, ribbons, stickers and placards extolling the virtues of the candidates.

The first day of the convention was ostensibly set aside for serene and sober policy sessions, but relatively few of the delegates sat through the speeches, which were largely retreads of policy statements by the candidates.

In light of the big leads conceded to Mr. Davis and Northern Affairs Minister Lawrence, the three remaining cabinet candidates hope for a head-on clash in early balloting that would clear the way for a consensus candidate.

The McKeough, Welch and A. B. R. Lawrence camps all concede privately that Mr. Davis and Allan Lawrence will probably draw in the neighborhood of 600 first-ballot votes each.

The spotlight shifts today to Maple Leaf Gardens, where the remainder of the convention is being staged. Provincial PC president R. Alan Eagleson told a news conference that the controversial issue of youth representation from three ridings were to be decided by all delegates today.

The provincial Young Progressive Conservatives Association says riding associations in Ottawa East, Carleton and Toronto-Forest Hill refused to name two youth delegates each as required by the PC constitution.

Leader of the Band

Retiring Ontario Premier John Robarts, watched by his wife Norah, appears to be leading a marching band through their routine during a dinner in his honor last night. The dinner also marked the formal opening of the Ontario Progressive Conservative convention for leadership of the party. In background is convention chairman Alan Eagleson. (CP Photo)

Roblin Cheese Factory Closed

The end of a century - old era in cheese manufacturing took place in Hungerford township last week with the sale of the contents of the Roblin Cheese Factory at Chapman's Corners, three miles south of Tweed.

The Roblin factory was the last of 17 plants which at one time operated in the township.

Not only did the township once boast of 17 factories, but Hungerford at one time had its own cheese board where buyers from as far away as Toronto met to purchase cheese.

The first factory in the township was the Jamieson plant, built in what is now Tweed but before the village was incorporated. Land for the factory was leased in 1867. Most of the 17 factories were built between the above date and the turn of the century.

The first cheese at the Roblin factory was made in the spring of 1872. There were 34 patrons who produced milk for 108,325 pounds of cheese which sold at an average price of 11.3 cents per pound.

The three milk delivery routes were sold to the lowest bidders with routes going for 48 to 50 cents per trip. The milk was hauled in horse-drawn wagons.

Horse-drawn wagons were used on the routes until after World War II with factory minutes referring to the "wagons" as late as 1955.

Cheese was also hauled by wagon to Belleville, with each patron hauling a share determined by the amount of milk he supplied.

The lowest price for which cheese was sold was in 1879 when it brought 6½ cents per pound.

In 1891 the cheese company was reorganized and named the "Roblin Cheese and Butter Manufacturing Company" and in 1901 a new factory was constructed.

In 1960 the factory was sold to cheesemaker Orval Ray who modernized the plant and constructed a concrete block addition.

Garden Expert Lectures Here

As a continuation of specialty lectures at Loyalist College, the Ontario and Quebec Gardener, Bob Keith of CBC radio fame, will be delivering a series of lectures beginning Feb. 22.

The five two-hour lectures will be given in the lecture theatre in Loyalist College building B. The program will be open to the first 70 course applicants, on a first-come, first-serve basis with a fee of $10 required.

The series will cover the entire range of gardening: seed sowing, raising seedlings; propagation by various types of cuttings, in the house, in cold frames, greenhouses and under artificial light.

In the varying range of topics will be discussions on such flowers as petunias, asters and zinnias. Flower borders of annuals, culture and care from spring to fall will form part of the program offered in the second lecture.

Other flowers included for discussion will be peonies, roses, iris, herbaceous perennials; in fact, almost every type of flower and the proper care for each.

Planned for the last lecture will be the kitchen garden; fresh vegetables and fruits that can be home grown.

Mr. Keith, a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, has been broadcasting his "Ontario Gardener" series on CBC radio for the past 27 years.

A student gardener at Kew Gardens in England, he has had 30 years experience in the seed and garden supply business, spending much of his spare time propogating new strains of flowers and vegetables in his own garden.

The lectures commencing Feb. 22 between 8 and 10 p.m., are offered through the Extension Division at Loyalist in an effort to provide studies on more varying subjects than regular diploma courses.

Firemen Win Award

Fire crews in Belleville have won honors in a nationwide, world wide fire prevention competition.

The competition, which is sponsored by a worldwide fire prevention organization, included 208 other communities in the same category as Belleville. This category was for cities not exceeding 99,999 and with populations that were greater than 25,000.

Detailed records are kept of the fire hall's business and programs and these records are what the judging organization uses to decide the winner.

This year the over-all winner of the competition was Oakville, followed by Brantford and then by Timmins.

This annual competition is another incentive for the men to do their utmost in fire prevention.

Different programs are set up to educate the general public and at the same time score points in the final judging. These programs include student seminars where high school students in the area can learn a little more of the practice of fire prevention and pass it on to their parents and families.

Other programs include going to the public schools where the children are shown films and given instruction by fire inspectors.

The next awarding of certificates will take place in October.

Industrial Milk Price Increase Is Announced

Industrial milk producers across the province have received the news for which they have been waiting.

The good news is an increase of 29 cents per hundred pounds in the producer price of industrial milk.

The price boost announced by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board bring the price of class 3 and 4 milk to $4.14 per cwt. and for class 5 milk — that which goes for cheese and milk powder — to $3.99 per cwt.

The announcement by the OMMB says the price increase is effective as of February 8.

(The price for fluid or bottle milk was increased by [illegible] cents per cwt. in January with another 15 cent increase scheduled for September of this year).

Lorne Hurd, general manager of the OMMB told members of the Lennox and Addington County milk producers last week that the increase in the price of industrial milk had to wait for the federal government decision on the increase in the support price for cheese and milk powder.

He said the support price for cheese had now been increased from 47 to 51 cents per pound and the support price for powdered skim milk from 20 to 24 cents per pound.

The milk marketing board manager said he did not know whether the increase in the price of industrial milk would result in an increase in the cost of milk products at the retail level.

He said that while the price to farmers is regulated partly by the OMMB and partly by the federal government, the retail price of milk products is not regulated.

"There is no retail price control in Ontario," he said. "The retail price is set by the processors and they have to make that price as competitive as they can."

The announcement of the price increase for industrial milk producers has brought sharp criticism from the National Farmers Union.

William Langdon, chairman of the NFU dairy committee says that the 29 cent increase for industrial producers and nothing for cream producers is totally inadequate and completely unacceptable.

He said the increase fell far below the objective sought by the producers of the NFU who are demanding a minimum increase of $1 per cwt.

"For that matter," Mr. Langdon added, "the price now paid to these producers also falls short of the increase recently sought by the OMMB."

At the OMMB annual meeting in early January, the board made it clear that it was seeking a 35 cent per cwt. increase for industrial producers.

Mr. Langdon said the price which will now be paid to industrial producers could have been paid several months ago. Since September cheddar cheese has been selling at a price well above the previous support price of 47 cents, yet producers have not benefitted from these sales.

Trenton Caseload Is an Exception

TRENTON (Staff) — Unlike other municipalities in the county, problems concerning the welfare of children under 16 did not increase here in 1970, according to Bruce Kerr, Director of Family and Childrens Services of Hastings County.

In a report to the Town of Trenton surveying the activities of the organization in the last year, he says "we admitted a larger than usual number of children to care, 99 in all."

Ten of these were drawn from Trenton, "One was physically abused, one was not receiving care appropriate to her needs, and eight were born out of wedlock," he said.

"Since both of the former were admitted during the first six months of the year, there were no admissions, apart from infants, between June and December . . . a record not likely to be repeated."

At the end of 1970, Trenton was financially responsible for 18 children, down one from the beginning of the year, he explained.

However, he added other communities served by the agency, notably Belleville, were not so fortunate. "There were 156 children in care — an increase of 23 over 1969."

Mr. Kerr contended in his presentation that "Trenton's number one problem remains the shortage of housing for families in the lower socio-economic group".

He added that "if unemployment continues to rise — or remains constant for a prolonged period of time — Trenton will undoubtedly experience serious difficulty".

Many parents contacting Family and Childrens Services say non-medical use of drugs is a "chief matter of concern".

"I am told there is improper drug use in Trenton but to date it has not been a reason for admitting children to care," he concluded.

IN MEMORIAM

DUNNING — In loving memory of a dear husband, William Fredrick Dunning who passed away Feb. 11th, 1970.

This month comes back with sad regret,
It recalls a day I will never forget,
You left us all without goodbye,
But memories of you will never die.
I miss you more than anyone knows,
As each day passes my emptiness grows.
The tears I shed will wipe away,
But my aching heart will always stay.
No one knows the grief I bear,
When the family meets and you're not there,
But you left me memories,
I am proud to own.

—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by his wife Doris Dunning and family.

DUNN — In loving memory of my dear mother who passed away Feb. 11th, 1964.

The day God called you home.

We shall meet in a better land,
Never to part again.

Just entered God's eternal home,
And left the gate ajar.

—Never forgotten by the Farrell grandchildren.

Honest and liberal ever upright,
Loved by friend and all you knew,
A wonderful mother, that mother was you.

Projection Room Blues

Learning the ropes of the projection room are just part of the headaches experienced by Centennial students Peter Stewart and Barry Clements. The youths have organized the Hastings Film Society which will present older, famous films together with educational reels for minimum costs at BCI, starting this Friday at 7:30 p.m. Co-operation from the Hastings County Board of Education and the Quinte Arts Council has played an important role in helping the two students organize the society.

Centennial Students Revive Film Classics

By IAN ROBERTSON
(Staff Reporter)

Remember those wonderful days of yesteryear when film greats like Charlton Heston raced at death's door on a Roman chariot; when Gary Cooper took time out 'rom his wedding to deal with some old friends at lunchtime; when Peter O'Toole headed them off at the oasis; when Clark Gable had words with his blushing bride.

Film classics such as Ben Hur, High Noon, Lawrence of Arabia and Gone With the Wind form only a part of the great film industry that reappears from time to time in local movie houses.

Such films are to be featured by the newly-formed Hastings Film Society, the brainchild of two Centennial Secondary School students, Peter Stewart and Barry Clements.

With assistance from the Hastings County Board of Education, the youths have arranged for projectors and a screen to be installed at BCI for the first presentation this Friday.

The critic-acclaimed movie, "Becket," starring Peter O'Toole and Richard Burton will be presented in its entirety Friday evening at 7.30 p.m. and Saturday at 1 p.m and 7.30 p.m. Admission is 75 cents for adults and students and 35 cents for children.

"It's our purpose to provide entertainment and educational films at the cheapest rate possible," Pete Stewart commented.

"Eventually, we'd like to show Saturday morning children's films."

The young men explained they have been working on this project for the past three or four weeks and expressed appreciation to Eric Runacres who has offered support of the school board and their vice-principal, Murray Irwin, offering help and guidance on behalf of the Quinte Arts Council.

"Lend a helping hand. . . that's what we feel," said Mr. Runacres this morning. "The board is anxious to have the public use our facilities "

The director of education for Hastings County paid tribute to the initiative of the two students.

"We figure it's a wonderful example of free enterprise initiative on behalf of these young men . . an extension of their school experience," he stated.

The two organizers explained it is their intention to attempt re-opening the old McCarthy Theatre on Front Street as a minimum - cost theatre for their films. The youths are presently negotiating with Famous Players, owners of the theatre.

Famous Players, according to the students, has expressed interest in opening the theatre, but does not wish to have a great expenditure to renovate the seatless movie house.

On a three-month trial basis. Pete and Barry hope to tap the movie - loving resources of the community in an attempt to provide a firm basis for opening the McCarthy as a "mid-1940's price-range theatre".

They explained that Paramount Pictures has offered "more freedom" for showing the pictures they wish to screen. They are presently charging the minimum rate required to show the movies, which they rent for at least $50.

Notices of coming movies will be advertised in the local media as well as in schools and on public bulletin boards.

So, with a tip of the hat, and a few crossed fingers . . . roll 'em!

GRANT RICHARDSON

Only minister in the Belleville Presbytery to be ordained this year, Grant Richardson of Stirling will be guest speaker at College Hill United Church Feb. 14. The third year student at Queen's Theological College will take both the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services Sunday. Mr. Richardson, who will be ordained in May, received his high school education in Stirling and until three years ago farmed with his parents in the Stirling area. His wife and three children still live on the family farm.

Intell Story Clears Pound

PICTON (Staff) — "Where oh where have my little dogs gone?" was the surprised reaction of Dr. Robert Clapp as he viewed empty cages at the Picton pound yesterday. The veterinarian commented that he answered his telephone steadily for five hours Tuesday evening after an Intelligencer feature story reporting the plight of an impounded dog appeared.

Although each caller was interested in a golden retriever named Swinger, Dr. Clapp found homes for all six dogs in stir at the Picton Animal Hospital.

By 11 a.m. yesterday the pound was vacant except for a hound called Sam. A Belleville resident eager to own this friendly dog was forced to postpone a trip to Picton until roads became passable.

An enthusiastic response from dog lovers in the Quinte area made Tuesday the "doggondest" day in the animal hospital's history. Six inmates of the pound have now started new lives on the outside.

Tweed Carnival Starts Friday

TWEED — A torchlight parade led by Miss Dianne Gunning, Ontario's Dairy Princess, will open the 1971 Tweed Winter Carnival at 7.30 p.m. Feb. 12.

The parade will begin at Rashotte's Lumber Company store on Metcalfe Street and proceed to the Community Centre.

Hockey will be the attraction Friday night, with a tyke game followed at 9 p.m. by a contest between Tweed Merchants and the Toronto Great West team.

At S. H. Connor Senior School a carnival queen will be chosen during a teenage dance.

Cross-country ski racing will be featured Saturday. A mammoth skating revue featuring former world champion figure skater Donald Jackson will be held both in the afternoon at 2.30 and in the evening at 8 p.m. at the Community Gardens.

Other attractions Saturday will be a tree felling contest, sky diving competitions, snowmobile, sleigh and airplane rides and two dances—square dancing at S. H. Connor Senior School and modern dancing at St. Carthagh's School.

The popular annual pancake breakfast at the Community Centre will open Sunday's events. Last year 1,000 plates were served by the sponsors, Tweed Kiwanis Club.

The seventh annual snowmobile races with $1,000 in prizes will be run off at 10.30 a.m. The Community Centre will be open for free skating between 2 and 4 p.m.

Dairy Princess To Be Honored

The Hastings County Milk Committee will honor Miss Dianne Gunning, of Tweed, this year's Ontario Dairy Princess at a special social evening to be held in the spring.

Milk committee members announced their plans to honor Miss Gunning at their annual meeting held in Stirling last week.

At the meeting, Miss Gunning expressed her appreciation to committee members for the support given her in the dairy princess competition.

She said that an effective and united voice of all producers was necessary for the success of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board's program.

Douglas Ptolemy of Belleville, OMMB fieldman, spoke on the committee's market sharing quota and the procedure involved in transfers. He said transfer forms were available only through him. Producers can contact him at his home or at the agricultural office in Stirling where, under a new program, he will be available every third Thursday from 1:15 to 3:30 p.m.

Storm

Picton public works department rented additional equipment from the H. J. McFarland Construction Company to clear town streets during the storm. No accidents were reported in town.

The Picton detachment of the OPP reported one minor accident. Major problem for police was the dozens of cars abandoned along the highways by motorists.

The duty forecaster at CFB Trenton said winds rose to 39 miles an hour yesterday afternoon at the height of the storm, reducing visibility to about five feet.

The storm affected most of the area from Toronto east to the St. Lawrence Valley along the shore of Lake Ontario. Prince Edward County, projecting out into the lake I.. the storm's path, collected most of the snow driven by westerly winds.

The weatherman reports that more snow is heading this way. Another low is approaching the area and skies will cloud up this afternoon as bad weather moves in again over the southern Quinte district. About one inch of wet snow is predicted for tonight.

Buried Treasure

One of the most fascinating discoveries of recent times was the wreck of the Girona, a vessel of the Spanish Armada which went down in raging seas off the North Antrim coast in Northern Ireland September 1588.

In 1967 Belgian diver Robert Stenhuit and a group of fellow explorers found the wreck in 30 feet of icy water off Lacada Point, one of a number of cliff promontories with Spanish names which Stenhuit concluded had been handed down from generation to generation. On this and succeeding expeditions they recovered from the sea-bed remains of the ship as well as priceless treasure and relics of 16th century Spain.

Surely a remarkable feat, which confirmed the presence of the Girona, hitherto known only by historic record (of 1,300 men aboard when it broke up around midnight, only five were alive at dawn). Stenhuit's discovery was the fruit of many years' research during which he pieced together the story of the shipwreck from faded documents in the archives of five countries. Two other ships of the Armada had already gone down off the west coast of Ireland.

As Stenhuit put it in an article in the National Geographic describing the moment he came upon the wreck: "Closing my eyes, I felt I was back with Don Alonzo de Leira and his desperate men, losing their third and last battle with the elements . . ."

From the Ulster coast to the seas off Western Australia we have learned of a similar probe, this time of the Batavia, a Dutch ship which foundered in 1629.

The Batavia is only one of four 17th and 18th century Dutch vessels which foundered in these waters, but Australian authorities regard it as the most important, as well as the most approachable for divers. The story is that a mutiny preceded the ship striking a reef and going down. The Batavia was carrying a full cargo; members of the crew recovered some of it but most of it was left. A massacre followed on nearby islands of the Abrolhos group, but details of this are lacking.

Among the items found by divers were two brass barbers' bowls, an engraved pewter pen and inkwell writing set, colored pottery, cosmetic jars and the base and main trunk of a silver candelabrum. Battle equipment included powder canisters, cannon and cannon balls and even leather from suits of armor.

Discoveries such as these, involving great determination and hardship on the part of those involved, are memorable feats, providing tangible evidence of the past, and linking us with the important deeds of our day. They add to the historical record of those exciting days.

Winter Driving

In weather such as we have been experiencing in recent days the need for caution while driving is obvious. Yet it is clear that many drivers take incredible risks, from driving too fast for the conditions to trying to pass vehicles ahead.

Some cars may hold the road better than others, particularly those equipped with the soon to be banned (in Ontario at least) studs, but even drivers of these should not be too smug, for an icy surface is no respecter of either drivers or the vehicles they operate. Besides, careless handling on the part of one driver can jeopardize the lives of others.

Whether cars or trucks, heavy or light, many in both categories may be observed at speeds beyond what is safe on the highways during and after a storm.

Northern Pressures

Yachtsman and former flier Sir Francis Chichester has done it again. He has completed his voyage from Portuguese Guinea (West Africa), begun on February 1, to Nicaragua.

Adverse winds robbed him of a chance to break his record for solo navigation of the Atlantic (as we recall he was aiming at 200 miles a day), but the point is he has pioneered yet another route; it was not of the magnitude of previous efforts by this intrepid sailor, but nevertheless it is another exciting chapter in an adventurous life.

What will be next on his schedule? In fact, is there any fresh route of any consequence for him to tackle? Perhaps the Pacific offers such an exotic possibility; as far as we know he has not done any solo yachting in that ocean.

Ready with Answers on Unemployment

Commons Discipline Restored with Return of P.M.

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — It is just like old times — if there has been any aging in the young Trudeau era — with Himself home again from his month of globe-trotting.

It is like he has never been away.

And he has been back only a week.

Things are under that tight a control again.

The day he returned it was just like you remember it used to be — in the days when there was some schoolroom discipline. The Prime Minister came into the Commons as if it were a classroom and the students who had been cutting capers settled down.

Think what you will about the Prime Minister and his Borneo adventure with Joan the female orangoutang and the giant 350-pound turtle that Conservative leader Stanfield said must have reminded him of home and Finance Minister Edgar Benson the way the great shelled creature floundered helpless on its back, head withdrawn and legs wildly waving in panic.

But think this of Himself when you think of him in Ottawa and the House of Commons — instead of Borneo and the rain jungle — he has presence.

It is a presence that somehow instantly communicates itself.

You will recall what the Commons was like in the nearly-a-month the Prime Minister was away, busy, as he so coyly put it when he returned, Commonwealth - saving.

It was not exactly out of control.

But with the Prime Minister absent in Faraway Places, the Opposition, Conservative, New Democratic and Creditiste each in its own partisan way, had great political fun.

It began the very day the House opened after the long Christmas - New Year parliamentary holidays.

External Affairs Minister Sharp was in charge — at least theoretically — as Acting Prime Minister.

But he is too much of a fussbudget. Reminds you, vaguely, of a maiden aunt.

Frets, scolds. And when he does not get his way huffs off into a pouting sulk.

The rest of Cabinet, long used to the easy comfort of a Prime Minister coming to their rescue with a word, a shrug, a wave of his hand — as if it were a magic wand bidding trouble vanish — when they got into trouble, knew instinctively that Mitchell Sharp just did not have that quality of protection.

What was worse for the Cabinet was that the Opposition knew it, too.

And gleefully, Conservative, New Democrat and Creditiste went about the stimulating business of giving Mitchell Sharp the political harpooning of his life.

It got so bad, in the days just before the Prime Minister returned to take charge again, that Acting Prime Minister Sharp became so rattled he blurted out that, yes, perhaps some 750,000 or more Canadians were drawing unemployment insurance.

And that after three unconvincing weeks of trying to persuade a skeptical Opposition that unemployment running "only" 538,000 was not all that critical, and anyway, things were on the upswing again.

Poor Mitchell Sharp, he dropped that 750,000 with a crash on the Commons floor with never a word of explanation —until afterwards and too late — that under the regulations it is possible for the partially employed to work and earn up to 50 percent of their unemployment benefits without being totalled among the jobless.

The Acting Prime Minister finally became so gun-shy that at the closing of some of the rougher Daily Question Periods which open the Commons sittings, he would cut and run for the stairs as an escape from the prying pencils and pads of the working press, and the peek-a-boo lenses and tell-tale microphones of the electronic reporters.

Then home came the P.M. Finally.

You could almost hear Cabinet sigh with relief.

Calm and control were restored.

Pierre Elliott Trudeau sauntered into the Commons just as if he had been there every day. Cool. Confident. So much so as to be almost contemptuous.

He listened, seemingly uncaring, to the gibes about Joan the orangoutang and "Benson" the giant turtle, for he knew what was coming — and he was prepared with the information.

He knew the Opposition would be socking it to him — or trying to — on unemployment — and he had the figures, the arguments and the answers.

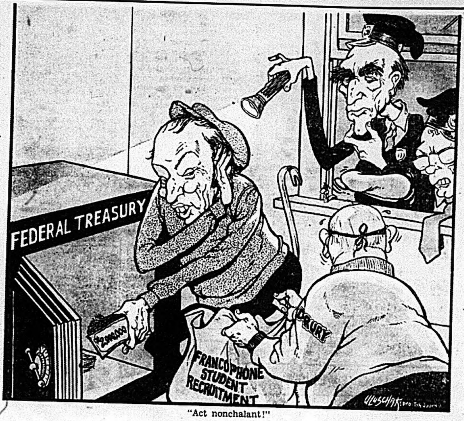
He was standing pat on policy. Unemployment would taper off — just wait for Spring — and meanwhile he was not about to "buy it off" in a spending spree that might only fire up inflation again.

He was calculatingly callous, cried the Opposition, but in the adoring eyes of the Liberal majority he was right — and in Parliament that is what counts, the will of the ruling party.

Clearly "Mr. Magnificent", was back in town and in charge.

Funny thing happened, the day he returned to the Commons.

Of the great entourage that travelled with him, he was the only one, saving a single hardy survivor of the press corps, to make it back to work on time. The others, including the reporters who went along for the ride, the fun and games at the fantastically luxurious Ming Court Hotel, and all right, what work there had to be done, were all "recovering" or resting up from the rigors and vigors of the junket.



"Act nonchalant!"

Fate of Germans Living in Russia

Peterborough Examiner

The German Stuttgarter Zeitung comments on the fate of Germans living in the Soviet Union and on the fact that the Soviet authorities, as part of the West German — Soviet "detente" are supposed to allow them to return to West Germany.

Hans Ulrich Engel writes that there are roughly 1.2 million Germans living in the Soviet Union, most of whom have lived there for centuries, but some of whom were simply captured by the Russian army and taken to Russia.

The Soviet Union, it is said, is prepared to "offer travel documents to between 8,000 to 10,000 citizens of German extraction living in Russia," the paper says.

Maybe "living" is not quite the word for it. The Germans in the Soviet Union are in the same shoes, if not worse ones, than the Jews and other minorities.

Most of the Germans in Russia lived along the Volga. During the First World War, accused of being traitors, the Germans of Russia were assigned to work squads and their estates taken away. In the "Kerensky era," the Stuttgarter Zeitung says, they succeeded in getting some concessions. After the October revolution, famine spread and persecution began again. In 1924, under pressure by Ernst Reuter, mayor of Berlin, the Germans in Russia for Socialist Republic of Volga Germans."

In the 1930s about 5,000 Germans managed to get out of Russia. In 1941, Stalin sent them all to Siberia. Some Germans along the Black Sea were under German occupation during the war — and were sent to Siberia afterward. So were other Germans from Galicia, Wolyn, Bessarabia, and the Baltic areas.

In 1955, when Konrad Adenauer visited Moscow, they were given "amnesty" by Nikita Khrushchev. Some could return to Baltic areas, others now are allowed to live in small groups between Baikal and Kazakstan, and between Alma Ata and Yakutsk, and on territories bordering on Afghanistan.

"It is thought that there has been as many as 300,000 applications for resettlement," the Stuttgarter Zeitung says. Considering that the Russians, as a token, would allow some 8,000 or 10,000 Germans go, the paper says, ". . . it is highly unlikely that there will be a mass exodus and far-reaching resettlement program."

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 11, 1971 . . .

A report, considered by experts to be one of the greatest state papers in the English language, was presented to Parliament in London 132 years ago today —in 1839—by the Earl of Durham. Durham had been sent to Canada in 1838 as governor-general and lord high commissioner with almost dictatorial powers. His report laid down the principles that have guided Britain's colonial policy ever since—and led to the union of Upper and Lower Canada and eventually independence. Durham died in 1840, five days after royal assent was given to a bill uniting Upper and Lower Canada.

1955—Former British foreign office employees Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean turned up in Moscow after being missing for five years.

1952—Elizabeth, N.J., experienced its third airliner crash in less than two months when a plane fell on an apartment house, killing 31 persons and injuring 43.

1949—RCMP took custody of Canadian Communist spy Sam Carr, who was arrested in New York.

1940—Thirty thousand soldiers from Australia and New Zealand landed at Suez during the Second World War.

1929—The Vatican City was created by the Lateran Treaties

Courts and the New Breed of Political Dissident

The Globe and Mail

Robert Allen Cruise, 28, is a petty criminal. He was tried as a petty criminal, found guilty, and sentenced as a petty criminal, and now is in jail serving a 12-month sentence for possession of an offensive weapon and a six-month sentence for obstructing police. Already he has served 30 days for assaulting police.

Cruise is also a Maoist and during the course of his trial tried repeatedly to turn the proceedings into a forum for political invective. He failed.

Three times he was cited for contempt of court and served two terms of 30 days and one of 14 days as a result. When he was sentenced on the criminal charges he was asked if he had anything to say. He didn't. But as he was being led away he called out, "That's one more blood debt" — one more person, the Judge, who, in Maoist terminology, had been marked for execution when the time was ripe.

In passing sentence Judge Theo McCombs told Cruise: "Contrary to your political philosophy and ideological views as expressed in this court, this is a criminal trial carried out within the framework of the laws of Canada."

Judges Robert Morrison and Ross Bennett took the same stand in Cruise's earlier court appearances. They were the judges who issued the citations for contempt. In all, the three displayed a commendable restraint and an unwavering insistence that the court should not be turned from the issue before it.

The judges who issued the citations never lost sight of the fact that they were employing a disciplinary procedure. They were not imposing a punishment, nor were they trying to create a deterrent to other like-minded prisoners. The citations were intended to convince Cruise that his trial would be orderly and that the court would not be goaded into infringing any of the rights a prisoner enjoys. They succeeded.

But this does not mean that contempt proceedings are the best device to be used by all judges in all similar cases.

Patrick Hartt, on leave from the bench of the Supreme Court of Ontario to head the federal Government's law reform commission, is one of those who believes that we need other methods for dealing with disruptions in court.

He explained his attitude during a panel discussion last fall at a meeting of country court judges from across Ontario. "In the past the least little remark to a judge was immediately decreed to be affecting the whole administration of justice, somehow, and (judges) took a very hurt attitude about the whole thing and immediately sentenced the man to jail for contempt. I think that's got to stop. I don't think you can do that any more.

"I think that's an outgrowth of the Nineteenth Century trial procedures and judicial attitudes that we still too often maintain in our courts. I think we've got to develop new attitudes and social conditions."

He's right. Judges aren't sacred and neither are the courts. They are public servants serving in a public institution and their job is to see that laws are fairly applied and to demonstrate to all who wish to see that they are, in fact, being fairly applied. That means that they may have to bear personal insult and abuse without adjourning a trial or citing for contempt. It means that they have to find the fine division between what obstructs a trial and what merely makes it more difficult to conduct.

If our judges turn in anger or in haste to the full power at hand the cry will go up that criminal trials has indeed become political trials. And the cry will be heard by a good many more people than man the ranks of the FLQ, the Maoists and assorted other political psychos.

Mr. Justice Hartt sees a number of possibilities: special training for judges, perhaps even training in psychology; developing methods of conducting trials while the accused are out of the courtroom yet have ample opportunity to follow the trial and instruct their counsel; but most important, he sees judicial restraint and understanding as a key.

"I think (a judge) has to take a great deal more than traditionally judges were used to having to take," he said. "He's got to maintain his cool."

There'll be other trials like the Cruise trial. This is an era of political unrest and it's going to continue. We have to find ways of dealing with it instead of reacting to it. And that applies to judges and courts as well as to the rest of us.

Jobless Increase Less Than Usual

report said. Part-time employment for women was strong, and the employment picture had been more slack than usual in December.

Today's employment report in brief, estimates in thousands:

	Jan. 1971	Dec. 1970	Jan. 1970
Labor force	8,336	8,329	7,984
Employed	7,668	7,791	7,499
Unemployed	668	538	485

Unemployment increased in all regions. The actual rates, not adjusted for seasonality, rose to 10.2 per cent of the labor force in the Atlantic provinces and to 10 per cent in Quebec from December figures of 8.3 and 8.4 per cent, respectively.

Unemployment in Ontario and the Prairies bounced up to 6.4 per cent of the labor force in both regions, from 4.7 in Ontario and 5.3 in the Prairies in December.

British Columbia's rate rose to 9.4 last month from eight per cent in December.

The figures are based on a monthly survey by Dominion Bureau of Statistics of 30,000 households. The figures are then analysed by the manpower department and issued jointly by the bureau and the department.

The report said there was a greater-than-usual drop in construction employment last month, but employment in community, business and personal services rose. Job cuts in trade, manufacturing transportation, communication, and other utilities were about normal for the season.

The report also said that while the increase of 130,000 in the jobless figure was large, it was in percentage terms the smallest increase since January, 1959.

Smaller-than-average percentage increases in unemployment figures were also reported for all age and sex groupings of the figures. In the seasonally-adjusted figures, there was a marked improvement in employment for men in the family bread-winning age group 25 and over.

The DBS labor force survey covers about 30,000 representative households in all parts of Canada except the Yukon and Northwest territories. Indians living on reserves, inmates of institutions, and members of the armed forces are not included.

DBS believes its figures are accurate within half of one per cent for the total labor force, and within 2.6 to five per cent for the unemployed.

People who had jobs but were not at work because of bad weather, illness, industrial dispute, vacation, or were taking time off for some other reason when the survey was taken were counted as employed.

Those who were temporarily laid off for the full week of Jan. 16, were counted as unemployed.

Not counted in the labor force are civilians 14 and over who are going to school, keeping house, too old or otherwise unable to work, or voluntarily idle or retired. Housewives and students working part-time are classified as employed.

The report said that between December and January, employment for women aged 25 and over rose by 11,000 to 1,765,000, whereas it usually has fallen between those two months in previous years.

The number of men aged 25 and over who were employed dropped to 4,135,000 from 4,199,000, but this was a smaller drop than usual.

The number of men aged 25 the 14-24 bracket rose to 277,000 from 218,000 in December. The number of unemployed men 25 and over rose to 319,000 from 259,000, and the number of unemployed women in the same age group rose to 73,000 from 61,000.

In Ontario, where January unemployment rose to 6.4 per cent of the labor force from 4.7 in December, manpower department officials said there was an unusually large increase in the labor force.

They said the decrease in total employment from 2,971,000 in December to 2,945,000 in January was considerably less than the customary decline for this period.

A drop of 35,000 in the number of men employed was partially offset by an increase in employment of women.

While employment in January among 25- to 44-year-olds also rose from the December figure, it fell in all other age groups. Decreases of 14,000 among 14 to 19-year-olds, and 11,000 among 20- to 24-year-olds accounted for much of the total decline.

PC Leadership Race Looks Like Two-man Fight

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

TORONTO — When the PC convention is over, one of the things to be recorded as truly effective in the choosing of a new Premier for the Province of Ontario will have been the policy discussions held yesterday.

Rooms were jammed to bursting as the six candidates outlined their views on major issues and squirmed as well - prepared panelists zeroed in on their weaknesses and policy delegates searched for information with their discriminating questions.

When it was all over, emerging as a big plus for the Quinte area, were the comments of Thomas Symons, president of Trent University, chairman of the day's activities and one of the top half - dozen policy makers in the PC party in Canada.

"You know," he said, after moderating the panel at which William Davis talked about education costs to 300 eager delegates, "these things might not have come about in this form if it had not been for Dick Potter.

"I don't know if anyone else will give him the credit, but his tour of the province before the candidates had stated their campaigns brought to the attention of the delegates the degree of their importance.

"Dick asked them to make the candidates talk and to ask about their policy. He told them not to commit themselves and I for one think he was largely responsible for the convention organizer scheduling these policy discussions in this fashion."

It was a great boost for Quinte's outspoken provincial member. And today, Dr. Richard Potter was caught still on the horns of the questions he has been raising.

"You know I still haven't made up my mind; I've listened to the candidates, read their campaign literature and talked to dozens of people who are in the know.

"What you end up with is a realization you have to make up your own mind. The polls everyone is taking are OK but the only valid factor I can see is that 35 per cent of the delegates are uncommitted.

"To me this boils down to the fact that the speeches of the candidates at Maple Leaf Gardens tonight are going to be the thing that ends up swaying those uncommitted voters."

Most of the polls today have reduced the campaign to a two-man race between Education Minister William Davis and Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence.

Surprisingly enough, most polls do not give Davis the first ballot support you might imagine might be his with the background support of a dozen cabinet ministers and two score members.

It has heartened the Lawrence camp and their efforts to promote the facile-talking minister have served to widen the breach between the positions . . a fact which has upset some party members as a potential source of embarrassment when either man goes to the polls in a provincial election within the next 12 months.

An example of the difference between Davis's deliberate low-key approach and Lawrence's more electric presentation is Al Lawrence's position that the leaders should "start some fires' while Bill Davis says the premier's job is "to put out the fires."

From this point, the gap widens and by voting time Friday there is no doubt there will be both a clear-cut policy division but also a most definite appeal on the basis of personality.

Deals were the talk of the day, but in the background of every candidate's mind is the fact that if the strategy backfires it is not the candidate who received the support who has to carve a new niche for himself, but the man who tried to strengthen his future position by moving his support.

It requires a strong man with a matching personality to stand up to the consequences which follow inevitably any attempt to control the direction of the convention if you are the third or fourth man on the ballot.

At most conventions the candidates elect the easy way out and free their supporters to go their own way.

It is too bad the PC association did not commission an independent author to produce a book on election strategy; it would have made tremendous reading to have been able, in retrospect, to follow the tangled routes taken by the candidates in their search for power.

persons were arrested for looting overnight.

Huge pumps sucked water from the Van Norman reservoir, 10 miles from the earthquake's centre, to lessen the chance of a flood disaster. City officials said small aftershocks from the tremor had caused chunks of earth to slide away from the lip of the fractured earthen dam.

Police originally ordered an evacuation until Wednesday afternoon after cracks were detected in the dam and half a 3,000-foot concrete apron slipped into the reservoir.

The mayor recommended that residents stay away until the reservoir's depth was drained to 10 feet, a level expected by Friday afternoon.

Police said permits would be required to enter the evacuated area.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew and Gov. Ronald Reagan toured the disaster area Wednesday and later met with survivors of the hospital collapse.

There Is Something to Be Said for A Dog's Life

By DORIS CLARK

When a mother of several young children took her dog to Obediance Training Classes, she discovered that the basic rules for training a dog are identical to those for raising a child.

How quickly the dogs responded to firm but friendly discipline! Perhaps, she thought, the world would be a better place if parents took child-rearing as seriously as dog-owners took Obediance Training!

What simple rules work with both dogs and children?

1. Be firm. A wishy-washy attitude won't earn respect.

2 Be. consistent. Arbitrary discipline only confuses and doesn't teach a thing.

3. Give praise for progress or achievement.

4. Show your affection unstintingly.

It's as simple as that! — Dorothy Turcotte

Dear Doris: I am the sort of person who likes to hang on to things. My husband likes to get rid of everything that isn't absolutely essential. Now this works beautifully for him — even keeping his clothes to a minimum, as he gives them away too. To him, one of everything is the very best and two of everything is the second best way to live.

But, for me this is disaster — to hunt for a certain pair of shoes, your patterns, that box I kept for the shower, the old rug you told the neighbor kids they could have for their playhouse, etc., only to find that because you weren't using them at the moment, your husband thought they weren't needed and put them in the garbage.

He comes from a European family and apparently everything within the house, in fact as head of the house, belongs to the man.

Tell me what other women do to hold on to their possessions. After one is married, do you have any rights or say about your clothing? I realize that with wedding presents given to both, the man has the right to do as he wishes. — Am I A Chattel Too?

Dear Am I: Something is to be said for the weeding out of outworn household goods — and many of us hoarders appreciate the efforts of born discarders. But you two go to extreme opposites. Your personal belongings, clothing and family heirlooms should be out-of-bounds when your husband goes on a housecleaning spree.

Insist that your lord-and-master discuss with you the items he thinks are useless, and make a special point of labelling the items you treasure for posterity. If he still throws out something you find useful, buy a new one and present him with the bill.

Individuals have rights, and here in Canada we do not consider that joint presents turn out to be the exclusive property of the man in the case.

Confidential to Near Suicide: Come now, life is what you make it. Fill it full of hate and despair and it isn't worth living. Put a little love and work into it and you will begin feeling alive.

Your parents' fault? They are probably aching to see you so unhappy and know a good deal more than you think about your trips to the aspirin bottle.

Your first step on the road to sanity is to talk to hem. Unburdening is the beginning of better mental health for you — and I'm predicting that they will meet you more than half-way.

Cheese Souffle with Bacon

By MAR YMOORE

The plan was that my sisters were to telephone me if their plane arrived on time in a snowstorm. Then I would prepare a late dinner for three of us. At 5:50 the telephone rang "We're here!" At 6.50 we sat down to a dinner I had prepared in one hour.

OHE HOUR DINNER MENU

Cheese Souffle with Bacon
Baked Potatoes
Fresh Frozen Green Peas
Individual Salads(see below)
Christmas Cake Tea

The first step was to turn oven temperature to 450 deg. Fahr. Then I scrubbed clean three med. potatoes and punctured them with the ice pick and put them in to bake. I measured the milk for the souffle and put it on med.-low in a small pot to warm and made the

CHEESE SOUFFLE WITH BACON (serves 3 or 4)

1 ½cups hot milk
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
3 tbsps. flour
1½ cups shredded Cheddar cheese (packed)
3 eggs — yolks and whites separated
9 strips bacon (halved)

In large pot blend butter and flour, then stir in hot milk until thick. Stir in cheese and keep warm. Add yolks — one at a time, beating each one in quickly as you add it. Whip whites until stiff and fold in until blended. Turn into large buttered baking dish. Cover with halved strips of bacon. Turn oven heat to 375 deg. Fahr. (potatoes are half baked by this time). Bake 35 min. or until well puffed and bacon is crisp. Serve at once.

Meanwhile I had cooked a package of fresh frozen green peas. I made individual salads of two slices each orange, apple, banana, tomato, cucumber arranged alternating on shredded lettuce, spreading the banana and apple with a little mayonnaise.

Dessert was simply sliced 1970 Christmas Cake on a fancy plate served with tea.

Result: A 1 hr. dinner for three.

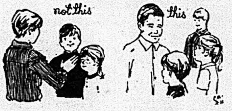
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Joe: "We'll call a family conference tonight and if we stick together, we can outvote Mom and Dad and make them get the sailboat we want. Remember now, don't let them talk us out of it."

Father: "Let's have a family conference so we can discuss the boat. Mother and I may not feel we can follow all your suggestions, but it will help us to make a decesion.

A family conference should not be a matter of the majority ruling, but should give everyone a chance to present ideas and suggestions. The parents, however, should not give up the right to make important decisions.

Ann Landers

Know the Facts Before Accusation

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was shocked last week when I learned that our son and his friends stayed all night at a girl's house. Her folks were out of town and the boys (our son included) told their parents they were staying with a buddy. We now know that several girls spent the night in the house also. We learned the truth when the father of one of the boys became suspicious and went to the girl's house early the next morning. The front door was open so he walked in and woke the kids up.

Our son is 17 — no longer a child. He will be going away to school next fall. If he behave this way now, how will he behave when he is on his own?

What should we do? We have no proof that anything immoral went on, but it's unrealistic to assume these kids did nothing more than talk all night. Can you advise us? — OUTFOXED AT 46 - 53.

DEAR OUTFOXED: Before you assume anything, have a chat with your son and get the straight story — all of it. The fact that the boys spent the night at a girl's house and lied about it is now a matter of record. This should not go unpunished. A separate issue is what did he do there? If he admits he was intimate with a girl, accept the fact that he is now experimenting with sex and will undoubtedly continue to do so.

It is of the utmost importance that the boy understands the responsibilities that go along with sex experimentation. Make sure is is informed on methods of preventing V.D. and pregnancy. Boys who not have adequate information, or worse yet, feel it's up to the girl to "take care of herself" sometimes end up infected or prematurely married.

It is useless to condemn and sermonize. A 17-year-old boy who does not consider pre-marital sex immoral will tune you out completely.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a widow 60 years of age. Three months ago I married a widower who thought I was "wonderful." Now he is comparing me with his late wife who had a Master's degree. (I didn't get to college.)

He won't attend church because "there's too much singing." He doesn't like movies because "they are dirty." He won't watch TV because "it makes his eyes jump." My cooking gives him indigestion and my housekeeping isn't what he's used to. Our marriage has not yet been consumated (physically) because he has not received a signal from his deceased wife saying it's all right with her. Should I consider annulment? I await word from you. — O. CITY.

DEAR O.: The word is yes. You've got yourself a nut.

* * *

DEAR ANN: My heart went out to the mother who feared her children would love their rich grandparents more than the poor grandparents because the former frequently brought lavish presents. The poor grandparents brought only hearts filled with love. I'd like to add something to your advice. The attitude of the children's parents is vital. If they wax wildly enthusiastic over the expensive gifts the kids will soon sense what is important — love or money.

We had the same situation in our family. Our children, now grown, love both sets of grandparents for what they are — not for what they gave. — MONTANA.

WEAR M.: Your additional comments are valuable and I appreciate them very much. Thanks for writing.

Swiss Women Finally Have Right to Vote

BERN (Reuter) — Swiss men decided Sunday to give women the vote in national elections for the first time in Switzerland's history.

Official results of a referendum showed a total of 621,403 men supported the vote for women and 323,596 were against it.

The voting was almost a complete reversal of a previous referendum held in 1959 when the answer was overwhelmingly against giving women the vote — 654,924 votes to 323,306.

In the poll Sunday, 57 per cent of the country's male voters went to the polls.

All political parties, both houses of the legislature and many social organizations, as well as newspapers, business firms and church leaders, came out in favor of the women's vote.

A history of St. John Ambulance Corps was given at the recent meeting of the Plainfield Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. Charles Beatty.

The meeting was conducted by Mrs. Art Wright, president and secretarial duties were taken by Mrs. Garnet Denyes who acted on behalf of Mrs. Garfield Hall who is confined to her home with back injuries. A number of items of correspondence were dealt with and it was approved that the president be a delegate to the officers' conference in Guelph April 28 and 29.

For the program under the direction of Mrs. Carman Huffman, health convener, a talk and demonstration dealing with "First Aid in Emergency" was given by Mr. Johnson of St. John Ambulance. He gave the origin of the St. John Ambulance Corps and described the duties. He also stressed some precautionary factors, mainly — using common sense and no administration of drugs without a physician. Points stressed for observation were: bleeding, breathing and shock. Each factor needs its own special treatment. Circulars and charts dealing with poisons with treatment required were distributed to the members.

A demonstration on artificial respiration was also given dealing mainly with drowning, electrical shock and various respiratory problems.

Mrs. Huffman presented the speaker with a gift.

A duet entitled 'Granny's Cures' composed by Mrs. G. Swan describing emergency measures in grandma's time was sung by Mrs. Swan and Mrs. W. Clare.

Formula for Changing BNA Act Praised

OTTAWA (CP) — The latest formula for amending the British North America Act may not be ideal, but it is probably the best that can be achieved, say members of the joint Senate-Commons committee on the constitution.

The MPs and Senators have been grappling with the problems of finding an amending formula and other constitutional issues since last spring.

The BNA Act is the basis of Canada's constitution.

Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville), co-chairman of the committee, said Wednesday the formula suggested by the first ministers Tuesday at federal-provincial talks was more rigid than he would have liked.

"But we could live with it."

The former dean of law at the University of Windsor called the formula "a fantastic improvement" over the Fulton-Favreau formula of the 1960s because it would make constitutional amendment easier.

Under the arrangement proposed at this week's federal-provincial conference, constitutional amendments would require the agreement of the federal government and six provinces.

Among the six concurring provinces, those now containing 25 per cent of the Canadian population—Quebec and Ontario—two western provinces including 50 per cent of the West's population, and two Atlantic provinces would have to go along.

Province alone could change certain features of their own constitutions, and the federal government could agree with single provinces to other changes concerning them.

The Fulton-Favreau formula, which died when it was rejected by Quebec, would have required approval of all 11 governments on many of the big issues involving the distribution of powers between the federal and provincial governments. It is named after former Conservative justice minister Davie Fulton and the late Guy Favreau, a Liberal justice minister.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal), a former attorney-general of New Brunswick, agreed that the formula would ideally have been more flexible.

But he was willing to pay the price of a less-than-ideal formula to win the long-sought agreement among the provinces.

The other nine provinces had "gone about as far as they can go" in accommodating Quebec, he said. And it was urgent that some formula be concluded to enable Canadians to change their own constitution without recourse to Britain.

The BNA Act is a vehicle of the British Parliament, amendable only at Westminster.

Senator Josie Quart (L—Quebec) said she is very optimistic that an agreement could be reached on the basis of the proposal announced this week.

"I believe that Quebec will go

The premiers and the prime minister are scheduled to meet again in Victoria next June to try to conclude an agreement based on the proposal.

Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cargidan), a former P.E.I. attorney-general, said the first aim should be to find a way of bringing home the BNA Act, and only then to find an amending formula. But the proposed formula was feasible.

Warren Allmand (L—Montreal - Notre-Dame-de-Grace) called the formula a "great step forward" and better than the Fulton-Favreau formula.

Marcel Prud'homme (L—Montreal St. Denis) expressed the view of many members, saying his own preference was far less important than acceptance by the 11 governments.

The committee members expressed general satisfaction with other provisions included in the conference communique—entrenching certain fundamental rights and language rights and setting up machinery for a provincial voice in Supreme Court appointments.

Mr. MacGuigan said the communique would "enhance the role" of his committee in its public hearings in the coming months.

A major task of the committee would be to sound out public opinion on the proposal.

The committee has been holding a series of town meetings on the constitution since last September.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday the public response to the committee's work—and the standing-room-only crowds it had attracted across the country—had impressed the federal-provincial conference with the need to arrive at a quick solution to constitutional problems.

Mr. MacGuigan said the committee would continue its public hearings for several months, and plans a final report in the fall.

It may also produce an interim report dealing specifically with the new amending formula.

Andras Sees Busy Season For Housing

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Andras, minister responsible for housing, presented an optimistic forecast Wednesday of new housing starts this year before the Commons churned into a desultory day-long debate on the government's Dec. 3 budget.

Mr. Andras said the 1971 capital budget of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. will be $942 million, a $152 million decrease from the previous year.

He also announced that special interest rates for construction of low-rental housing projects, public housing, student accommodation, sewage treatment and land assembly programs are being lowered to 7½ per cent from 8¼ and 7⅞ per cent.

The statement came as the Commons entered the fifth day of the six-day budget debate, a vehicle that allows MPs to talk on virtually any subject. The later discussions rambled from housing through unemployment to agriculture. The debate concludes today.

Mr. Andras said that although the capital budget for CMHC this year is less than in 1970, the predicted housing starts show a significant increase over last year.

Mr. Andras said the government predicts 220,000 new housing starts in 1971, creating between 140,000 and 150,000 man-years of work.

In 1970, there were 190,000 housing units started with the CMHC capital budget set at $854 million. An additional $240 million was allocated to housing last August.

Mr. Andras later said in an interview that the additional money had been allocated to housing last year to make up for lack of activity in the private sector. The private lending institutions had since lowered interest rates and made considerably more money available for housing.

Rene Matte (Creditiste — Champlain), one of the few MPs to comment on the minister's statement, said more money must be allocated to cities such as Montreal where the housing shortage is critical.

Mr. Andras said a total of $558 million out of the new CMHC budget will be spent on the provision of housing for low-income Canadians. Of this, $253 million has been allocated for provincial public housing programs.

Another $295 million of the CMHC budget is to be allocated to non-profit organizations, governments, contractors and private groups wishing to arrange special housing projects for the elderly, low-income families and other disadvantaged persons.

Earlier Wednesday, Prime Minister Trudeau said the government will not give up its right to make direct payments to Canadian citizens. He made the statement the day after the federal-provincial conference at which Quebec renewed its bid for full jurisdiction in the field of social security.

Replying to questions by Gilbert Rondeau, Creditiste House leader, the prime minister said Ottawa takes the position that it has the right to make direct payments to citizens in the same way that it raises taxes directly from these citizens.

Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cardigan) used the budget debate for an attack on what he called deliberate government attempts to create unemployment.

Mr. McQuaid said Prime Minister Trudeau has lost the confidence and respect of Canadians because of the high levels of unemployment.

Maurice Dupras (L—Labelle), making his first speech since his election to Parliament in a Nov. 16 byelection, called for a federal park to be built in his riding. This would provide jobs for the unemployed.

Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) said the government should encourage pension programs that would allow everyone in the labor force to retire early. This would make more jobs available.

Apollo 15 Crew Prepares for Moon in July

HOUSTON (AP) — Heartened by the success of Apollo 14, the Apollo 15 astronauts are beginning final training for a lunar adventure next July during which they'll prowl the moon in a wire-wheeled dune buggy.

David R. Scott and James B. Irwin plan to set their lander down on a lunar plain in the Hadley-Apennine region two miles from the base of a 6,000-foot mountain range and less than a mile from a deep rill, or ditch, that cuts the lunar surface. While they explore in three seven-hour excursions, command ship pilot Alfred M. Worden will circle the moon.

Like past moon explorers, Scott and Irwin will erect a nuclear-powered science station and gather new clues for scientists seeking to unravel the moon's history. They hope that by looking into the rill they'll find the answer to how the mare or plains were formed.

Scott said the moon buggy will greatly extend his and Irwin's range on the lunar surface, allowing them to visit more areas and get a wider variety of lunar rocks.

The lunar rover has two side-by-side lawn-chair-like seats with safety belts. Either astronaut can steer the vehicle with a "joy stick" between the seats that resembles the control stick in a jet fighter. The wheels are made of wire mesh to accommodate the loose lunar soil and the one-sixth moon gravity.

A television camera that Mission Control can command to swivel and zoom is mounted on the front of the rover and an antenna that resembles an umbrella towers above.

The camera is expected to give earth viewers breathtaking views.

First Nations Sign Seabed Nuclear Ban

WASHINGTON (CP) — Ceremonies in three world capitals involving more than 60 countries mark the signing of the newest disarmament pact of the atomic age: a treaty banning nuclear weapons from the world's seabeds.

The first signing by 40 countries took place in Moscow and was to be followed by similar ceremonies in London and Washington.

In Moscow, the treaty was signed by Canada, the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union.

After Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko signed on behalf of his country, Premier Alexei Kosygin said Russia assumed the treaty was the "first important step toward complete demilitarization of the seabed."

Kosygin told the Moscow diplomatic corps the Soviet government "in the future, too, will not spare efforts to find solutions to urgent problems connected with stopping the arms race and disarmament."

Among the others who signed the treaty in a half-hour ceremony at the Soviet government House of Receptions were the foreign ministers of Poland, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania.

Kosygin said acts like the seabed treaty could only serve peace in full measure if "the practical activities of states in the field of foreign policy rest upon the objectives of maintaining peace, and not aggravating international tensions."

He called for a complete ban on nuclear, chemical and bacteriological weapons, and the elimination of foreign bases.

The other countries whose representatives signed the treaty in Moscow were: Finland, Jordan, Lebanon, Mongolia, Guinea, Iceland, Bolivia, New Zealand, Burma, Cyprus, Ethiopia, Luxembourg, Iran, Morocco, Austria, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Ghana, The Netherlands, Nepal, Belgium, Japan, Tunisia, Afghanistan, Burundi, Australia, Switzerland, Italy and Greece.

The treaty, negotiated at the Geneva disarmament parley, won United Nations endorsement by a 104-to-2 vote last Dec. 7. It will take effect when 22 of the signers ratify it.

The pact follows the path of the 10-year-old Antarctic treaty outlawing military use of the south polar sub-continent.

Since then treaties have been signed banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere, keeping atomic weapons out of space and Latin America and limiting the spread of nuclear weapons.

Sponsors say the newest treaty covers underwater areas comprising about 70 per cent of the earth's surfaces, starting 12 miles offshore from national coastlines.

The treaty prohibits placing mass destruction weapons, and structures for such weapons, on the ocean floor or its subsoil. It does not ban moving atomic weapons gear such as missile-firing submarines.

Each party to the treaty may inspect the seabed floor to check against violations, and take complaints to the United Nations.

Any country can withdraw from the treaty if it finds this to be in "its supreme interests."

France and China, two other nuclear powers, did not take part in the Geneva disarmament conference at which the seabed arms control treaty was negotiated.

France and China have not signed the 1963 partial nuclear test-ban treaty or the 1968 treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

Laos War Protested In U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Demonstrations were held in several United States cities Wednesday to protest the South Vietnamese military incursion into Laos, and violence broke out in Berkeley, Calif., and Baltimore.

Most of the demonstrations were peaceful, but tear gas was used to break up demonstrators at Berkeley, and six policemen were taken to hospital after a 45-minute melee as a crowd marched on a federal building in Baltimore.

In addition, there was a flag burning and scattered rock throwing at Boston as a crowd marched to the centre of town after an anti-war rally at Boston Common.

About 600 demonstrators marched on an Atomic Energy Commission office in downtown Berkeley and threw rocks and bottles and set an AEC car on fire.

The trouble began when a crowd estimated by reporters at 2,000 gathered on the Berkeley campus where speakers urged them to "shut down the universities" and bring an end to atomic research. The demonstrators began marching around the campus before the one group drifted downtown to the AEC office.

At Baltimore, the policemen were injured after about 300 persons marched from the War Memorial Auditorium to Hopkins Plaza and broke several windows.

Shepard Rapped

LONDON (AP) — Moon golfer Alan B. Shepard got a gentle rap Wednesday from the Royal and Ancient, the governing body of golf in Britain.

It sent him congratulations on his golf exercise on the moon and also on Apollo 14's success.

Then it suggested:

"Please refer to rules of golf on etiquette.

"Before leaving a bunker, a player should carefully fill up holes made by him therein."

Hectic Day at PC Convention

Candidates Busy with Policy Forums and Corridor Greetings

TORONTO (CP) — The men who hope to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts slogged through a frenzied round of policy forums and corridor gladhanding Wednesday as a flood of delegates arrived for the leadership convention of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

As they prepared for a nominating session and acceptance speeches later today, Education Minister William Davis and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence remained in a tight race for the lead on the first ballot in voting Friday.

Wednesday, they joined Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy KcKeough, A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Ottawa graduate student Robert Pharand in an all-out push for delegate support.

The venerable Royal York Hotel was jammed with many of the 1,748 delegates expected for the convention, which was formally opened Wednesday night with tributes to Premier Robarts and a gala banquet.

Spokesmen for the camps of Mr. Welch, Mr. McKeough and A.B.R. Lawrence could cite no specific evidence of an upward trend in their support.

These three men hope to see head-on clash between Mr. Davis and Allan Lawrence which would clear the way for a consensus candidate to gain the 875 votes neded for victory.

The emphasis of all the campaigns was on the uncommitted delegates. Although both Mr. Davis and Allan Lawrence generally were considered to have about 600 first-ballot votes, all the camps agreed that as many as one third of the delegates had yet to make up their minds.

Meantime, party president Alan Eagleson announced at a news conference that the controversial issue of youth representation from three ridings—Ottawa East, Carleton and Toronto Forest-Hill—will be decided by all the delegates at 2 p.m. in Maple Leaf Gardens.

The provincial Young Progressive Conservative Association said the three riding associations had refused to name two youth delegates as specified by the party constitution.

Mr. Eagleson also commented on claims by spokesmen in three campaign camps that members of the party establishment had pressured some delegates. One spokesman said the pressure tactics were used by members of the legislature supporting Mr. Davis.

"To my knowledge there has been no pressure on delegates other than that generally considered to be part of a leadership convention," Mr. Eagleson said in an interview. A spokesman for Mr. Davis earlier made the same disclaimer.

In the formal policy sessions, both Mr. Davis and Allan Lawrence told about 200 delegates they would be willing to sacrifice jobs in the interests of pollution control—although neither believed this would be necessary.

Both men spoke of the need for tougher government controls on polluters; the need for agencies to co-ordinate anti-pollution programs; and said they would be willing to surrender some provincial powers to an international control commission.

The other three major candidates spoke on economic nationalism. They were in general agreement that foreign investment is necessary, but that government initiatives on tax reform and financial incentives are needed to encourage Canadian investors.

Mr. Pharand challenged party members to create a unilingual French university, expand the resources of French-language high schools and extend full financial support to Roman Catholic separate schools.

Meat of the Problem

Dockers at the Royal Victoria Dock in London unload New Zealand lamb carcases recently, a job shipowners hoped would take 10 days. However, it took seven-and-a-half weeks to unload the cargo. This is just one example of the inefficiency that is causing London to lose trade right and left. (CP Photo)

Here Is How First Day Went For Two Convention Delegates

TORONTO (CP) — Before Edith Minogue and Angeline Rochon left their homes near Ottawa early Wednesday morning for an eight-hour train ride to the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership convention here, they had made up their minds who should be leader.

They came through the swinging doors of the Royal York hotel about 8 a.m., snatched a quick breakfast, unpacked and, wearing blue-and-white A. B. R. Lawrence stickers, headed for the convention floor.

This was the day of two delegates:

They lined up for an hour to reach the registration desk. Mrs. Minogue, as a vice-president of the Prescott-Russell PC Association and a voting delegate, paid $25. Mrs. Rochon as an alternate paid $15.

In line, they were bombarded with literature from "Bob Welch girls" dressed in blue jumpsuits and orange knit sweaters, extolling the policies of the provincial secretary.

They admired the floor-length red, yellow and blue cotton dresses on the Allan Lawrence girls but waved aside their invitations to the mines minister's hospitality suite.

Mrs. Minogue munched on an apple grown in Hanover, Ont., compliments of Education Minister William Davis, given out by a girl with a sign saying "Bill Davis gets to the core of things."

The two delegates turned down a summary of Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough's programs from girls in minidresses.

There were no girls in sight promoting student Robert Pharand of Ottawa or the Prescott-Russell delegates' choice, A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs. Their Lawrence stickers had been mailed to them in advance.

They stood in another line to get their riding badges, stood in line to have their photos taken for identification cards and stood in line for a banquet permit for Wednesday night's tribute to retiring Premier John Robarts.

Meanwhile their candidate arrived on the convention floor and was asking some of his youthful supporters what had happened to the girls who were supposed to hand out his literature. No one seemed to know

"I really shouldn't be standing around here by myself," Mr. Lawrence said forlornly as a noisy cavalcade accompanied Mr. Davis to register.

Mrs. Minogue shook Mr. Lawrence's hand, ignored a Jamaica calypso steel band playing Winning is Just the Beginning for Allan Lawrence, and headed up to the A. B. R. Lawrence hospitality suite.

There his lookalike younger brother Barney, a lawyer from Kitchener, was welcoming everyone who dropped in. Several delegates and observers mistook him for the leadership candidate.

Mrs. Minogue said 10 out of 10 Prescott-Russell delegates back A. B. R. Lawrence.

"First he's an Eastern Ontario man. Then he has a clear picture of what's going on. He's very intelligent. And he's an honest man.

"We saw them at the all-candidates meeting in Ottawa. But he was the only one who came to speak to our riding, except for Al Lawrence."

Mrs. Rochon pointed out that he is the only candidate among the five cabinet ministers who speaks French. The organizers estimate that 58 per cent of his support comes from Franco-Ontarians.

Were they disturbed that most polls bill A. B. R. Lawrence as least-likely-to-win?

A strained silence fell on the room, broken quickly by Mrs. Monogue saying: "I have every confidence Bert's going to win."

TV Networks To Cover Voting

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario residents will be able to watch the highlights of the Progressive Conservative leadership campaign on the CBC and CTV television networks.

Both networks will broadcast live from Maple Leaf Gardens Friday afternoon when the successor to retiring Premier John Robarts is selected.

The CBC plans to televise the voting live from 3 p.m. CTV will be on the air from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Women Get 'Joe Jobs'

TORONTO (CP) — Laura Sabia, former St. Catharines, Ont., alderman, tells this anecdote to show that women get the "joe jobs" in political campaigns:

Mrs. Sabia's daughter offered to help out in a campaign but said she wouldn't lick stamps. So she was assigned to look up numbers in the telephone book. Mrs. Sabia's daughter is a lawyer.

A survey of five of the six candidates for the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership shows the women are still mailing, typing, telephoning delegates, and, of course, looking up telephone numbers.

But in at least two of the committee headquarters, those of Mines Minister Allan Lawrence and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, men also do those jobs.

A few of the candidates have women as headquarters office managers. None has a woman in the small group of thinkers who make policy suggestions and advise on position papers.

The committee headquarters surveyed were those of Mr. McKeough, Mr. Lawrence, Education Minister William Davis, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch and A. B. R. Bert Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs.

The sixth candidate, Robert Pharand, University of Ottawa graduate student, is not conducting a full-scale campaign.

Delegate Has Magic Ties

TORONTO (CP) — Dennis Staff of Cumberland, Ont., believes his friend Bert Lawrence can win the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party Friday and become the 18th premier of the province.

But just to make sure Mr. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, has everything going for him, Mr. Staff brought a secret weapon to Toronto.

It's a beige, black and brown striped tie once worn by former prime minister John Diefenbaker. Mr. Staff bought it at an auction not long ago for $24.

He also bought one worn by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield for $25 at the same auction "because, well, he was sitting right beside me."

He waved the Diefenbaker tie in Bert Lawrence's hospitality suite Wednesday and mused:

"I wonder if he's superstitious. Me, I wear this tie to a party and I get along with people just fine. Walking under a ladder or throwing salt over your shoulder, I don't believe in. But ties, that's different."

Mr. Lawrence said in an interview he hasn't seen the tie yet, but if it's offered, "I'll wear it, of course."

Welch Would Give Jobs to Needy

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial office of equal opportunity to see that government jobs are given " . . . to those who need them most," was proposed Wednesday by Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

He told 200 delegates attending a policy session at the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership convention that a recent government contract for the reconstruction of Fort William stipulated that a certain percentage of Indian people be employed.

Mr. Welch, a candidate for the provincial party leadership, said his proposal would ensure that similar contracts say "that jobs are available to those who need them most."

Two Regional Government Plans Ready

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Ontario cabinet has approved proposals for regional governments in the Kitchener-Waterloo and Sudbury areas and they will be made public at the end of the month.

"But no progress is being made toward forming regional governments in Peel-Halton and Hamilton-Wentworth," the story says. "The reasons are mainly political."

"Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough has described the future of regional government in Peel-Halton as being in limbo until after this week's leadership contest . . . and probably until after the next provincial election.

"His officials say the same is true for Hamilton-Wentworth because without a solution to the problems of Peel-Halton there cannot be regional government for the Hamilton area.

"Although regional government is no issue in the leadership contest . . . it has created problems for at least one leadership candidate other than Mr. McKeough—Education Minister William Davis.

"Mr. Davis, whose riding is Peel North, has used his considerable influence, according to sources, to place the future of regional government in Peel-Halton in what Mr. McKeough calls limbo.

"The reasoning for this, the sources say, is that Mr. Davis has his hands full rationalizing the costs of education and the county school board system without involving himself in regional government disputes, especially in his own riding."

Young Student Defends His Entry Into PC Race

TORONTO (CP) — A young Ottawa student seeking leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party challenged party members Wednesday to create a unilingual French university, expand the resources of French-language high schools to Roman Catholic high schools.

Only 25 of more than 200 delegates remained in the seminar room at the party's leadership convention when Robert Pharand, 26, began to speak on the costs of education.

Mr. Pharand stood his ground when Ken Bagnell, editor of The Globe and Mail Magazine, suggested he had no business "intruding" in a leadership race against five cabinet ministers, and when a delegate asked what he was doing in the race.

Speaking in both English and French, Mr. Pharand said he became a candidate to publicize his ideas.

Conservatives are not only electing a party leader but a provincial premier, and they are establishing the "orientation" of the province for years to come, he said.

"I did not agree with the orientation the other candidates were indicating, and I wanted to give my own ideas of where the province should be leading its people."

He told delegates he does not believe the costs of education are too high, but that teachers and resources are not being used to full advantage.

He drew protests from some teachers among the delegates when he said costs could be cut if senior classes were more frequently grouped together for lectures, using a single teacher.

Salary costs could be controlled if teachers put lessons on tape, with the explanation left to lower-salaried teaching assistants.

Mr. Pharand said Ontario should examine an attempt by Quebec to ease the costs of university education by developing a shorter school period between high school and university.

Delegates gave him a rough time for his suggestion that aid should be extended to upper grades of separate high schools. Aid now is given up to Grade 10.

In reply, he said Ontario will come to a time when in education it permits parents a right of self-determination.

Two Lawrences Appeal to North

TORONTO (CP) — The leadership candidates with the same surname had the same message Wednesday when they told the Ontario Progressive Conservative convention their plans for northern development.

About the only difference was that A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, spoke from a prepared text and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence did not.

Both called for more provincial action on transportation, water-resources management and electrical power. Both said the high costs of commodities in Northern Ontario should be cut by subsidies.

Both described some aspects of present government programs in the North as piecemeal.

"We, like every other government in Canada, have failed to produce an integrated development program satisfactory to the Northerner," said A. B. R. Lawrence. "To force balanced growth and the development of secondary industry we must assume over-all control of water, hydro and transportation."

The financial affairs minister said there should be a new scale of freight rates to shift the burden of transportation costs to manufacturers who refuse to locate in the North.

He also suggested combining the highways and transport departments into a new department of transportation that would oversee an extension of air services and rail facilities.

Allan Lawrence also proposed increasing rail facilities and said Ontario should go into the airline business to provide better service to the North if present air carriers are unable to provide it.

The mines minister also said the next premier must take a harder line when he negotiates with the federal government for industrial aid because southeastern and southwestern Ontario are depressed areas as well as the North.

"Ottawa seems to have the attitude that Ontario is rich and can look after its own problems. But southwestern and southeastern Ontario are also areas where there is just as much need for federal help as any other area of this country," he said.

His opponent said provincial control of water, electricity and transportation would correct "our inability to force clusters of secondary industry close to primary industries in the North."

"These secondary industries would have a rolling effect in producing more secondary industries in terms of goods and services because there will be more people," A. B. R. Lawrence said.

He also suggested a northern council of ministers composed of the ministers of mines and northern affairs, lands and forests, tourism and information and transportation, plus any other minister who represents a northern constituency.

Asked by one delegate whether Northern Ontario could survive economically as a separate province, he replied:

"If the area received enough federal subsidies I suppose it could survive as well as some of the Maritime provinces. That's not meant as a slight but that's not the point.

"We must recognize the relationship between the skyscrapers on Bay Street and the mines and mills in the North."

Importance Of Exports Is Stressed

TORONTO (CP) — There is nothing wrong with foreign investment in Canada if the capital comes in through the sale of exports, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch said Wednesday.

He told a policy session at the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership convention:

"We can obtain the additional financial resources in two ways—either by bringing in foreign capital or by selling more Canadian goods abroad.

"If we keep bringing in foreign capital, we will continue to find ownership passing into other hands. To me the choice is simple. We must sell our goods and not our resources."

Mr. Welch also advocated a new national economic policy and repeated his call for a federal-provincial conference to deal with economic development and national growth.

"In this field, as in so many others, it is essential that our initiative not be frustrated by an insensitive federal government," he said.

Among his priorities in a new economic policy would be more encouragement of Canadian ownership by governments and a revamped tax system to encourage Canadian growth.

He said most government programs to encourage domestic ownership "are administered with a banker's point of view. They want to avoid risks. They want the companies applying for help to get firm financial backing, which very frequently means foreign backing."

Davis on Defensive on Education Costs

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis took a defensive stance Wednesday when he explained education spending to delegates at a policy session at the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership convention.

Speaking in rapid-fire sentences, he said "the investment that has been made in education will be one of the most significant contributions of the government of John Robarts."

Outside the 18th-floor hotel room in which the conference was held about 250 teachers, politicians and spokesmen for citizens groups protested the government cutback in education spending.

About 10 speakers, including Tim Reid, Liberal education critic, and Donald MacDonald, his opposite number in the New Democratic Party, berated the education minister.

The crowd dwindled to about 25 people on the street handing out leaflets which bore the slogan "Think Before You Cut".

The minister said economic nationalism was one of the policy topics candidates were invited to speak on and said he doubted "if we could discuss economic nationalism if Ontario hadn't made that investment in education to be competitive in terms of people."

"A discussion on economic nationalism would be only academic," he told about 200 delegates.

However he ducked the controversial question of aid to separate schools beyond Grade 10 until he was questioned on it by a delegate.

The minister then repeated his earlier arguments that the government's stand is based on history and tradition and that if the state totally supported separate schools it would result in fragmentation of Ontario's education system.

He also defended school building costs and teachers' salaries and his proposal to extend the school year in universities so students could get an honors degree in three years instead of four.

"Some creative innovations can be made where we can reach this same end without losing quality," he said. "The day has gone when university students need four months in the summer to work to pay for their education."

Bert Lawrence Gives Investment Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Establishment of a public holding company to put more Canadian dollars into the province's economy was proposed today by A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs.

In an address to delegates at a policy session of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership convention, the contender for Premier John Robarts' job said the holding company could take the form of an expanded Ontario Development Corp.

To gain more control of financing in industry, he said, "our first step must be to study the feasibility of an investment scheme structured to encourage our citizens to invest in Ontario industry."

During a question period, he said that this program could be compatible with the Canada Development Corp. now before the House of Commons and with the federal government's regional incentives program.

He said that his proposed holding company "should not be regarded as just another mutual fund or a scheme to buy back Ontario.

"Through it a pool of equity capital would be available for smaller, growing Ontario firms, starving for Canadian working and expansion capital."

He also proposed that the Ontario Development Corp. could assume the ownership of foreign-owned companies being closed where circumstances involve the public interest.

He chided Canadians for being too cautious in investments while preferring instead to buy life insurance and put money away in bank accounts.

"We must stop being a nation of hoarders and become a nation of builders."

The minister also laid out four priorities — transportation, finance, communications and resource management—to ensure economic goals are reached.

He said transportation determines the character of development, finance would help Ontario industries compete in world markets, communications would guarantee Canadian content in publishing and natural resource protection would emphasize control of recreation lands.

Davis, Allan Lawrence Are Tough on Pollution

TORONTO (CP) — A government tougher on industrial polluters and willing to surrender some of its powers to an international environmental control commission were promised Wednesday by two candidates for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

Both Education Minister William Davis and Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence, speaking to about 200 leadership convention delegates at a seminar on pollution and the environment, advocated a new department with sole responsibility in those fields.

They also both advocated a non-government commission to co-ordinate public and private anti-pollution programs, but they differed on the powers the commission should have.

Both cabinet ministers warned that the price of pollution abatement will be borne by provincial residents, either through taxes or higher costs for the goods they buy.

And both speakers said they would be willing to sacrifice jobs in the interests of pollution clean-up-although both said this should not be necessary.

Mr. Davis said that "maybe we will have to pay something of a short-term economic sacrifice to ensure that our environment is fit for our children," and promised that as premier he would be "tough enough" to impose such policies.

However, more jobs would be created than destroyed in building a new anti-pollution industry, he suggested.

Allan Lawrence said his government would prevent pollution before it got started by refusing to allow a polluting industry to open.

Both cabinet ministers suggested a new government ministry of the environment, a step already being taken by the government of retiring Premier John Robarts.

McKeough Favors 'Home Rule' Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough said Wednesday that if he is chosen premier of Ontario he will follow a six-point program to "establish local governments run by local people to meet local problems."

He told a seminar that the province must "intensify" its efforts "to give back to local government the authority and responsibilities, the tax base and the financial resources, to tackle problems and issues which are essentially local in nature."

"We must reduce interference from Queen's Park and decentralize as much of the power, responsibility and financial resources as possible."

Mr. McKeough, 38, who was responsible for establishing regional governments which are unpopular with some rural-area Conservative supporters, said they are only part of local government reorganization that should vary to meet the needs of each section of Ontario.

The province, he said, must take the following steps:

—Increase the decision-making power and responsibility of local governments, eliminating many non-elected boards and commissions;

—Give local government more money, in unconditional grants;

—Supplement the financial resources of the local governments by speeding up the payment of taxes on provincially-owned and provincially-supported properties;

—Replace provincial subsidies with unconditional grants;

—Keep out of services where local people can do a better job;

—Reform governments only with the agreement of local people.

"My government will decrease rather than increase the concentration of power at Queen's Park," he promised.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1971

By Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

Every time a Belleville Mo-Hawk player breaks a hockey stick it sets the club back the cost of two reserved seats.

For those of you who aren't aware, $40-a-dozen sticks are only one reason why running hockey teams is an expensive business.

As thrifty as Mo-Hawk head trainer Ron Fralick and his helpers are about their stock of lumber, the club still goes through a baker's dozen a week. And that's not bad, considering the team is on the ice an average two games and one practice session in that span.

Senior hockey can be a financial nightmare, and nobody loses more sleep than the managements of Kingston and Belleville entries, The Eastern Ontario lone rangers of the eight-team OHA Senior A circuit are somewhat compensated by being allowed to play ten of their 40 regular-season games against one another.

At the going charter bus rate of $1 per mile (one-way), that means road trips between the neighbors, like those being exchanged this Friday and Sunday nights, only cost the visitors $50.

But when you're taking an Owen Sound or Woodstock trip, you're looking $250 in the face. In fact, the closest Mo-Hawk road trip is Oakville, and that's a $140 bus excursion.

"In all, our bus bill for the year will run around $2,900," sighs general manager Robert Temple, who has been personally bailing out the Mo-Hawks in their five-year history, but even moreso this campaign.

Despite the fact the 1970-71 Belleville entry is waging a down-to-the-wire battle for fourth place in the senior standings (currently one point shy, with games in hand over both Oakville and Kingston), Mo-Hawk crowds have taken an incredible dip from last season when the club never really threatened to rise above the sixth and last playoff spot.

The average for Belleville's first 17 home dates this season couldn't be more than 700-800.

But manager Temple estimates the club needs 1,400 at each home game to break even on the week's expenses, which include equipment bills, cost of officials for home games ($50), ice rental ($180 pays. for a game and practice per week), the week's bus jaunt (averaging $150), and player's salaries, which are restricted by the OHA to a maximum $25 per game, or about $800 a week per team.

About those salaries. They entitle players to spend their Sunday afternoons on a five-hour bus trip, take their lumps in a hostile rink, and sometimes spend another five hours getting back home, just in time to punch in at work.

Not exactly easy money.

Kingston crowds are more understanding than those here. There were 1,900 to watch a mid-week Mo-Hawk visit February 2, despite the fact Belleville had beaten the Aces in six of their first seven meetings, three times on Kingston ice.

The Aces averaged more than 2,000 paid-up witnesses for their 20-game home schedule last season. A Belleville crowd of 1,000 these days is about as common as a flock of Dodos.

Like the song goes: "You don't know what you've got 'til it's gone."

• • •

GEORGE GODSON

Proof that the Mo-Hawks are playing better hockey is their scoring record, which shows the club with 128 goals in their first 34 games. They scored only 134 in the full 40-game schedule last winter.

Yet last year's Mo-Hawks placed four players in the league's top 30 scorers. This year, club scoring is more evenly spread, and only George Godson (nine goals, 29 assists) is in sight of league leaders, but well down the list.

The tireless little Peterborough centre, with a seven-point bulge over sidelined Doug Senior, could take club scoring honors for the third year in succession. Godson, with the Mo-Hawks throughout their five years of operation, paced club point-getters with 17 goals and 25 assists last season, and 15 goals, 34 assists the previous term.

Local football followers may have noticed three familiar names among the 72 Canadian college players selected of 200 eligible in Tuesday's Canadian Football League draft.

Topping the list was Tweed product Pat Lett, a second-round choice of Edmonton Eskimos. Pat, a University of Guelph tackle, is a Quinte Secondary School graduate.

Queen's tackle Ron Faulkner was a third-round choice of Toronto Argos. Ron is a Moira Secondary grad.

Hamilton Ticats picked Quinte grad Rodger Hunter in the sixth of nine rounds. Rodger, who pitched some for Belleville's defunct senior baseball Joyces, was a University of Guleph defensive back last fall.

Apollo Stay Short, Sweet?

Belleville's hopefuls in Canada's first Winter Games won't be there long — just long enough to win some medals, they hope.

The four — Apollo Barbell Club weightlifters Ron Hayes, Paul Barrett, and brothers Bob and Art Walt - departed from Malton Airport this morning to join 2,500 other young athletes in Saskatoon for the first Canada Winter Games.

Weightlifting competition is confined to Saturday and Sunday, and the boys, who each qualified for the trip in December by winning gold medals at the Etobicoke Ontario Winter Games, will be returning to Belleville Monday.

Despite their medal success at Etobicoke, coach Ken Carr-Braint felt all of the four were below par in the competition. But he's glad of it.

"They'd had a very strong training schedule, and we're due for a letdown sooner or later," he explained. "And I'm just as glad it was sooner. Now it's out of their system."

Hayes, a flyweight (114-pound-class) who just turned 16 last month, is given the best chance for a gold medal by his coach. "Unless some complete unknown wonder pops up, Ron should be 70 pounds ahead of anyone else," Carr-Braint predicted.

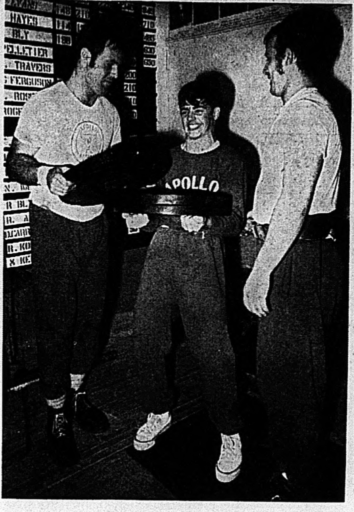
Hayes' best three-lift total is 485 pounds. He did 450 at the Ontario Games and is shooting for 500 in Saskatoon Saturday. Belleville supporters may get a chance to see him do it. The flyweight class is one of the events to be seen in 4-5 p.m. live CBC television coverage Saturday.

Paul Barrett, now in his final year of a three-year BA course at Carleton University in Ottawa, totalled 790 at Etobicoke, but the 21-year - old middleweight (165 - pound - class) has done 815.

The Walt brothers — Art and Bob — are each Canadian Intermediate champions, and should encounter the toughest competition.

Light - heavyweight Art, 19, has a personal best total of 845 pounds, and won a gold medal at Etobicoke with 810. Middle-heavyweight brother Bob, 21, won at Etobicoke with an 845 total, 45 pounds below his best. Television watchers may see Art's efforts during a 7.30-8 p.m. Monday night taped CBC segment of Games action.

The Belleville foursome represents almost 50 per cent of Ontario's nine-member weightlifting contingent.



Pouring It On

Weightlifting Walt brothers Art (left) and Bob appear to be testing flyweight Ron Hayes' endurance, but it's all in good fun. The three will join Apollo Barbell Club's Paul Barrett today in a Toronto departure for Saskatoon to compete this weekend in the first Canada Winter Games. The four Belleville weightlifters all won gold medals at December's Ontario Games.

Garrett Still Stingy

John Garrett's goals-against average isn't the microscopic minus one it was in the early stages of the OHA Junior A season, but it's still good enough to top goalkeepers in the ten-team league.

Official league statistics released today show Garrett leading Junior A goalies with a 3.21 average. If the Trenton native maintains his edge, he will score a rare double, adding the top goalie honors to those he won last season in his rookie campaign with Peterborough's Junior A entry.

Ottawa 67's Michel Larocque, meanwhile, sports a league - leading four shutouts.

Batawa Slopes Will Be Busy For 'D' Race

BATAWA (Staff) — The slopes at the Batawa ski slopes are normally crowded on these powdery winter weekends, but this Saturday a new attendance record will undoubtedly be set.

As many as 130 entries are expected to attend the third in the five - race Southern Ontario Ski Zone "D" class championship series, awarded to the Batawa Ski Club.

Beginning at 10.30 Saturday, the competitors — mostly in the 12-14 age class — will be vying for points that will help them advance up the skiing ladder to "C" class status.

Previous races in the series have ben held at Barrie's Horseshoe Valley and Peterborough's Bethany Ski Club. The two events following Saturday's special slalom at Batawa will be held at Kitchener's Chicopee and Collingwood's Alpine Ski Clubs.

The area public is invited to the Batawa slopes Saturday to watch the event. There will be three entries from the host club: junior club champion Bennett Smets, 14, and 12-year-olds John Dekker and Leslee Cormack.

Hec Comes Back

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP)— John Roy of Falconbridge, Ont., representing Northern Ontario, rolled to his second straight victory Wednesday, crushing Dennis Vickland of Comox, B.C. 10-5 to remain the only undefeated rink in the Canadian Forces curling championships.

Roy decided the game with a four-ender in the seventh. Vickland had lost a squeaker 7-6 to Laurie Cann of Soest, West Germany in the morning draw.

Hector McIntosh of Trenton, Ont., stung 11-5 by Vickland in the opening round, dumped Fred Jones of Summerside, P.E.I. 11-7. Merv Paine crushed Cann 10-3.

The Intelligencer omitted to mention runners - up in this week's Intell Women's Bonspiel — Fran Simpson's CFB Trenton quartet — who bowed out to Quinte Curling Club winner Jane Sheppard in the first event's final game.

Third event runners - up were Hazel Blair's Quinte Club foursome, who lost out to a Napanee rink skipped by Sally Lambert.

Bruins Write Book

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins are not only making run-away of the National Hockey League's East Division race this season—they're re-writing the record book for individual and team scoring in the process.

With 25 regular season games still to go, the defending Stanley Cup champions appear a cinch to shatter all existing team records for goals and assists in one season, while Phil Esposito, Bobby Orr and Co. seem equally sure of establishing new individual highs.

Esposito is after the biggest individual records this season.

The star centre already has 47 goals, putting him far ahead of the pace needed to break Bobby Hull's one-season record of 58. He also has 106 points, making him a virtual certainty to eclipse his own two-year-old NHL high of 126. But Espo always points to his linemates, plus Orr, when people ask him about his scoring.

"Give those guys all the credit in the world," he says. "They get the puck to me. All I have to do is let it go."

As a team the Bruins have already scored 260 goals in their 53 games, making them a cinch to break their own league record of 303 set in 1968-69. They're also already far over 400 assists en route to erasing their own league high of 497, also set two seasons ago.

The power play has scored an impressive 50 goals, though it may not be able to reach its own record of 81 set last season. Meanwhile the penalty killers already have a record for short-handed goals in a season with 17 so far compared to the previous high of 14 by Chicago in 1964-65.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League executive committee is expected to hear recommendations from two days of general managers' meetings and a possible bid for a CFL franchise today. London, Ont. and Halifax, N.S. have expressed interest in franchises and the league has received feelers from groups in Detroit, Mich. and San Antonio, Tex. Calgary Stampeders general manager Roger Lehew denied a report that running back Dave Cranmer had been traded to Toronto Arganauts. Lehew said the Sarnia native had asked to be traded to an eastern conference club after the company he works for transferred him to Toronto.

MONTREAL (CP) — European ski experts have tabbed France's Michele Jacot a skiing genius. And Miss Jacot, just 19, will be out to prove them correct when she visits Mont Ste. Anne, near Quebec City this weekend for Canada's lone World Cup event of the season. Defending World Cup champion and leading with 132 points, Miss Jacot is the only girl who has won a Cup event this season in each discipline-downhill, special slalom and giant slalom. She is the favorite in every race she starts and will be at Mont Ste. Anne on Friday and Saturday. Miss Jacot's strongest competition this season comes from Austria's Anne Marie Proell, who has 123 World Cup points. The Austrian girl will also be at Mont Ste. Anne, as will Canada's top hopes, Betsy Clifford of Camp Fortune, Que., near Ottawa, and Judy Crawford of Toronto.

Irvine in on Four

Rangers Glad Drought Over

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two goals in one game may not be uncommon for some National Hockey League players, but coming after a 20-game drought, it was a feast for Ted Irvine.

The rangy left winger started the game on the New York Rangers bench Wednesday night, but when he finally hit the ice in the second period, he set up goals by Bob Nevin and Pete Stemkowski before adding two of his own on the way to a 4-3 Rangers win over Minnesota North Stars.

In other games, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated Philadelphia Flyers 5-3, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Chicago Black Hawks 3-2, Los Angeles Kings downed Detroit Red Wings 5-2 and California Golden Seals beat Bufalo Sabres 5-1.

The scoreless first period at New York prompted Ranger coach Emile Francis to start shufling his lines in the second period and Irvine got on the ice.

The coach denied he had benched the left winger because of his scoreless play.

"Sometimes you play different combinations against certain teams. I don't broadcast what I'm thinking r what I'm doing."

The happy Irvine said he hoped he wouldn't encounter another slump like his last 20 games.

"When you go into a spell like that, you start messing around all over the ice. I wasn't playing hockey."

Irvine's second goal of the night, and his 12th of the season, came in the first minute of the final period, just before the North Stars tried a comeback.

DENNIS HULL
Two Not Enough

Bill Goldsworthy, Danny Grant and Charlie Burns scored on netminder Gilles Villemure. A second goal by Goldsworthy that could have tied the game was disallowed by referee Bryan Lewis who ruled the Minnesota player kicked the puck into the net.

The win pulled the Rangers back within seven points of the leading Boston Bruins in the East Division.

The Leafs, backed by the outstanding goal-tending of Bernie Parent, rallied from a 2-1 deficit in the third period to edge the Hawks in Chicago.

Dennis Hull beat Parent for two goals but the former Philadelphia goalie stopped 25 other shots to keep the Leafs in contention in a close-checking contest.

Toronto had only 19 shots at Chicago netminder Tony Esposito. He was beaten by Paul Henderson in the first period, Brian Spencer got the tying goal and defenceman Mike Pelyk the winner with less than four minutes remaining.

The Hawks lost Pit Martin late in the game when the centreman acidentally collided with Spencer.

Martin was carried of the ice on a stretcher and taken to hospital for x-rays to determine the extent of suspected rib injuries.

The victory moved the Leafs to within three points of third-place Montreal Canadiens in the East.

Pittsburgh's win over the Flyers moved them into a tie with Philadelphia, 10 points behind second place St. Louis Blues in the West.

The Penguins scored four goals in the first period before a record mid-week crowd of 10,311 fans.

Norm Ferguson, Ron Stackhouse and Ernie Hicke scored in the first period at Oakland to give the Seals their victory over Buffalo before a crowd of 4,040.

Rookie centre Gil Perreault got the Bufalo score, his 28th of the season.

The Seals, in last place in last place in the West Division, remained eight points behind the Kings who exploded for four goals in the third period.

The first Los Angeles goal, credited to defenceman Dale Hoganson, rolled into the net off the stick of Detroit rearguard Mike Robitaille.

Mike Byers, Eddie Joyal, Juha Widing and Bill Flett scored for the Kings in the final period while Gordie Howe and Ron LeClerc scored for the Wings.

League action continues tonight with Boston at St. Louis and Minnesota at Montreal.

Newfy Draws Golden Boy

LONDON (CP) — Bill Drover of Canada battled 20-year-old Joe Bugner of Britain to a draw in a spectacular 10-round heavyweight fight Wednesday night.

The result left Bugner's image as a possible challenger for the world heavyweight boxing championship badly dented.

Drover, 27, a former security guard from Montreal and Wabush, Nfld., suffered a cut above his left eye in the eighth round but stayed even with the Briton who has been hailed as the Golden Boy. There were no knockdowns.

The bout was intended as a warmup for Bugner before he tackles Henry Cooper for the British, Commonwealth and European heavyweight crowns March 16. Bugner showed nothing to suggest he could beat Cooper.

Drover, 205½ pounds, bored in on the 216-pound Bugner continuously, defying the predictions of British sports writers that he would be decked by the young Briton.

Bugner was ranked ninth contender for Joe Frazier's world title in last month's World Boxing Council ratings.

Cooper, who watched the bout from ringside commented:

"Well if that's a warmup for Joe, I'm glad I wasn't involved in it."

Drover, had a previous record of 36 victories in 42 bouts.

Bugner previously had lost only two of his 33 pro bouts.

Heated Debate in Quebec Assembly On Constitution Formula Forecast

QUEBEC (CP) — A lengthy, heated debate seems likely in the Quebec national assembly before Premier Robert Bourassa eventually accepts or rejects a proposed constitution amending formula.

In their initial reactions Wednesday to the formula that emerged from the constitutional conference that ended Tuesday in Ottawa, both the Union Nationale party and the Parti Quebecois were critical.

The criticism by the two nationalist parties indicates a difficult debate on the formula in the Quebec national assembly before the Liberal government decides its position.

If the opposition in the national assembly is joined by criticism from outside groups such as the province's influential labor federations and from the public at large, the government would be forced to reject the formula.

Jean-Jacques Bertrand, leader of the official opposition, the Union Nationale, feels that the new formula is similar to the Fulton-Favreau amending formula in that it is too restrictive.

In a reference to nationalist criticism that the Fulton-Favreau formula would have placed Quebec in a "constitutional iron collar," Mr. Bertrand told reporters:

"The iron collar may be smaller than it was with the Fulton-Favreau formula but it is still an iron collar."

The Parti Quebecois, through leader Rene Levesque and assembly spokesman Camille Laurin, said the formula is unacceptable because it does not recognize "Quebec's right of self-determination."

The separatist party said in a statement that "what is important is not safeguarding the existing powers but ensuring that Quebec will obtain all the new powers it needs."

The word all was underlined in the text of the statement.

The Ralliement Crediltiste's financial critic, Fabien Roy, said the conference showed that neither the federal nor the Quebec government's are aware of "the real problems which most preoccupy our population."

However, Mr. Roy did not comment directly on the amending formula.

Wide-spread opposition to the amending formula, which the leaders of the federal and provincial governments have agreed to study but which they have not yet accepted in any form, could condemn it to the same fate as its predecessor.

In 1964, the premiers concluded three years of efforts at finding a means of amending the constitution in Canada unanimously accepting the Fulton-Favreau formula.

The formula, named for Davie Fulton and Guy Favreau, the federal justice ministers who led the negotiations, created several categories of constitutional powers with a different amending procedure for each category.

To modify the distribution of powers between the federal and provincial governments, the approval of all provinces was required in some cases while in others the approval of the federal government and a majority of the provinces was necessary.

Two Armed Croats Seize Consulate But Surrender to Police in Sweden

GOTEBORG, Sweden (Reuter) — Two armed Croatian extremists who threatened to execute five hostages were removed from the Yugoslav consulate here today without a struggle.

The men, who earlier claimed they were armed with machine-guns, were driven away in a police car after apparently surrendering without a struggle. The five hostages were unhurt, police said.

Before the Croats gave themselves up, Police Chief Bengt Erlandsson had said: "We admit willingly that we do not know what to do. . . . The situation is completely new to Sweden."

The two extremists seized the consulate Wednesday and threatened the lives of the wife of a consulate official, two Yugoslav laborers and the caretaker and his wife.

Blago Mikolic and Ivan Vugicevic said they would shoot their hostages at 3 a.m. EST if the Yugoslav government did not release a fellow Croat condemned to death in Belgrade. They also wanted $100,000 and safe passage for him to Spain.

The Yugoslav ambassador in Stockholm, Vladimir Rolovic, said his government rejected the proposed deal and he gave police a free hand to deal with the situation.

As the execution deadline passed, the two Croats in the consulate lowered a note on a piece of string to police. The note said they would give the Yugoslav government another 12 hours to meet their demands.

Man May Be in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The son-in-law of Abraham Jacob Wolfson, South African millionaire missing here for nearly two months, told police Wednesday his father-in-law may have lost his memory and be living in Toronto under another name.

Eric Dubb, 28, arrived here last weekend to assist in the search for the 62-year-old businessman who disappeared Dec. 16, the day before he was to have signed the final papers in the sale of a $1.1 million apartment building he owned.

Mr. Dubb of Port Elizabeth, South Africa, said Mr. Wolfson

Westminster Abbey's Dean Changes Rules for Tourists

LONDON (CP) — Plans were announced Wednesday by the dean of Westminster Abbey for coping with the ever-rising tide of tourists that threatens to swamp the 905-year-old church and other historic London landmarks in the years ahead.

Opening hours will be extended, services rearranged, a one-way "recommended route" introduced for sightseeing and a squad of university students recruited as multilingual marshals.

Last year the abbey hired time-and-motion experts to suggest ways of easing the congestion from the daily influx off the tourist coaches. Many tour operators like to fit in the abbey before the 11 a.m. changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace.

The dean said it was important that the tourist traffic should not overwhelm the ancient church as a place of worship. The abbey remained "a great Christian church" and he would not want to give the impression that they were trying to turn it into "a more efficient tourist attraction."

Beef Sales to Japan Suggested Solution

MOUNT BRYDGES, Ont. (CP) — The general manager of Massey-Ferguson Farms at Milliken, told Middlesex County beef producers here Wednesday that the best way to combat the importation of Australian and New Zealand beef is to seek export markets for Canadian beef.

William Sutherland suggested an ideal market for high quality Canadian beef would be Japan.

He noted that New Zealand and Austjalian beef imports to Canada, amounting to 134 million pounds, now acount for seven per cent of Canada's domestic consumption.

Mr. Sutherland warned that Canada can expect to see a great deal more fresh lamb entering Canada from the two countries.

PROTECTS SILOS

TROY, N.Y. (AP) — The Rensselaer County agricultural division recommends that farmers with old silos apply a coating of raw linseed oil to protect the interior from silage acids. Agricultural agents for the agency say the raw oil is the most economical and reliable coating for used silos that are not epoxy lined. It should be applied at least every two years as the silo is being emptied.

County Board to Control VON Home Care Work

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Home-care programs now operated in Ontario by the Victorian Order of Nurses will eventually be placed under county boards of health.

Under the Ontario department of health's new policy all new home-care programs are being operated by health boards, Dr. R. M. King of Toronto, physician in charge of home care and medical rehabilitation, told members of the Waterloo County VON board Wednesday night.

Ulster Children Who Attack British Troops Defend Actions in Talk With Two Reporters

BELFAST (CP) — Some of the children who participated in the recent street riots and stone throwing at British troops said Wednesday they have no remorse over their actions.

The youngsters said the best thing for Northern Ireland is to have the troops removed from the six counties.

The children, ranging in age from 12 to 14 years, met with two reporters in a sleazy clubhouse on Leeson Street on the west side of Belfast.

In this Roman Catholic ghetto, reporter also met with a ghetto, reporters also met with a man described as head of the in Ulster.

This man said the youngsters had been organized in two separate divisions with the "seniors" anywhere from 11 years old upwards.

The use of these children to bombard the troops with stones and chunks of pavement is a relatively new development in the wave of rioting that has hit Belfast and other parts of Ulster.

The children sat at a table in the clubhouse room in an upper storey of a derelict house.

They wore battle-dress jackets and scrubby jeans. They looked healthy.,

One of them, in what seemed to be indoctrinated language, spoke of his hatred of the British and said Ireland should be united.

The children said they threw stones and other missiles because they had been roughed up by patrolling troops.

Asked whether they would like to leave this troubled area and perhaps emigrate to Canada, the youngsters said they do not want to leave.

When they finish school, they said, they would get "a job or something."

They seemed to have no idea of a future other than to unite Ireland and eliminate the British influence.

The man described as the official I.R.A. leader said the I.R.A. has adopted a policy aimed at introducing socialism to a united country.

He acknowledged that there is a deep split between the official I.R.A. and the so-called "provisionals" who have initiated some of the drastic military action in recent days.

The provisionals were described as right-wingers aiming at unification of the North and the South.

The reputed leader of the official I.R.A. also conceded that his funds came mainly from Dublin.

An associate of the I.R.A. officer said a landmine explosion Tuesday at the BBC transmitter site in Enniskillen, in which five civilians were killed, was, in effect, an accident.

Without saying whether the I.R.A. was responsible, he said the mine operation was designed for British troop patrols and had been timed over and over again for that purpose.

What happened, he said, was that the civilians' vehicle made a surprise journey on the road usually taken by the army patrols.

All factions of the I.R.A. are formally outlawed but have been showing themselves in public to a surprising degree during the current wave of Ulster violence.

A group of them paraded behind the coffin of one of their men killed in the exchange of fire between troops and snipers during the weekend.

This apparently shocked Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark, who initiated a special order to arrest persons parading openly as members of the I.R.A.

Queen Elizabeth Sails From Florida To Become Travelling University

PORT EVERGLADES, Fla. (AP) — Rusting and slowed by age, the retired ocean liner Queen Elizabeth pulled away from the docks today to sail into a new life as a floating university.

Some 200 persons, many of them wrapped in blankets against early-morning temperatures in the low 40s, watched the once-proud liner ease into the channel with the help of tugs to start a 15,000-mile hopscotch voyage for Hong Kong.

Some 90 Chinese and English sailors were reported aboard the Queen for her scheduled voyage to ports in the West Indies; Cape Town, South Africa, and Singapore.

The 82,998-ton vessel was retired from active service by the Cunard line and settled in Florida as a tourist attraction two years ago. She flopped in that role and drove the men who bought her from Cunard into bankruptcy.

Chinese shipping magnate C. Y. Tung then bought her at auction for $3.8 million and announced plans to convert her into a floating university. She was renamed SS Seawise.

Chapman College in Orange, Calif., is to administer the university. About 600 students are expected to sail from Los Angeles in the fall for studies in the Orient and Africa.

Martin Forecasts Better Business

HAMILTON (CP) — Paul Martin, government leader in the Senate, said Wednesday Canadians can look forward to improved business conditions in 1971.

Senator Martin told the Niagara District Electric Club's annual industrial-night meeting there is "nothing fundamentally wrong with the economy of the Atlantic community, of North America, or of Canada."

But it was up to business, individual consumers and investors to play their part in restoring full confidence in the economy.

Offsetting favorable economic forecasts for 1971 was the "continuing shadow of inflation" which had been brought under control but could be rekindled by too much governmen spending.

A recent decision by the United States administration to expand the American economy quickly could be a great help to Canada, Senator Martin said.

A text of his speech was released in advance.

Parleys Useless Says NDP Speaker

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — John Harney, New Democratic party federal leadership candidate, told a news conference Wednesday that federal-provincial conferences are a useless "boondoggle."

The 40-year-old York University professor, former secretary of the Ontario NDP, called instead for some form of assembly representing all Canadians.

"This week's conference did not deal with the crucial matter under continuing discussion in this country: The division of powers between the federal and provincial governments," he said.

"A close inspection of the communique released from the conference indicates that little or no progress was made and that assurances by the irime minister of a breakthrough were mainly designed to quell criticism."

Private Guards Cannot Issue Parking Tickets

TORONTO (CP) — A directive sent out this month by the Ontario Provincial Police prohibits private security guards from issuing parking tickets.

An OPP spokesman said Wednesday that private agencies which have men sworn to act as bylaw enforcement officers or special constables are breaking the law.

The Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission began swearing in guards to issue parking tickets around apartment buildings two years ago. Police authorities at the time said the scheme would help relieve regular police of a time consuming duty.

A Metro police commission official Wednesday said the OPP ruling is being studied by the commission.

Peter Lewington, president of the Association of Investigator and Security Agencies Association of Ontario, said a number of private guard agencies are concernde about the OPP ruling because they do not want to lose profitable contracts with apartment owners.

"One apartment house owner in Toronto already demands that guards be able to hand out parking tickets before he hires a company," he said.

Seal Quota Set

OTTAWA (CP) — This year's Atlantic seal hunt will begin Friday, March 12, with a quota of 245,000 animals, the fisheries department announced Wednesday.

The season, which ends Saturday April 24, sets limits of 100,000 seals for Canadian vessels, 100,000 for Norwegian ships and 45,000 for local residents.

Canadians will be allowed to hunt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and on the Labrador "font." The gulf take is limited to 50,000 pelts.

The Norwegians will be restricted to the Labrador aca.

The department said in a release the quota is down from an average of 300,000 animals for the 1960s.

It said it would seek a lower quota for 1972.

The season will end before April 24 if quotas are filled.

DIFFERENT DEAL

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — When Bob Hamilton went to buy a car recently, he offered as a trade-in a St. Bernard dog. Salesman John Salisbury did a double take but then realized the 10-month-old dog was just what his family was looking for. Hamilton and Salisbury say they're happy with the deal.

CGE 'List' Prices To Be Eliminated

TORONTO (CP) — The general manager of Canadian General Electric's major appliance department said Wednesday the company plans to eliminate list prices on its products because they no longer reflect actual retail prices.

"Retail prices are set by the competitive situation of the market, and not by our marketing department," William Rooney told the Electric Club of Toronto.

Mr. Rooney said be frowns on two practices used by retailers and manufactures—"bait and switch," and "spiffing."

"Bait and switch," he said, involves a store advertising a low-priced item to lure customers. The customers are then switched to a more appealing, higher-priced model.

"Spiffing," he said, is a deal where manufacturers pay retail salesmen a kickback on each of the manufacturers' appliances that he sells.

"Thus, the consumer is directed towards the purchase of specific models and brands which may or may not best serve the needs of the customer."

A text of his speech was released in advance of delivery.

Top Cameramen Casualties

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese helicopter carrying four civilian news photographers was shot down over the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos Wednesday, apparently killing them and seven other persons aboard.

Among those missing and presumed dead were three of the best-known combat photographers of the Indochina war—Henri Huet, 43, of The Associated Press, Larry Burrows, 44, of Life magazine and Kent Potter, 24, of United Press International.

Others aboard were Keisaburo Shimamoto, 34, of Tokyo, a Japanese free-lancer on assignment for Newsweek; Sgt. Tu Vu, a South Vietnamese army photographer; two senior South Vietnamese officers, and the four-man crew.

A second South Vietnamese helicopter was shot down at the same time, with at least its four crew members killed. It was not known if it was carrying any passengers.

Port Hope Paper Changes Hands

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — The Evening Guide, a daily newspaper since 1878, was purchased Wednesday by Northumberland Publishers Ltd., of Cobourg, from Hugh Murray of Port Hope.

Dr. James Johnston, president of Northumberland and a former national director of the Progressive Conservative party, said the sale was completed Wednesday. The price was not disclosed.

Northumberland also owns the bi-weekly Cobourg Sentinel-Star and the weekly Colborne Chronicle.

Mr. Johnston, the new publisher who has a doctorate in economics, said he will play an active part in the editorial side of the daily.

ITU To Cut Off Strikers' Pay

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for the International Typographical Union said Wednesday the union is ending benefits to 250 men involved in a six-year strike against Toronto daily newspapers.

Terry Wilde, president of printers' Local 91, said continuation of the strike will be left up to the locals but no vote is to be taken Sunday when the benefits decision is officially announced.

The benefits, including strike pay of $118 a week, are to continue until the end of May.

About 900 ITU members walked out at the The Star, Telegram and Globe and Mail July 9, 1964. Most have found jobs elsewhere but picket lines at the three newspapers still are manned daily.

The union spokesman said exceptions will be made for specific hardship cases when the benefits are ended.

CP Fare Increase Vetoed

TORONTO (CP) — CP Rail has been ordered by the Canadian transport commission to suspend its proposed fare increases on its Toronto-Peterborough-Havelock, Ont., train service.

The railway announced Tuesday it would increase the fares by a maximum 60 cents. It said the new fares were needed because the service, always a money-loser, has lost more since a second car was put on the one-car train 1½ months ago.

However, in Ottawa Wednesday, a transport commission spokesman said the increases were being suspended until further notice.

He made it clear that no increase would be allowed at least until the commission announces a decision on whether the railway must continue the passenger service.

If such an order is made, he said, CP Rail would be eligible for government subsidy to cover up to 80 per cent of its losses for running the service.

Charter Company Insures Fares

OTTAWA (CP) — Wardair Canada Ltd. announced Wednesday that it has obtained an insurance policy to protect advance payments made by customers on overseas charter flights.

The Edmonton-based company said in a news release that the insurance policy is effective immediately and covers all charter contracts to be entered into by Wardair.

The policy along with other security arrangements has been accepted by the Canadian transport commission.

The commission ordered Wardair to provide a performance bond or similar guarantee under which prepayments would be secured by a bonding or insurance company.

Wardair would not have been permitted to operate overseas charter flights beyond Feb. 15 if it did not meet this requirement.

Great White Hunter in Arctic Is Under Fire

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Whether "the great white hunter" is a menace in northern Canada or a financial boon to the people of that region was a topic for hot debate by the Northwest Territories council Wednesday.

The argument erupted during discussion of the territories' sports-hunting program for polar bears implemented last year.

"I do not believe that the native people of the Eastern Arctic want to see the 'great white hunter' coming north and killing the bears," said Bryan Pearson, elected member for the Eastern Arctic.

The native people would prefer to have tourists shoot polar bears with their cameras, he told council.

Mr. Pearson introduced a motion calling for the immediate abolition of the polar bear program.

Council members asked for a vote on the motion to be deferred until today to give them time to check with organizations and individuals in their constituencies.

Weldy Phipps, elected councillor for the High Arctic, said he agreed with Mr. Pearson, to some extent.

Mr. Phipps did not suggest the sports-hunting program be abolished but said it should be supervised more closely by game management officers.

"The great white hunters can be pretty hard men to control and often shoot at everything in sight and at each other," he said.

Rules for the sports hunting of polar bears require the hunt be conducted in the traditional manner such as by dog sled.

E. A. Ballantyne, director of the territorial department of industry and development, told council however, that one of the six sports hunters allowed to go after polar bears last year used a snowmobile to chase a bear.

The Eskimo guides were probably not to blame, he said, because they were trying to oblige a writer and a photographer accompanying the hunter.

"As a result of the incident, we decided there would be no serious extension of the program this year until we can satisfy everyone that we can conduct the hunt properly," Mr. Ballantyne said.

The number of sportsmen allowed in the program is to increase to 10 this year.

Last year, two communities in the Far North—Sachs Harbour and Resolute Bay—were allowed to sell a total of six of their people's hunting permits to sports hunter.

The hunters paid the communities $2,000 each for accommodation, guides and the right to shoot a bear.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Gout Painful

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Are they making aspirin weaker? Or is the trouble that my rheumatic aches are getting stronger? I used to take one or two pills and presto! the aches would all disappear. Not any more. They linger on as if they've fallen in love with me.

Of course, I realize I'm not getting any younger (I'm 58) but this right knee of mine is a stubborn one. Every few months it swells, gets hot and painful. I take aspirin, go to bed, put on cold compresses — and lose a few days from the office. But the pain hangs on. All this seems to fit in with an "old man's" arthritis. Do you think there's any sense in spending money on doctors, X rays and special medicines? — Mr. J.

• • •

Comment: Now, Mr. J., what do you really think? I have a hunch you've already made up your own mind it's about time to give a doctor a chance to help. What you tell me about the right knee of yours makes me suspicious of gout being the culprit. (Just a guess.)

Gout often acts that way: coming back to attack the same joint with inflammation. I'll wager your doctor will be suspicious of gouty arthritis, too. Granted that he'll probably order X rays. But it's likely he'll want to take blood tests to determine whether your uric acid level is too high. If it is, then he'll prescribe the "special medicines" we use in the management of gout.

Their purpose is not only to shorten the attacks of pain and swelling, but to prevent attacks of gout from recurring so often. You may have to take the medicine every day — indefinitely. Yes, Mr. J., I agree. It makes sense to give the aspirin bottle a rest, and begin spending money on doctors, X rays and special medicines.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My mother recently died from cirrhosis of the liver in her 60s. She never drank alcohol When she was a young girl she had a ruptured appendix. I'm wondering if the poison from the appendix might have caused her trouble. My sorrow is nearly equalled by my strong sense of curiosity. — Mrs. K.

Comment: I don't know, but I doubt it. I think the appendix was innocent. She may have had a latent hepatitis for many years. Cause? Guessing would be fruitless. I'm sorry I can't give you a specific answer. Only this: that cirrhosis can occur in nondrinkers, too.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Just a suggestion for your readers. It may not work for them, but it does for me. I live alone. I don't smoke — but occasionally somebody comes in who does. I have found if I light a candle during the smoking the house doesn't get "fouled up." — Mrs. W.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: You received a letter from a Miss C., who stated that at 15 years of age 5 feet 7½ is too tall. Well, I'm proud to say that I'm 15 and I'm 6 feet tall. I'm not worried. I'm proud of my height. Boys aren't a problem, either. There are a lot of boys over six feet. So please, doctor, tell Miss C. not to worry. Tell her to be proud of her height. I am. — Miss L.

Comment: Pardon the pun, Miss L. — but you deserve to be looked up to for more reasons than one: your good sense, for example.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: Your coming year is more or less an active search for fundamental truth. Material interests thrive. Today's natives seek original ideas, are tireless intellectual workers once started.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Close the workweek with a minimum of fuss. Your money has wings and takes off around any shopping area. Handle tools with care.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You begin planning more efficient use of your working place and equipment now. Include time for study, prayer in your home life.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Impatience now is prevalent. Hold your comments. Routine is about all that should be expected in your work.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Disregard gossip, and be sure that you don't start a story inadvertently. Pursue established projects. The evening promises discussion.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Nothing comes easily today, and your impulses aren't much help. Avoid both complex schemes and shortcuts. Turn in early for extra rest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Sensible answers are rare Your own comments have a second impact later. Be direct, accurate and considerate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): This is not the day to settle business deals. If you drive or travel, caution is advised. Personal consideration includes self-discipline and meditation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Inquire what old-timers think about today's problems. An extra demand is made on your ready cash and some misunderstanding is likely. Be nonchalant — impersonal to strangers, graceful to those who know you.

SAGGITARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Put things together methodically; check the minor points. Where money is owed you, make an effort to collect it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You are not able to manage all you'd staked out to achieve, but what you do will be constructive. Have a festive evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): There are enough differences of opinion at present; you needn't seek extra ones. Investments in equipment, property, land are favored.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Benefits come unexpectedly from past efforts. Old friends return from journeys with comical and dramatic stories. Intuition helps you.

Garbage Disposal Marmora Problem

MARMORA (Special) — Marmora village council has instructed clerk William Shannon to seek a temporary certificate from the Department of Energy and Resources, Waste Management Branch, allowing the village to continue the present waste disposal site.

Included in the request will be a statement advising the government agency that Marmora will forward an engineering report following the spring breakup.

Bylaw enforcement officer n McInroy reported at the b. 1 meeting of council that the parallel parking on Forsyth Street has been successful, especially during the recent heavy snowfalls. He told council that double parking has been infrequent.

Council passed a motion authorizing the installation of a railing and light on the front steps of the Marmora Public Library.

Dogs are becoming an increasing problem for the village and Harry Brown of the Belleville Branch of the Ontario Humane Society will be contacted concerning a meeting with council to deal with the situation.

Mr. Shannon has been authorized to write to Bell Canada Ltd. requesting the Rawdon and Stirling area be made no-toll to telephone customers in Marmora.

Poignant Moment

The play, The Lion In Winter, is now in progress at the Pinnacle Playhouse. The players here are Flo Yanover, Bob Nihill and Peter Kitcher. A crucial moment in the play has come and Bob Nihill, the son, is showing his only weakness. His love for his mother, is one of the chief emotional torments of the play. The play continues its run until Sunday, Feb. 14.

Drama Festival Entry Captivates Audience

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Theatre Guild held an attentive captive audience last night as the troup put into motion the production of James Goldman's The Lion in Winter.

The play, directed by Lawrence A. Ewashen, was set to a fast pace that was maintained throughout the play.

Regardless of adverse weather conditions, the actors played to a full house. As well as being accepted as a competition entry it is thought this play will be the big success of the year.

Although the box office is not the prime concern of the players, it is one of the prime concerns of the executive, especially in light of recent financial problems suffered by the play house.

With a string of productions comparable to the Lion in Winter, these problems could become non-existent.

The play, which revolves around a king, his three sons and his scheming wife, is a tragic comedy in which nothing is gained except a little more time and a few more anxieties.

While the king amuses himself by pitting each member of his family against the other the rest of the family is plotting for the King's throne and it's power.

Each of his sons is gifted with a certain attribute whether it be strength, intelligence or childishness, and each form alliances between themselves or with Philip, the King of France.

Mike Reed, who played Philip, did an outstanding job with a part that could easily have been lost.

He gave life to his part when he explained how he had fallen in love with the King's son. Through tension, the audience giggled but the passage was accepted as sincere and true.

The queen, who played with the emotions of the family, was at times a figure of pity and at other times a figure of immense strength.

The part, played by Flo Yanover, was not only convincing, but was staggering as she portrayed a tormented queen who could not understand the needs and wants of her family.

Gusto and zest were achieved in the play by Peter Kitcher, who played Henry, King of England.

Although the king delighted himself in the use of human pawns in his game of chess, you could not help but admire his courage as he forgave his sons and his wife for their treason and hate.

The play ended with the banishing of the three sons and with the king and queen leaving the stage embracing and asking themselves if it were possible to live forever.

Other members of the cast were Stewart Arnott, who played John, comic relief son of the king; Dawn Clarke, mistress to the king; Milton A. McCrystal, the intelligent son and Bob Nihill, third and strongest son of the king.

The lion in winter was roaring outside last night with wind and snow and the Lion in Winter was roaring inside with love, hate, humility and success.

The play will be running until Sunday, Feb. 14 at the Pinnacle Playhouse and tickets are available at the door. Curtain rises at 8:30 each evening.

Theatre Plans New Seating

PICTON (Staff) — The Quinte Island Theatre production of Cactus Flower will premiere at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute this month. With opening night less than three weeks away, director Rick Rolston and producer Roger Hirst have described production plans as "A-OK." Posters and tickets have been printed and ticket sales coordinator John Cross has announced that tickets will be available soon at the Lockyer Flower Shoppe and the Riviera Restaurant.

Cactus Flower posters designed by Prince Edward artist Gerald Putman will be displayed throughout the Quinte area in the next few days.

A spokesman for the QIT observed Tuesday that the theatre group is breaking new ground for local theatre presentations. Seating arrangements in the PECI auditorium will not feature a broad centre aisle but makes allowance for considerable room between each row of seats. The advantage of this plan is the preservation of the best seats in the house.

The play will be presented on two consecutive weekends, February 26 and 27 and March 5 and 6 instead of in one three - night stand.

Cook Heads Committee

MARMORA (Special) — James "Scotty" Cook was named chairman of the Marmora Recreation Committee at the January meeting, replacing James McChesney, who will remain as a member of the committee. George Wisti will remain as vice-chairman and Francis Rothermel as treasurer. A secretary has yet to be named.

Mrs. Glen Wentworth advised that she wished to step down as secretary, a position she has held for the past seven years.

The Fire Department and the Marmora Merchant's Association will be asked to name a representative to the Recreation Committee. The Marmora Branch Canadian Red Cross Society has yet to name a representative to the Recreation Committee.

The Village Council will be asked to confirm the appointment of Stephen Potter, President of the Young Adults' Club, as a member of the Recreation Committee.

Two members of the Young Adults' Club, Marilyn Wells and Stephen Potter, were present at the meeting and stated the group had distributed gifts at Christmas. They are considering the sale of hot dogs and soft drinks at the dances in order to make some money.

James Cook advised that Minor Hockey is going to try to get a signed contract shortly with an instructor to teach power skating next fall.

It was reported that Mrs. George Wisti, Chairman of the Figure Skating Committee, had had poor response to a meeting called to plan a carnival. However, another meeting will be called in the near future and it is hoped that plans may yet be made for a carnival at the end of the figure skating program.

Tate's Killer Asks Question

How Can Killing Be Wrong When It's Done with Love?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I feel no guilt for what I've done," said Susan Atkins, confessed killer of Sharon Tate. "It was right then and I still believe it was right."

"But how can it be right to kill somebody?" a defence lawyer asked.

"How can it not be right when it's done with love?" she replied.

Calm and deliberate, the tall brunette testified for a second full day Wednesday, elaborating on her earlier confession that she stabbed the beautiful blonde actress during a frenzied series of killings.

As a witness in the penalty phase of her trial and that of Charles Manson and two other women, she detailed her feelings during the act of killing. She said she felt merciless and guiltless.

"I believe I told Sharon Tate I didn't have any mercy for her at one time, and I don't expect any," she said.

Miss Atkins and her three co-defendants have been convicted of murder-conspiracy in the killings of Miss Tate and six others on two consecutive nights in August, 1969. The jury must decide between life imprisonment or death.

The slender Miss Atkins, 22, in black pants suit and pink blouse, said the seven murders were planned as "copycat killings" meant to convince police that the slayers of musician Gary Hinman was still on the loose. She said it was hoped police then would release Manson "family" member Robert Beausoleil, under arrest and later convicted for that murder.

Chief defence counsel Paul Fitzgerald asked Miss Atkins, "Why were these people killed?"

"Because I believe it was right to do anything to get my brother out of jail," she said, referring to Beausoleil, "and I still believe it was right."

Q. Did you kill them out of passion or hatred?

A. No. I didn't know them that well that I felt anything about them.

Q. Do you feel remorse?

A. Feel remorse for what was right? . . . Feel sorry for what was right?

Montreal Teachers Continue Walkouts

MONTREAL (CP) — Teachers continued protest walkouts over job reclassification Wednesday as the Quebec government, parents and some students indicated they are losing patience in the 2½ week-old dispute.

The walkouts were expected to continue today in some Montreal French-speaking Roman Catholic schools and English-speaking Protestant schools, and to spread to Sherbrooke where 244 junior college professors announced they will stop classes for 3,235 students.

The teachers have called for continuing strike action until the government agrees to negotiate the province-wide reclassification system established under a labor agreement signed in 1969. But the government has said it will negotiate only after the teachers return to school.

Reclassification has lowered the status of hundreds of teachers retroactive to September, 1968. Teachers unions say that in some cases, school boards have demanded to be reimbursed for "overpayment of salary" since the 1968 date.

On Wednesday:

—About 120,000 Montreal area students missed classes as teachers continued rotating walkouts begun Jan. 25 to protest reclassification which lowered salary categories for hundreds of teachers.

—Similar action by Quebec City teachers continued.

—Nearly 400 Montreal and Quebec City teachers defied a court injunction and the advice of Yvon Charbonneau, president of the 67,000-member Quebec Teachers Corp., to demonstrate outside the Quebec City offices of the Federation of Catholic School boards, the major negotiator for school boards in the province.

—Jean-Paul L'Allier, civil service minister responsible for teacher contract negotiations, warned that the government cannot remain indifferent much longer to the plight of affected students.

—1,650 east-end students staged a sit-in for the second day in their school basement to protest interference with their education.

—The 30,000-member Association of Catholic Parents of Quebec said in a statement teachers "must immediately end strikes and occupations and begin negotiations without delay with the government."

Nun Carries Big .38 She's Sister Fuzz to Kids

PONTOON BEACH, Ill. (AP) — She carries a .38-calibre revolver, handcuffs and wears a badge. But on her collar is a crucifix and on her head a nun's veil.

She's Sister Mary Cornelia, special officer for the Pontoon Beach police department. To many teen-agers in this small community 10 miles east of St. Louis she's "Sister Fuzz."

The 45-year-old Roman Catholic nun decided a year ago the best way she could help youthful offenders was to become a police officer.

Superiors of the Sisters of Divine Providence told her to go ahead.

It all started when the nun, then a teacher at St. Elizabeth's School in nearby Granite City, Ill., was beaten on a hospital parking lot by youthful robbers.

"The kids must have been drug addicts looking for money to feed their habit," she said.

Capt. Rosewell Bennett, who signed her on as a full-time volunteer juvenile officer, said:

"She's been a lot of help to us."

She said the gun is part of her uniform and she would use it if she had to.

She once fired a warning shot when a youthful suspect tried to run away.

"He stopped," she said.

During a six-year term of service as a nurse with the U.S. Air Force, she learned how to use a revolver and attained the rank of major. She suffered a leg wound in a combat zone during the Korean war. On returning to civilian life, she became a nun.

PC Race Underdogs Give Best Speeches

It's Morning For Decisions

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

TORONTO — The PC convention here over the past few days has been a study of contrasts, and none more disparate than the quietness of a Friday morning after the hoopla of Thursday night.

At the Gardens last night it was political convention — 1971 style . . . bands and demonstrations, noise and pressure. Today it was quietness . . . but not because delegates had partied themselves into exhaustion even if hotel hospitality suites did not close until the wee hours of the morning.

Instead it was a morning of meetings as riding delegations huddled together in rooms, suites and the convention hall—each trying to sort out the appeals forced at them over the past 48 hours.

It was like the calm before the storm because this afternoon at 3 p.m. they started to count the ballots to determine if education minister William Davis can hold off the supercharged challenge of mines minister Allan Lawrence, and the late splurge of municipal affairs minister Darcy McKeough.

For the Quinte riding delegates it was no different. They went into closed session at the Alexandra Room at the Westbury Hotel this morning and two hours later were still at it.

"We aren't trying to produce a bloc vote", said riding president Ted Parker of Trenton before the meeting. "It is just that we have all listened to the candidates for the past four weeks and now we want to listen to each other and hear any arguments any delegates might wish to present. I'm sure when we come out we will still be voting as individuals rather than as a group."

Dozen U.S. Aircraft Are Lost

SAIGON (CP) — The U.S. Command disclosed today the loss of a dozen American aircraft in Indochina, 11 of them supporting the South Vietnamese campaign in Laos and Cambodia. Fourteen Americans were killed and seven wounded in the crashes, the command said.

The losses—10 helicopters, one F-4 fighter-bomber and a C-123 transport that had been spraying against malarial mosquitoes—occurred in the last five days. It was one of the heaviest tolls of U.S. aircraft reported for such a period since operations in the A Shau Valley in April, 1967.

The Hanoi delegation at the Paris peace talks issued a statement quoting pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces as claiming that they shot down 62 U.S. ND South Vietnamese aircraft in southern Laos in the last week.

Food Prices Climb

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index moved ahead in January to 130.3 points from 129.8 in December, reversing a steady-prices trend of the previous five months.

Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today that the index, based on 100 points for 1961 retail prices, rose by four-tenths of one per cent in the month to a point 1.6 per cent ahead of a year earlier. The index was 128.2 a year earlier.

Food prices, which had been on a downward trend since last summer, led the general advance.

The size of the advance from December had been exceeded only three times in the last 20 months, including the inflationary period of late 1969 and early 1970.

The bureau said the clothing index declined in response to midwinter sales. The health and personal care component remained unchanged.

The food component led the advance which the bureau said was partly attributable to seasonal advances after four months of food-price decline.

However, the average level of food prices remained 4.1 per cent below their peak in August, 1970.

The housing index continued its upward movement in January due to higher shelter and household-operation prices, the bureau said.

Tobacco and alcohol increased, mainly in response to higher cigarette prices.

Today to See Premier Picked

TORONTO (CP) — If speeches can change decisions, the race for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party became tighter than ever Thursday as underdogs out-did the leaders in rhetoric.

The province will know after 3 p.m. EST today when ballots are cast to choose from among six candidates a successor to Premier John Robarts, retiring at 54 after nine years in office.

Education Minister William Davis, 41, and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, 45, the two candidates all polls indicate are leaders for the favor of 1,748 voting delegates, staged impressive demonstrations but failed to impress with their speeches.

But Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, 38, and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, 42, trailing the leaders in the polls, had delegates listening with impassioned speeches.

Mr. McKeough in particular, making what one supporter called "the best speech of his life," had a minor but possibly significant effect.

His supporters in the stands, cheering a point he made, urged Allan Lawrence backers in adjacent seats to stand up and join them. Several did, and two of them peeled their Lawrence stickers from their shoulders.

A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, 47, minister of financial and commercial affairs, was introduced in a noisy demonstration with more volume than numbers. He also impressed the delegates with a plea for change, but appeared unlikely to have gained more than a few votes.

But whatever the outcome of today's voting, the Conservative party cannot lose from its three-day convention as it benefits from province-wide television coverage.

In publicity, the star has been Robert Pharand, a 26-year-old graduate student from Ottawa who entered the race only a week before the convention.

Mr. Pharand, who told delegates he was a candidate not to win but to give expression to principles he believed others were ignoring, entered Maple Leaf Gardens without fanfare and with the support of no more than a dozen young people.

He walked out five minutes later to the applause of hundreds and accolades from prominent politicians.

"He's the best news for the Conservative party this year," said Claire Westcott, executive assistant to Mr. Davis. "From a political standpoint he's a blessing, giving us a good image on TV"

'He's a comer," said Senator Grattan O'Leary of Ottawa, who entered the Gardens too late to hear the speech by his choice for the leadership, Mr. Davis.

But Mr. Pharand, and probably Bert Lawrence, are expected to be eliminated in early ballots today. That leaves the leadership race to four men, and if Mr. McKeough and Mr. Welch are able to close the gap on Mr. Davis and Allan Lawrence, it will be a tight finish, requiring at least three and possibly five ballots.

It became obvious from crowd reaction at the Gardens, where about one-third of the delegates were reported to be still uncommitted, that extra votes are going to go to the candidate who shows the best ability at hammering the Liberal and New Democratic parties in Ontario.

Sedition Charges Quashed

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet today quashed charges of seditious conspiracy against five well-known Quebecers detained under the War Measures Act.

They were accused of seditious conspiracy advocating the overthrow of the Canadian and Quebec governments between Jan. 1, 1968, and Oct. 16, 1970.

But Mr. Justice Ouimet found the period of time too long and found fault with the wording of the charge. He said it is impossible to conspire to commit an offense by committing it.

The accused were labor leader Michel Chartrand, lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Pierre Vallieres, former teacher Charles Gagnon and broadcasting producer Jacques Larue-Langlois.

Chartrand, president of the Montreal council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, was sentenced in January by Mr. Justice Ouimet to one year for contempt of court.

The five are also accused of membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, but trial on that charge has been adjourned automatically day by day since the seditious conspiracy proceeding began Feb. 1.

Mr. Justice Ouimet, going over arguments presented by the defendants in their motion to quash the charges, found that their arrest, detention and arraignment under the War Measures Act was perfectly legal."

The judge's ruling quashing the charges was greeted by a mild stir of clapping among the some 20 spectators in court.

Proceedings had been adjourned until today last Tuesday when Gagnon presented the latest of the motions in Court of Queen's Bench, stating the charge did not specify the crime he committed and therefore should be dismissed.

Supreme Court Judge Upholds Breathalyzer

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court judge ruled Thursday that penalizing suspected impaired drivers for refusing to give police breath samples is not contrary to the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Mr. Justice Neil Fraser made the ruling in ordering the case of John Leonard Curr of Locust Hill, Ont., to be sent back to provincial court for trial. Curr was acquitted Sept. 1 by Judge Maurice Charles, who ruled that the breath-sample requirement of the Criminal Code, effective since 1969, was against the Bill of Rights' protection against self-incrimination

Mr. Justice Fraser backed up his ruling by noting that the high courts of both Ontario and Alberta ruled 15 years before the enactment of the Bill of Rights in 1960 that even if a suspect's blood sample was taken without his consent, the analysis of that sample is admissible as evidence against him at his trial.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A mixture of rain and snow is common across the lower lakes. Colder air is slowly pushing south from Lake Huron and this mixture of rain and snow will change back to snow as the temperature falls. Later today an Arkansas low is expected to trigger a heavier snowfall over the lower lakes. Accumulations of three to five inches are possible as the storm passes south of Lake Ontario overnight. Saturday colder air is expected to drop south across the lakes and gradually clear out the cloud and snow. The cold spell will be short lived however as another storm now developing over the Northwest Territories is forecast to cross this region Sunday.

Evacuees Awaiting Leave to Go Home

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Gaunt and purple, a 68-year-old dietitian was found alive after being trapped for 58 hours after Tuesday's earthquake tore the veterans hospital where he worked apart, killed at least 60 persons and did more than $1,000 million damage to a wide area of Southern California.

Some good news was in the making for about 80,000 evacuated residents of the San Fernando Valley. They may be able to return to their homes, which lie in the spillway of a dam cracked by the earthquake.

At the same time, police predicted huge traffic jams today on roads leading north of this city of 7,500,00 as residents set out to leave on a four-day holiday weekend over freeways shattered by the quake.

The main northern outlet, the Golden State Freeway, was split in parts by the quake and cement overpasses crumbled. Police said detours had been worked out around damaged sections of the road, but warned of delays of up to five hours to motorists.

Schools Request More Secretaries

Administrators of Hastings county board of education are concerned about the time principals waste on routine secretarial work.

The principal, they say "is expected to direct his attention and training to the supervision of programs for the children within his school. This is a full-time job and does not permit him to spend time doing secretarial work."

They asked the board to authorize hiring additional secretaries costing $29,400 a year, but the board deferred any decision until the budget debates.

Secondary schools come out ahead in the secretarial department. The seven schools in the county now employ 37 full-time and 6 part-time secretaries at a cost of $178,000 annually. Administration is asking for 1.5 more, at an additional cost of $6,400 a year.

As part of its policy, administration would like the board to establish a secretarial allotment schedule based on student enrolment. Secondary schools with 1,100 to 1,299 students, about average size here, would be entitled to six secretaries for the main office, library and guidance office.

Elementary schools are seriously understaffed with secretaries, the board was told.

Unlike secondary school secretaries, they don't work in the summer months, except for a few days at the beginning and end of the school year. The number of days of summer secretarial help allotted to an elementary school principal is determined on a basis of pupil enrolment.

Under the new schedule, an elementary school with 400 to 499 pupils would be entitled to 20 days of secretarial help during the summer.

Elementary schools in the county now employ 14 full-time and 26 part-time secretaries. Administration is asking for an additional four, representing a cost increase of $16,800 a year. Cost of additional secretarial services for July and August would be $6,200, bringing the total cost of additional elementary school secretaries to $23,000.

With a tight budget forecast for this year, trustees decided to wait and see how much money was available before approving the new secretarial schedule.

Ameliasburg Parents Want Late Buses

AMELIASBURG (Special) — A resolution passed by council Wednesday is aimed at putting a stop to students hitch-hiking to and from Belleville and causing a daily nuisance for motorists using the Bay Bridge route.

Council was in full agreement to renew an appeal to the Prince Edward County Board of Education to implement late transportation for Ameliasburg students attending high schools in the city similar to an arrangement provided the students of Picton High School through the school board.

An earlier council raised the subject and it has been discussed by both boards of education in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, without action being taken.

Among the parents who registered latest complaints were some who expressed strong feelings about the lack of interest shown for their earlier request for the late bus service to accommodate children remaining in the city at high schools after regular classes to play basketball and participate in activities to do with term courses.

Council announced that Brian Smith, 23, of Belleville, was a successful applicant for the position of treasurer and tax collector. Mr. Smith, who is married, will be assuming his official duties at the township office, Monday, Feb. 22.

Also announced was council's decision to terminate the arrangement to collect fees for the Federation of Agriculture with the taxes.

Missing Aircraft Is Sought

TRENTON (Staff) — A Dakota aircraft from 424 Squadron here left this morning to join in a search for a downed aircraft in central Quebec.

The ski-equipped plane, a one-engined Taylorcraft, piloted by an employee of the E. B. Eddy paper company, was expected to arrive at noon Thursday at Lac Nilgaut, Quebec, 40 miles north of Deep River, Ont., but failed to show up.

The pilot, an experienced aviator with 150 hours flying time, knew the area well. However, he failed to submit a flight plan before departing from Shawinigan Falls earlier in the day.

Name of the missing man has not been released by Search and Rescue people here.

Soothing Warmth of Thin Wax

A soothing coat of paraffin wax and mineral waters coat Jack Boyle's arms, while Mrs. Sabra Arnott prepares to wrap the coating in soft towels. This form of heat treatment penetrates the afflicted arthritic area, and is absorbed by the muscles.

CARS Is Reorganized

The Belleville Committee of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society was reorganized this week after being inactive for several months.

A new executive has been formed and Ian Brady, chairman, expressed the hope that the newly formed committee can become an effective community organization.

Every Tuesday and Thursday evening commencing at 6 p.m., Mrs. Kathryn Brown provides professional physiotherapy for arthritis and rheumatism sufferers at the Belleville General Hospital.

Patients are welcomed by the Arthritis Society, which provides volunteers to aid Mrs. Brown in preparing patients for treatment.

Mr. Brady explained that the service was now covered by the OHSIP plan. Volunteers Mrs. A. A. Gemmell and Mrs. D. A. McKinney, in charge of patient services, commented that before the hospital service plan, the society had charged, basically, what the patient could afford to pay per session.

Arthritis and rheumatism are considered a major social and economic problem affecting one in 20 Canadians of all ages. The Tuesday and Thursday clinics provide the patient with access to hot wax and mineral water treatment, whirpool baths, limited-effort exercising machines ranging from exercise bicycles, traction tables, exercise weights, parallel bars, muscle harnesses for exercising stiff limbs. In fact, such centres all across Canada are considered to have some of the best arthritis control programs in the world.

The Belleville committee will offer a series of films, literature, gifts and services to the public concerning the forward strides being taken by the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

Mrs. Brown, who handles the actual treatment of the patients at the clinics, commented on the precarious position some arthritis and rheumatism patients are in.

"All you have to do is stay around here and hear some of the remedies they are offered."

The volunteers referred to some of these remedies as having come from "quacks."

Mr. Brady explained that "we will have drivers for those who wish them, when we get a bit more organized."

Elected to the committee were Ian Brady, chairman; Mrs. Clarence Fuzzen, vice-chairman; J. B. Leslie, public relations officer; Mrs. Ronald Godden, secretary; Steve Huk, treasurer; Mrs. Abbie Frechette in charge of memorium gifts; Dr. J. S. Loynes, medical adviser; Mrs. A. A. Gemmell and Mrs. D. A. McKinney, patient services; and directors D. W. Snedden, Mrs. H. W. Blakely, Mrs. Stewart Robertson, Mrs. Ernest Shipton, Brian Smith, Mrs. Enos David, and Mrs. J. N. Hartt.

Further information concerning the Belleville committee of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society can be obtained from the United Community Services, of which they are a member organization.

Stokely Decision May Be Today

TRENTON (Staff) — Directors of Stokely - Van Camp of Canada are now considering the possibility of opening their canning factory for this year.

Mayor Duncan McDonald said today that he is expecting a telephone call today from the president of Stokely-Van Camp concerning the matter.

He said he had contacted the Stokely senior executive and explained to him that the Ontario Water Resources Commission did not require shutdown of the Dufferin Street plant but only a schedule for implementation of pollution controls.

J. B. Harder, manager of the local plant, indicated this morning that any revision in plans would not be made in Trenton.

"I would imagine it is being considered but that is a matter for head office," he said.

Brotherhood Week Starts Sunday

Herbert Mowat of Toronto will be Brotherhood Week speaker at the Belleville Kiwanis Club Luncheon meeting of Tuesday, Feb. 16.

Brotherhood Week, being observed across Canada from Feb. 14 to 21, is a time when Canadians are asked to join forces with the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews to combat prejudice and discrimination.

Across the nation, community - minded citizens will mark the special week in various ways, ranging all the way from community involvement in ethnic group festivals to Indian Days when Indians display their arts and crafts and address school assemblies on Indian culture.

In Quebec, the emphasis is on French-English relationships when hundreds of teachers and students exchange visits within the province and with Ontario and the Maritimes.

Quiet Morn Brings Decisions

Last night's Gardens show was a spectacular and it left some odd impressions:

Bert Lawrence has emerged as the party thinker, the man with the ideas — and even the man with the program. But he is likely to go out on the first ballot voluntarily along with student candidate Robert Pharand, who will be eliminated.

Darcy McKeough delivered one of the hardest shots of the campaign when he zeroed in on Allan Lawrence over his stand with Ottawa. Yet a poll in the inner sanctum of his Royal York Hotel headquarters showed most of those delegates talked to would probably switch to Al Lawrence if McKeough is forced to drop out.

Throughout the campaign the Bill Davis theme has been "play it cool." Last night he played it so cool it might have lost him the prize ring. Surprising when you consider the massive political brain trust in his corner.

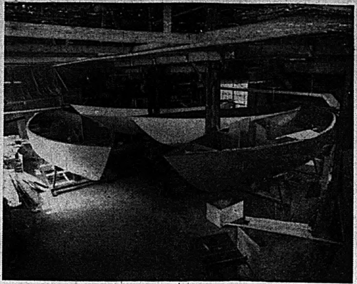
After the Gardens lights dimmed you figured anyone of the five men could do the job (Premier Robarts said the same thing publicly Wednesday night). It makes you wonder where are their equivalents in the federal PC party.

One man who has looked bad is "Fast Eddy" Goodman, the PC backroom boy used as the cover story on the Globe Magazine a week ago. His action of storming out of the Gardens, disagreeing verbally and loudly with the seating of the disputed Young PCs, gained him little stature.

In turn, Alan Eagleson, the PC provincial president who had been accused of not being too effective over the past year, has looked good in the role of convention chairman.

Last night only Allan Lawrence said publically he was prepared to support whomever the delegates chose. But around the hotels today the delegates are one and all in the same mood — no matter who gets elected he is "the man who is going to win Ontario".

So goes it at conventions. I guess that is what they are all about.



Corvettes in the Making

Moulded fibre glass hulls of Corvettes like the one bought recently by Ontario Premier John Robarts are shaped at Belleville Marine Yards here. The Belleville firm has turned out 160 of the 31-foot yachts and recently expanded facilities to cope with this year's increased orders.

Former Owner Says Plant Will Benefit From Sale

Deloro Stellite and the city of Belleville will enjoy long range benefits as result of the sale late last year of the local alloy processing plant to British Oxygen Corporation Ltd. (U. K.)

This is the feeling of M. J. Murray, president of M. J. O'Brien Ltd., former owners of the Belleville plant, who was in Belleville yesterday to say a final farewell to associations built up over the years.

"We regretted selling the Belleville plant, but Stellite will probably be better off under the umbrella of giant British Oxygen than under a private family group" said Mr. Murray.

Belleville people need have no apprehension as result of the change of ownership, he said.

Sale of Deloro Stellite by M. J. O'Brien included its subsidiary plant at Swindon in England.

The English plant will be operated through the British Oxygen head office in that country, while Deloro Stellite in Belleville will be under the new owner's Canadian subsidiary, Canadian Oxygen (Canox).

Mr. Murray said that as far as he understood, British Oxygen planned no changes at the Belleville plant either in personnel or production.

The Ottawa based M. J. O'Brien Ltd. still owns the 300-acre former Deloro Smelting and Refining property at Deloro which it purchased in 1907. Mr. Murray said there were no immediate plans for disposal of the Deloro property.

He said his firm was working very closely with the Ontario Water Resources Commission regarding the control of arsenic pollution originating from the Deloro property.

"We feel we have the pollution problem under control," he said. "The parts per million of arsenic from the Deloro site is now well under limits set by the OWRC."

Mr. Murray said M. J. O'Brien is also continuing its highway construction operations in Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec. The firm owns Diblee Construction, a ready-mix concrete plant and other construction interests.

The Ottawa company also has mining interests and specializes in the mineral exploration field.

Quinte Students At Convention

TORONTO — Interested spectators at today's convention vote were 22 students from the history department from Quinte Secondary school. The students bused up today as a school project worked out by history teacher Mr. George Super. Arrangments at the Toronto end were made by Mrs. Joyce Rendell, chairman of the Women's division of the Belleville PC Association.

Robarts' Yacht Belleville-made

Premier John Robarts may become a familiar figure around Belleville this spring.

His new yacht, a 31 - foot Corvette made at Belleville Marine Yards will be commissioned and launched here in May.

As a retirement gift, the Progressive Conservatives of Ontario will spend up to $5,000 to fit and rig the Premier's yacht. The gift, accompanied by a plaque enscribed "Smooth Sailing", was presented to Mr. Robarts after his retirement speech at the Progressive Conservative Convention in Toronto Wednesday night.

With his purchase of a locally-made Corvette, the Premier joins 160 owners of the yachts in the same class. Six Corvettes sail out of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club and yachts of the class have won the club racing championship on more than one occasion.

Although it is not yet definite, it is believed the yacht Mr. Robarts will sail is the medium blue and gold model now on display at the Toronto Boat Show at the CNE.

Belleville Marine Yards, where Corvettes have been manufactured since 1965, is a division of C and C Yachts, one of Canada's largest boatbuilding companies.

Other yards are located at Oakville, Niagara and Port Credit.

Belleville Marine builds six classes of yachts. As well as the 31-foot Corvette and the 36-foot Frigate it turns out the HR 25, the CC 40, the CC 40C, a new centre-cockpit cruising yacht with a 13-foot beam, and the 36 R another new class described as a "flat-out ocean racer".

About 80 per cent of the local production is sold in the United States, says Peter Blacklock of the firm.

With Americans regaining confidence in their economy this year, "the U.S. market for yachts has gone off the deep end," he says.

The newly formed C and C Company, a merger of several individual boat-building firms showed a profit last year — it's first in operation. This year orders are up — the firm has sold all the new CC 27s it can manufacture this season at one of its other yards and so the class is going into production soon in Belleville.

The local yard has expanded its facilities and now employs more workers than ever — about 50 currently.

Adding to the popularity of C and C yachts is their success this year on the Southern Ocean Racing Circuit off Florida.

Last week the big C and C 61-foot yacht came 12th overall in the SORC and the CC43 was third in her class.

The Belleville firm gives a healthy boost to the local economy. A Corvette is listed currently at $16,400. Accessories, such as sails, are extra.

Late School Buses Get Mixed Reception

Late buses from county secondary schools have had a mixed reception.

Some are used and some are not.

The buses were requested by physical education teachers to enable students to remain after school to participate in extra - curricular activities.

The trial period ended in January, and the board decided at its last meeting to discontinue some of the buses.

Buses carrying fewer than 15 students will be discontinued on a regular basis, but will be reinstated for special events as the occasion warrants — perhaps once or twice a month.

The late buses serving North Hastings High School in Bancroft were cut, except on those occasions when there is a demand.

Tweed and Marmora runs from Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc are filled to capacity and on Cinema Nights the students' council is considering a second bus for these runs.

The late bus running from Moira Secondary down Highway 2 to Tyendinaga Reserve has been the least successful, averaging only nine students a day, four days a week. It will be cut off, provided the department of Indian Affairs agrees. The department pays for the extra bus.

Folklore, Bowling Chief's Topics

Chief Traynor Ora Halftown, a member of the Brunswick Advisory Staff, spent Thursday in Belleville, teaching the children of St. Joseph's and Sir Winston Churchill Schools, the arts and ways of his people, the Seneca Indians.

Although the teaching of Indian folklore was the main discussion area, when his songs and dances were finished he began talking about bowling and how easy it is to have fun at the sport. After the show one of the younger students jumped up and announced, "I'd like to congratulate you on your performance, I think you're better than Jackie Gleason."

The Chief invited all the students to join him in the fun of bowling.

Belleville Bowl was packed to capacity.

After a brief session of fundamentals, the Chief retired to a desk where the children could come and talk to him and obtain his autograph.

There was no charge to any of the students and teachers and representatives of the bowling alley agreed that it was a great success.

The Chief travels to Toronto next and from there he goes to Miami Beach.

After 100,000 miles a year, the Chief shakes a lot of little hands. On asking the Chief for his main concern he said, "I love kids, and I love to see them happy."

Crime and Insanity

When President Nixon and Vice-President Agnew campaigned in the country-wide elections last November they talked mightily about law and order. Nobody paid much attention, which is a pity because law and order (or rather the lack of it) remains possibly the United States' public problem number one.

There has been an earthquake and loss of life in California, but tragic as this is, think for a moment of the shadow of the gunman and the psychopathic killer in U.S. society. Yet another terrible instance has come to light in recent days, and it is only the latest of many of a similar nature which have plagued the American population over the years.

The terror began in Los Angeles one day last week with the discovery of the body of a 13-year-old girl in a city park; she had been strangled. A hiker took the number of a car he saw speeding away from the scene. There followed a wild chase across three states, but before suspect Bertram Greenberg, 38, was gunned down by police officers in the desert outside Grants, New Mexico, an Arizona highway patrolman had been shot dead and another critically wounded. Also presumed dead was a young Missouri man, shot by Greenberg and his body dumped into a mineshaft. His 23-year-old wife, with three gunshot wounds, managed to drag herself through brush to the highway. Greenberg, abandoning his own car earlier had commandeered the Missouri couple's small German vehicle.

Greenberg's history is indicative of the criminal risks taken by the authorities themselves in dealing with persons of known mental instability. Married with a 17-year-old boy, Greenberg was described as a "sexual psychopath" after his first rape arrest more than 15 years ago. He had a long record of similar sex crimes and violence and was paroled from a California institution last April.

All this speaks for itself and while Canada, mercifully, lacks the population that spawns this sort of thing, we do recall a recent warning of Ontario Chief Justice Dalton Wells of an increase in violent crimes committed by persons who were insane at the time. There is a macabre geographical coincidence too between the American affair and a double murder a couple of years ago. Found dead in a farmer's field in Missouri was a young Montreal couple, students who had been hitchhiking around the U.S. and who had gone missing after leaving Mexico en route home.

If, as Justice Wells says, the increase of crimes by the insane reflects a "serious malaise," what can we say about the far more dangerous situation in the United States? The authorities there (as well as in Canada) should realize that paroling men like Greenberg is playing with fire and taking altogether irresponsible risks with the lives of innocent people.

Is This the End?

The plight of the celebrated Rolls-Royce Company, in receivership following mounting costs on an engine contract for the U.S. Lockheed people, is a humiliating one. It is also a sad end to one of the finest enterprises in British industrial history.

But is it really the end? Can the government help put the company back on the road to solvency? It has been done in one other case of a similar nature, but then steps were taken in time to head off financial disaster. We refer to the giant shipbuilding operations of Harland and Wolff in Belfast. The company had been in decline, faced as it was with fewer orders and the stiff competition of Japanese and other overseas yards. The Northern Ireland government stepped in with a large financial grant and business once again is picking up.

The surprising thing in the Rolls-Royce debacle is how things were allowed to come to such a pass. Everything had been going well, it seems, with both the car and aircraft engine manufacturing aspects of the business, until mounting costs hit the Lockheed project. The engines were being manufactured at a fixed cost — but costs mounted (as inevitably they do these days), and that was that.

It looks as if the company simply miscalculated, with the dire results we see today.

The Other Side of Apartheid

South African Envoy Surveys Republic's Progress

SOUTH AFRICA SCOPE

"Give a man a fish and you give him food for a day. Teach him to fish and you give him food for a life-time. That is an old Chinese saying. Teaching people to help themselves is a basic principle in our policy in South Africa," South African ambassador to the United States Mr H. L. T. Taswel told the World Affairs Council of San Diego in California.

"A Colored doctor operating on a Colored patient with a Colored anaesthetist and Colored nurses in attendance is not an unusual event in Cape Town. It may be seen at a Colored hospital in that city.

"Nor is it unusual to see a black doctor lecturing to a group of black student nurses. That may be seen at a leading hospital for black people in Johannesburg. And in Durban an Indian doctor may be seen on his rounds attending to Indian patients. "South African medical schools have produced about 175 black doctors, 50 Colored and 464 Indian. Some 652 non-white students are now studying to be doctors.

"At about 100 registered training centres black girls are trained as fully qualified nurses and midwives. At Baragwanath hospital about 97 per cent of the nursing staff of 1,500 are black. They range from matrons, fully qualified nurses and auxiliary nurses to student nurses.

"Baragwanath is South Africa's biggest hospital and one of the largest in the whole of the southern hemisphere. Situated near Johannesburg, it treats about 2,000 in-patients and 2,000 out-patients every day of the year. It performs about 2,000 operations each month, ranging from minor fractures to complicated brain, heart and eye surgery and serves 10,000 meals every twenty-four hours.

"The hospital is available almost exclusively for black people. The average patient pays the infinitesimal sum of only 70 cents. That is the total charge for a major or minor operation, for all medical and nursing services, medicine, accommodation, food—the lot for less than a dollar whether he stays for a day, a week, a month or longer.

"Our population of 21 million people is made up partly of 3.8 million white people whose ancestors came to South Africa over 300 years ago and settled areas which were virtually unoccupied. It is made up partly of 2 million Colored people of Malay descent and of mixed blood. Our population includes 0.6 million people of Indian origin whose ancestors came to South Africa from India. Our population is also made up of 14.9 million black people belonging to eight different national groups, each one with its own language, customs and traditions. They were migrating from Central Africa at about the same time that whites were settling at the Cape. They occupied other parts of the country.

"How do you get all these people to live in peace and harmony? We believe that certain principles have to be recognized. People wish to run their own affairs with a form of government which fits in with their own particular customs and way of doing things. People should be free to retain their own culture. People of each national group should be able to develop to the maximum of their ability without undermining those of another national group. One should move away from domination of any one national group by another whether it be black by white, white by black, Colored by Indian or black by black. We believe in bringing people together where they can benefit from close association. We do not believe in bringing them together where such close association is likely to lead to friction.

"We accordingly believe that our solution lies in the creation of a commonwealth or common market based on economic interdependence and political independence. Within this framework we see the creation ultimately of separate states for the whites and for the various black national groups and the development of the greatest degree of governmental autonomy for the Colored people and for the Indians.

"How are we training the various national groups to take over these responsibilities?

"A good example is furnished by the territory of the Transkei, the centuries old home of the Xhosa people in South Africa. In area the Transkei is about the same size as the Netherlands or Switzerland. For about seven years now the Transkei has had its own black legislature made up partly of members elected on a one man vote basis and partly of traditional or tribal leaders. Executive authority is vested in an all black cabinet, consisting of a Chief Minister and five other Ministers. Of about 3,500 posts in the civil service of the Transkei less than 10 per cent are held by white. Of over 6,000 teachers' posts less than one per cent are held by whites.

"No youth in South Africa who can graduate from high school need forego a university education if he wants one, regardless of his race or color. Among our Bantu or black people alone we already have over 3,000 university graduates. That is more than eight other African countries with a combined population of 118 million have together succeeded in producing.

"About 3,800 Bantu, 2,400 Asiatic and 3,100 Colored students study at various universities in our country. We have three Bantu universities, one Colored and one Indian. Where facilities are not available at these universities for a particular course of study, students may apply to enter one of the white universities. Today about 1,000 non-white students study at white universities.

"Black, Indian and Colored students have their own vocational schools and technical colleges which offer training in a wide variety of trades. Courses include training as electricians, plumbers, builders, carpenters, bricklayers, mechanics, watchmakers, sheet metal workers, tailors and leather workers, etc.

"Various Government departments give training to Bantu, Indian and Colored people. Some examples are training as postal assistants, telephonists, postmasters, policemen, prosecutors and health inspectors. Special courses are given in agriculture and forestry. Many firms conduct special training courses for their employees.

"With only four percent of Africa's land area and about six per cent of its population South Africa generates over 20 percent of the continent's geographic income and accounts for about 40 per cent of its industrial production.

"South Africa produced 92 per cent of Africa's coal, 91 per cent of its steel and generates 54 percent of its electricity. About 48 per cent of all telephones, 46 per cent of all passenger vehicles and 32 per cent of all commercial vehicles in Africa are in the Republic. Our railroads carry as much freight as those on the rest of the continent put together. All sections of our community benefit from our prosperity. The purchasing power of our black people alone is 1.6 billion dollars a year and this is increasing steadily. Their skills are improving, their fields of employment widening. Over 12,000 black people have their own businesses. Some bank as much as $3,000 per day. Three are reputed to be millionaires. One of the biggest cane furniture factories and one of the biggest gasoline service stations in our country are both owned by black men.

"About 1 million foreign black people work in our country today. One of our biggest problems is posed by the thousands of others who cross our borders illegally in order to seek the benefits of life which we have to offer."

Senator O'leary on the Need for A Partisan Press

This is a further extract from a recent speech in the Senate by Senator Grattan O'Leary on the subject of the Report on the Mass Media.

I was in London at the time of the elections in Nova Scotia, and I was anxious to find out what had happened in Nova Scotia. I did not think that the disaster that happened would happen. However, I was anxious to find out. The great London Times did not publish one line on that election. This could not have happened when I was the Ottawa correspondent for the Times. It could not have happened under Northcliffe who insisted that the results of the American baseball games be published in the Times for the benefit of American tourists. He was a real journalist. But, here was this great Commonwealth paper, this great Empire paper, not deigning to publish the results of an election in an important part of the Commonwealth, and neither was there any mention of that election in the Daily Telegraph.

Honorable senators, this afternoon the Ottawa Citizen and the Ottawa Journal publish more world news, more foreign news and even more British news, than the two afternoon papers in London, England. This is true. In London there are the Evening Standard and the Evening News, but what do they contain? In those papers you find reports of the soccer games and the horse races, and you may even have something on cricket if they are playing it now, and nothing else. Oh yes, they have sex. They make Lady Chatterly now look like the girl next door. If some distinguished duchess is accused of sleeping with her chauffeur then that always draws a headline. In fact, the London press has made sex seem like a bore, or a waste of time. This is what has happened to the great British press.

There are no successors to C. P. Scott, J. L. Garvin or J. A. Spender. These people have no successors, and neither have the past great journalists of Canada. Where are the successers to Sir John Willison? Where are the successors to P. D. Ross? Where are the successors to Albert Carmen of the Montreal Star? Where are the successors to Bourassa of Le Devoir, or to Pelletier who succeeded him?

These men do not exist any more, and they do not exist for the one reason that we have destroyed our party press. You cannot have a great press if it is not a party press. The newspaper publishers in Canada have never recognized this, but without a party press in England we would never have achieved what is called the freedom of the press. It was when the Wing pamphleteers had their pamphlets suppressed by the Tories, and when the Tories had theirs suppressed by the Whigs, that freedom of the press in England was brought about, but our publishers do not seem to know about this, and they do not seem to care. As I said, when they held their meetings year after year what they discussed was the tinkle of the cash register and not what was said editorially.

I will give an example of what is happening in Canada. At the time of Confederation we had 100 newspapers in Canada discussing public affairs. There are 105 Canadian dailies now, but look at their designations and you will see the word "independent". "Independent," they say. They are not independent; they are neutral. They are afraid to stand up and be counted. When they do not become involved in the problem, they become part of the problem itself. This is true of all of us. If we do not, as Canadians, become involved in a problem, then we become part of the problem.

Let me take the City of London, Ontario, as an example. In my day, there were in that city two good newspapers — the London Free Press and the Advertiser. They encountered the problem of money, but what survived said, "We must not offend the old Advertiser's subscribers, and so we must say nothing." It became neutral. In this way a newspaper becomes a journalistic political enuch, and this is what has happened to so much of the press of Canada.

Honorable Senators, I am a partisan. I believe in a partisan press. What has happened in England with the loss of C.P. Scott and the Manchester Guardian, with the loss of the Daily News and Leader under A. G. Gardiner, with the loss of The Nation under Henry Massingham? When those people disappeared, the press lost its credibility. Why not have a party press? Why not dissent? Why not have journalistic cut and thrust every day and have people read papers, and decide? At least, they would have something to decide.

All my life in the press I have stressed press responsibility, and if ever I witnessed a negation of press responsibility it was in the recent reporting of the Commonwealth Conference in Singapore. Day after day I read from our young Canadian correspondents how Mr. Trudeau — God forbid, I am not going to talk politics tonight — how Mr. Trudeau, in shining armour, a young knight errant was going to Singapore to save the Commonwealth from dissolution by Mr. Heath of England. When they did not have him in shining armor, though, they were sustaining his legend as a swinger. So one day I read of Mr. Trudeau being seen entering a restaurant in the company of an unidentified woman. Well, it so happened that the unidentified woman was the wife of one of the members of our delegation, accompanied by her husband at the time. However, our responsible journalist did not take the trouble to report that. Day after day when I read these reports I wondered if the Canadian Press and the Globe and Mail had not sent Suzie Knickerbocker and Ann Landers to report the conference for us.

Ah, Spring!

You just have to look at Ed Gigot's face to know that the first whiff of spring from the daffodils blooming on the doorstep of his Vancouver home was worth waiting for. (CP Photo)

As Far as Demonstrations Concerned Four Aspirants All Even in PC Race

TORONTO (CP) — Little evidence of a trend in delegate support was provided by demonstrations that surrounded acceptance speeches Thursday night at the leadership convention of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

As the six candidates vying to succeed retiring premier John Robarts each gave a 10-minute outline of their hopes for themselves and the province, convention-watchers were hard put to find visible signs of how the delegates will vote.

Hundreds of cheering, sign-waving, singing supporters jammed the floor of Maple Leaf Gardens as each of the five major candidates took the speaker's podium.

It was obvious that support on the floor for A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and for Ottawa graduate student Robert Pharand, was less than that of the other candidates. Mr. Pharand had no organized demonstration.

In numbers and noise, the hoopla surrounding the entrance of the other four was about equal.

Education Minister William Davis and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence were considered neck-and-neck in the race for the lead on the first ballot. Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, in that order in most polls, each were hoping to become the consensus candidates.

Mr. Davis was first to the podium, offering a three-fold program for government if elected leader. He promised that existing programs would be administered to the best effect; that the province's resources would be harnessed for "selective answers to specific problems;" and that there would be total involvement of the people in the search for solutions.

Hundreds of Davis supporters crowded on to the floor to chant "We'll win again with Bill" as two trumpeters sounded a fanfare and pretty, mini-skirted girls led the marchers.

Mr. Davis was interrupted at two points by booing from a group in the upper seats at the back of the Gardens. Members of the group, identifying themselves as being with the Ontario Roman Catholic Students' Association, passed out pamphlets criticizing the minister's failure to extend government support to separate schools after Grade 10.

Next to the speaker's stand was Allan Lawrence, who said that if he became premier he would urge Mr. Robarts to continue to serve the province "in questions of constitutional reform."

The mines minister said the new premier would have two primary responsibilities: Using the province's power "in the service of Confederation," and meeting "the threat to our environment."

The hoopla for Allan Lawrence was led by girls in brightly-colored maxi dresses and highlighted by hundreds of balloons released from the arena rafters.

A. B. R. Lawrence had the smallest demonstration of the five major candidates but his supporters made up in noise what they lacked in numbers. A six-man rock group called The Heaven boomed out an amplified, and seemingly-endless, repetition of Let the Sun Shine In.

The financial minister told the delegates he would delay a provincial election for six months or a year to create a "new style of government" by revamping the roles of the cabinet, backbenchers and the civil service.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough made his bid for the leadership with a promise that Ontario never would give up its identity for "a bigger fistful from the federal till."

He also criticized the federal government on the unemployment issue; stressed the need for regional government, and briefly outlined some of the problems facing Ontario, including pollution and the question of foreign ownership.

Mr. Pharand, the 26-year-old who entered the campaign to speak on the issues he believed his opponents had avoided, received widespread applause.

Last was Mr. Welch, who did not deliver his prepared speech but listed the issues and promised a united assault on the province's problems by a united and revitalized party.

Mr. Welch has sought support from ethnic groups, and his supporters were ushered on to the floor both by a bagpiper and 17 Polish dancers dressed in traditional costumes.

Compromise Solution Reached In Young PC Delegates Issue

TORONTO (CP) — A convention-floor clash between the Ontario Progressive Conservative party and its youth wing ended in compromise at the party's leadership convention Thursday.

The dispute arose when the Ontario Young Progressive Association sought to have two voting delegates recognized from each of three ridings.

The ridings of York-Forst Hill, Ottawa East and Carleton, near Ottawa had earlier refused to include the YPC delegates in their 10-member delegations.

The floor battle lasted 90 minutes before a backstage huddle with representatives of the YPCs and the riding associations ended with this compromise:

The three riding associations agreed to accept the six YPC delegates and the delegates from the ridings who would have been supplanted were appointed delegates-at-large.

Youth delegates cheered wildly at their victory which Ontario YPC President Sean O'Sullivan of Niagara Falls called "a victory for the YPCs and a victory for the party."

The dispute arose over the party's constitution which says that two members in a riding delegation should be YPCs if there is a recognized YPC association in the riding.

If there is no YPC association in the riding, then two of the delegates should be under 30 years of age.

The credentials committee ruled in favor of the YPCs, saying the provincial YPC association should have the authority to recognize YPC riding associations.

The three ridings disagreed, saying the provincial YPC body should not have that authority.

Jules Moran, MPP for Ottawa East, argued there was no recognized YPC association in his riding.

"The credentials committee was without jurisdiction and its ruling was unconstitutional. It is up to delegates to change the constitution for us."

Mr. O'Sullivan argued that "no branch of the party should be told it can't make contributions in its own way."

The oldest delegate to speak on the issue was Charles King, 88, of Toronto Humber who called the YPCs "the future of the Conservative party."

"If you don't recognize these young people, you will be making the greatest mistake of this convention."

Anti-pollution Program Unlikely to Close Plants

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, interviewed on the CBC-TV program Encounter, said industrial standards established to counter pollution will be set as high 'as technology and economics will allow."

Mr. Davis was asked how tough he would be in his new role. Could he close down industries causing pollution at the risk of creating unemployment.

"Yes, I think we could close them down, but I don't think we should and I don't think we will. We can make it tough for companies — fines, initially bad publicity, but fines — and we can require them to clean up over time.

U.S. Companies Overproducing Potent Drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — New complaints that the United States pharmaceutical industry overproduces dangerous drugs, and thereby supplies the curbstone pusher as well as the corner drug store, are rising in Congress, the Nixon administration and the medical profession.

Congressional investigators have concluded that between 8,000 million and 10,000 million pep pills alone are produced legally each year, and more than half are diverted illicitly into the streets.

"We have found that overproduction of amphetamines by legitimate manufacturers . . . and promiscuous prescribing practices by some physicians has set the stage for an amphetamine epidemic," said Representative Claude Pepper, chairman of the House of Representatives committee on crime.

Amphetamines are those tablets, pills or capsules which raise the spirits, depress appetites and ward off fatigue. Melted down and injected into the veins in massive dosages, they produce an instant "high."

Sedatives such as barbiturates are the other major drug of abuse. They are most frequently prescribed as sleeping pills and to ward off tension. Unlike pep pills, which promote psychological dependence, barbituates induce a physical dependence.

Federal agents say the legitimate drugs pour into the black market through theft, mail orders and sloppy controls over exports.

The U.S. government is building a paper dam to plug these leaks.

The justice department has begun drafting regulations to implement the 1970 Drug Control Act. May 1, it will require annual licensing and inspection for the first time of all manufacturers of dangerous drugs, and registration of distributors and dispensers such as hospitals, pharmacies and doctors.

The federal bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs will have about 1,300 agents by mid-1971 to police 5,000 manufacturers and distributors, 8,000 hospitals, 50,000 pharmacies and 350,000 physicians.

"Diversion occurs at every point of the chain," says Larry Kerness, the bureau's chief of compliance investigations.

The government estimates in 1969, 20 per cent of all pep pills and sedatives made in the United States were lost to the black market before they got to retailers. The bureau estimated production that year at 3.4 million amphetamines, 3.5 million barbiturates and 1.2 million of the more potent methamphetamines, or "speed."

In an attempt to control exported drugs which are smuggled back into the United States, the justice department will require advance notification as well as an itemized list of drugs being shipped and certification that the consignee is a legitimate business.

The 2,000-mile Mexican border has been the chief conduit of drugs moving illegally into the U.S.

Presbyterial UCW president Mrs. T. W. Spear of Trenton offers congratulations, with a warm handshake, to Dr. A. C. Forest following his address to UCW groups at Tabernacle United Church, Thursday morning. Dr. Forest, who is editor of the United Church Observer, was guest speaker at the ninth annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial.

Dr. A.C. Forest Addresses Area Presbyterial UCW

Changes within the church in modern times was the theme of the address by Dr. A. C. Forest, editor of the United Church Observer who was the guest speaker at the ninth annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial United Church Women which took place at Tabernacle United Church on Thursday. Dr. Forest quoted the late Pope John who, he said made one of the most significant statements of our times when he said "the ancient doctrines should be studied and expounded through the methods of research and the literary forms of modern thought".

Elaborating on this theme, Dr. Forest gave a new interpretation of the text "if any man denies himself, let him take up his cross and follow me". This has usually been taken, he said as a warning of the burdens and sacrifices which would be the lot of those who wish to lead a Christian life. But, said Dr. Forest the Greek word for cross was also used for the tent poles used by shepherds. So when Jesus spoke those words He meant it as a challenge to His followers to pick up their tent poles and move on."

"But," said Dr. Forest "as we move forward into a new era and leave behind those things of the past which are now no longer useful or relevant, we must at the same time take with us certain basic attributes of the Christian church. One was the sense of community of the church, the second was the prophetic voice or the ability of the church leaders to look forward to the future and the third was its sense of service to the whole world.

Dr. Forest concluded by stating that this was a very exciting time to be in the church since it is a period of great changes and it is also a challenging time. Dr. Forest then invited his audience to put forward their own comments and questions and a discussion period followed. Earlier, Dr. Forest was introduced by Miss Helen Sexsmith. He was thanked by Mrs. E. Foster of Picton.

The meeting which was conducted by Mrs. T. W. Spear the Presbyterial president consisted of two sessions, morning and afternoon with a break in between for dinner. During the morning session, messages of greetings were given to the participants by Mrs. E. R. Nelson, president of the Tabernacle UCW and by Mrs. W. H. Seigal, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference UCW. A worship period was conducted by Mrs. Spear who also presided over the business period. A sing-song was led by Mrs. H. Harrison. A number of annual reports prepared by the various local units were also read.

During the afternoon session officers for the new year were elected and installed. These include: president, Mrs. T. W. Spear, Trenton; past president, Mrs. Harry Pierson, Wellington; vice-pres., Miss Helen Sexsmith, Napanee; recrding sec., Mrs. B. Stenson, Belleville; corresponding sec., Mrs. George Williams, Marmora, and treas., Mrs. Ernest Ward of Picton.

A skit was presented by the Rawdon - Mount Pleasant UCW and a solo was rendered by Mrs. John Gray of Holloway Street UCW with Mrs. A. Gordon of the Bridge Street UCW as accompanist. The Bridge St. UCW were in charge of the worship session and greetings were extended by Rev. J. Leslie Dean of Tabernacle UCW and Rev. W. Sedgewick, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery.

History of 'Lifeline' Given at Meet

Despite inclement weather conditions a satisfactory number attended the recent meeting of Tabernacle UCW when the president, Mrs. Stenson presided. Reports were given by the secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Hunter introduced the guest speaker Miss Scott and friend, Mrs. Priest from "Lifeline" now to be called "Tell a Care in 1971". The history of this organization which is now world wide was given and its many benefits to those in need were described. Those having various problems including financial, teenage and unwed mother problems along with those suffering depression and contemplate suicide. They are referred to the proper medical care or whatever their particular situations require. Since its inception, the Belleville group has received over 4,874 calls. This work is carried on 24 hours a day by a volunteer staff. A film "As Near as Your Telephone" is available to anyone.

The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Winstanley.

Following the acceptance of the annual report Mrs. Stenson thanked the officers and members for their co-operation during her term as president and on behalf of the members, Mrs. Aitchison expressed thanks to the president.

Mrs. Dean installed the officers for 1971 as follows: honorary president, Mrs. Dean; past president, Mrs. Stenson; president, Mrs. Nelson; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Matier; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Wessels; recording and press secretary, Mrs. Lockyer; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lott and treasurer, Mrs. Aitchison.

The new president spoke briefly and the budget for 1971 was adopted as read.

A number of business items were discussed and it was decided to purchase new Bibles or service books instead of hymnals, in memory of deceased members. The group also plans on making new junior choir gowns with material supplied by the board of stewards.

Several announcements were also read.

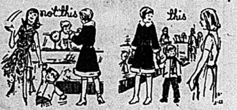
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Keeping a young child safe from hazards in unfamiliar places is difficult, even though the child may know what not to touch in more familiar places.

Mother: "Gary, Mommy has to hold onto your hand while we are in the store. See the pretty display. We can look at the pretty things, but we don't touch."

Have "look but don't touch" rules and keep hold of your child's hand in public places or new environments.

Ann Landers

Thoughtless Remarks Can Be Cruel

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Had our daughter lived she would have been a month old today. A week after the funeral my husband and I went to the home of friends. The hostess took me aside and asked, "How did she die?" I did not respond to her question. I was so upset I asked my husband to take me home immediately. We have not seen these people since.

ANN LANDERS

A few days ago I encountered a sales clerk who had waited on me during my pregnancy. She asked me excitedly, "What did you have, a boy or a girl?" I replied, "A girl." She immediately bombarded me with questions: "How much did the baby weigh? Who does she look like?" And so on. I finally said, "The child did not survive," and walked away. The woman ran after me, grabbed my arm and started to tell me about her daughter's miscarriage. I was furious and did not try to conceal my anger.

Now my relatives are writing to ask about my labor. Some have suggested that I sue the doctor and the anesthetist. I'm at a loss to understand how people can be so cruel. Am I overly sensitive? It's torture to go through a pregnancy and then come home from the hospital with empty arms. To be faced with questions is more than I can bear. Please tell me how to deal with these inquiries. — EMPTY NURSERY, ACHING HEART.

DEAR FRIEND: You do not owe clods answers to their questions. Ignore them and change the subject. As for the mail inquiries, drop them in your circular file.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I returned from Vietnam to discover my wife is three months pregnant. The child she is carrying was fathered by the man she works for. He is married to an invalid and I can understand how this sort of thing could happen. I'm not bitter, just heartsick and disappointed My wife and I tried to have a family before I went to Vietnam but we were not successful. Now she tells me we should be happy — that the good Lord has blessed us. I'm trying to see it that way but it's difficult. I love my wife and she says she loves me, but I'm not sure I could love this child as my own and be a really good father. I need your help. — LOST.

DEAR LOST: It would take a man of superior understanding and compassion to forgive and forget. I hope you are equal to the challenge. If you are, the rewards will be tremendous. Good luck and God bless.

Successful Living

Do You Aim for A United Front?

By DORIS CLARK

That word "togetherness." Hackneyed to the point of meaninglessness. Yet what is marriage about if it doesn't mean removing a person's feeling of aloneness and giving him a companion to share life with?

It is thrilling when two people manage it — this business of working and thinking together, of the melding into a fine human adult unit, of two individuals who were raised separately, and differently.

Togetherness means things like sharing the same interests, the same hobbies, the same friends; working through difficulties together worrying over a tiny one's illness; praying and eating and talking and sleeping together; and presenting a united front to the world.

This does not mean the loss of individual identity — or shouldn't. We need to know ourselves and to be ourselves. We need individual dignity in combination with mutual respect.

• • •

Dear Doris: I'm on the finance committee to raise money towards graduation funds. Do you have any suggestions? We've had (1) candy sales (2) hot dog sales (3) pie sales (4) draws (5) tickets, etc.

The kids are actually getting fed up with popcorn and candies. What could we do that's really different? We've even gone so far as to have bottle drives and two auction sales where we all donate articles. — High Finance

Dear High: For smething new and different, try a carwash day in the early spring when cars badly need laundering. A neighborhood gas station will give you space. Make up a big sign and some handbills and publicize a certain Saturday. Offer a cut rate.

A book sale, of popular used books and paperbacks, goes over well. Radio stations will put out a call for books. Someone will donate an empty store. If the sale is on a sunny Saturday, you'll get a crowd of book browsers.

A slave auction can be colorful if you can find a talkative, persuasive auctioneer. Students are offered for hiring at a certain amount an hour, to do window washing, cleaning, baby-sitting, snow shovelling, or what-have-you.

• • •

Dear Doris: I find your advice very clever. I wonder if you could help me with this riddle:

I can ride but not to hounds,
My path was filled with ups and downs.
In turbulent air I attain great height;
Many goals which eluded my sight.

— Pat — Age Eight

Dear Pat: I'm afraid my riddle solving is largely confined to human puzzlements of various kinds. But once in a while I have to fish into my memory for such old stumpers as: "What Goes Up When The Rain Comes Down?", for the challenging of a wide-eyed six-yearpold.

However — could the answer be something like a kite, or a glider plane or an eagle? Or what about an elevator? Readers — want to chip in?

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Chinese Garlic Spareribs

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I would appreciate receiving the recipe for Chinese Garlic Spareribs . . . Pauline K.

ANSWER: This has proved popular and I am glad to repeat it from January 1968.

CHINESE GARLIC SPARERIBS

4-5 lbs. meaty spareribs
1 cup soy sauce (or less)
1 cup orange marmalade
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 tsp. ginger
¼ tsp. black pepper

Combine soy sauce, marmalade, garlic, ginger and black pepper. Spread spareribs in baking pan, cutting them into serving pieces. Pour sauce over ribs. Turn ribs to completely cover with sauce. Store covered in refrigerator at least 12 hrs.

Roast at 350 deg. Fahr. 1½ hrs., basting frequently with sauce until ribs are glazed golden brown and meat is very tender.

LETTER: I never cook roast beef other than your slow way but a short cut — I cook it 1 hr. to the pound at 200 deg. Fahr. and don't even bother to put it down to 175 deg. Fahr. as my family all like their beef "jerked" through the kitchen. They are very pleased and so am I. Another idea, instead of rubbing it with sugar etc. I brush it all over with kitchen bouquet — excuse my suggestion. From one Gourmet to Another! — Marguerite E. P.

ANSWER: I am always cheered when I hear from converts to my low-slow beef roasting method. Thank you. An added comfort is a meat thermometer inserted at thickest part, but not touching the bone. When internal temperature reaches 140 deg. Fahr. beef is done "rare".

NOTE TO READERS: If you would like to have red cinnamon candies on hand, buy now while they are in good supply in the candy stores for Valentine's Day, we had difficulty finding them during the last half of the year when I wanted to test rosy apple compote.

Musical Set in World War II Brings Back Patti Andrews

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The singer in the middle looks not much different from the Second World War years when she was urging soldiers to Roll Out the Barrel and promising to be with them in Apple Blossom Time.

The trio sings in the same full-voiced, rollicking style, but there is only one authentic Andrews Sister among them. That's Patti, and she is helping re-create those innocent years of the 1940s in a new musical playing off-Hollywood Boulevard.

It's called Victory Canteen, and it takes place in Willkieville, Ind., "at Main Street and Roosevelt Avenue." The book is by TV writers Milt Larsen and Bob Lauher and the music by Richard and Robert Sherman, who provided songs for Mary Poppins and other Disney films.

"The show is a lot of fun, especially for those of us who lived through the war," says Patti. "But what surprised me was that even the kids like it. They get a kick out of such lines as 'I'll wait for you—for the duration.' "

Nostalgia unlimited. The appearance of Patti Andrews—she plays Mom in the homefront canteen—also brings back a flood of memories for the middle-agers. Everyone who was near a radio during the 1940s will remember Patti, Maxene and Leverne belting out such songs as Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree, The Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy, and Pistol packin' Mama.

Patti looks a decade younger than her years.

"I've never kept my age a secret," she say. "People think because we made records with Bing Crosby and Al Jolson that we belong to the older generation of entertainers. I was 16 in 1938 when we had our first hit record, Bei Mir Bist du Shoen.

"That sold 80,000 copies. It doesn't sound like much by today's standards, but that was before juke boxes. There were only two disc jockeys in radio—Martin Block in New York and Al Jarvis in Los Angeles."

The Minneapolis-born trio turned out hit after hit—their 900 records sold 75 million. Biggest of all was Rum and Coca Cola.

The Andrews Sisters were also busy in movies and radio—they had their Club 15 on the air for five years. Then in 1951 they returned from a London engagement to find the music scene changing. Johnny Ray was the big craze, and new sounds were being tried.

The girls continued to play Las Vegas and other nightclub dates. Then in 1954 they split.

"We had been ogether near all our lives," Patti recalled.

"Then in one year our dream world ended. Our mother died and then our father. All three of us were upset, and we were at each other's throats most of the time."

Patti sang as a single for a couple of years, then the sisters reconciled—"and for the first time working was really a pleasure to all of us; we had never really enjoyed it before."

The Andrews Sisters continued in nightclubs and television until 1967, when Laverne died. The two surviving sisters carried on with a substitute, Joyce deYoung. Then in 1958 Maxene retired.

Patti again became a single and now she's looking forward to a lengthy run, perhaps on or off Broadway, with Victory Canteen.

PUC to Seek Legal Advice

TRENTON (Staff) — The legal opinion of solicitor William Weston that council has power to force the Public Utilities Commission to sign the Dufferin Development's subdivision agreement may not be accepted by PUC commissioners.

Although neither Mayor Duncan McDonald, an ex-officio commission member, nor Commissioner Charles Hilton, voiced particular criticism of the Weston view, they indicate the PUC may seek legal advice of its own.

"I would not doubt one bit that the PUC will contact a lawyer," the mayor told The Intelligencer.

Commissioner Hilton compared the matter to a court proceeding, saying that in such cases it is customary for both parties in a dispute to seek professional legal counsel.

"We are in the process of getting an opinion now and it will come out at Thursday's meeting," he said. The commissioners have their next session a week today.

The following were approved for the 1971 Recreation Committee:

Tough to Pick New Leader After Last Night's Speeches

TORONTO (CP) — The guessing game to pick the new leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party got tougher Thursday night as the six candidates made major acceptance speeches.

It was difficult to pick a clear-cut leader after the speeches ended—well before the scheduled TV time period expired—as delegates appeared cleanly divided.

William Davis was in the difficult spot of starting the evening off, but the education minister moved gamely ahead despite the fact that some of the 1,748 delegates were still filtering into the Maple Leaf Gardens after the 7 p.m. start.

His demonstration was organized pandemonium, but there was no special zing and the TV cameras picked up Mr. Davis at times when he looked like he was counting the house.

Polls and delegate interviews have shown Mr. Davis and Mines Milnster Allan Lawrence the neck-and-neck leaders on the first ballot, but the Davis keynote speech was received at times with only polite applause.

Boos from Roman Catholic students—a protest against the government separate school policy—drowned out some of his remarks before the 15-minute time limit expired, but the education minister did make an impact on delegates.

Under the alphabetical speaking rule, Mines Minister Lawrence followed with louder music, fewer signs and lots and lots of balloons.

The smiling, dapper Lawrence spoke eloquently and well, but delegates seemed restless before his speech ended and applause was spotty at times and not overwhelming.

He did make a pitch to the North, saying he wanted to be the first man to become premier from the northern affairs portfolio—a new position created last year.

A. B. R. Lawrence, the minister of financial and consumer affairs who has admitted he does not have the money of the other major candidates, came on with a youth pitch.

There were balloons and rock music underlying his impassioned address that ended after nine minutes of the 15-minute time limit.

The early ending had its effect, however, and delegates seemed to accept warmly his speech which was, in part, a repetition of his earlier plea for change and an apology for not mounting a major campaign.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough came next with a full-dress band, hundreds of signs, a bouncy theme song and well-organized clapping and stomping. There was even a group of gypsy dancers.

The whole thing smelled of slick organization and Mr. McKeough recognized as the third man behind Allan Lawrence and Mr. Davis—made his points well.

Student Robert Pharand of Ottawa had no demonstration and no organization, but his bilingual speech was sincere. The delegates—most of whom will not vote for him—liked him.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch was clean-up man and he took full advantage.

His demonstration was just as effective as the other major candidates and his speech was a win message that seemed to go over well with delegates.

The Welch speech did confound the press, however, as he threw away his prepared text and made an address that left him hoarse at the finish.

The winner?

At this point, it looks like a minimum of three and maybe more ballots. Polls, interviews and predictions aside, it's anybody's ball game.

Students Criticize Lack of Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Student delegates voted Thursday to express concern to the leadership convention of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party over lack of policy commitments from the five major candidates.

The 60 delegates, members of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Students' Association, will demand on the convention floor Friday that annual party meetings be turned into policy conferences every second year.

The demand for bi-annual policy conferences, coupled with an expression of concern over lack of policy commitments, will be put before the convention by Douglas Jure, president of the student association.

The accepted motion was put forward by a group following the general leadership of Bernard Teitelbaum, 21, of the University of Toronto.

Mr. Teitelbaum rejected the position taken by Wayne D. Schaler, 24, and Timothy Griffin, 19, of St. Patrick's Collage in Ottawa.

The Ottawa students wanted a policy conference before the next election "rather than letting the new leader and the back-room boys do it (establish policy)."

Mr. Teitelbaum and other speakers noted that this was impractical because of the time needed for preparing policy and because of the expense. They noted party funds already face strain from the leadership convention and will be further drained by the election campaign.

It was argued that these considerations would force the party executive to reject the proposal even though they might agree with it.

But all the delegates were agreed that, as one speaker put it:

"None of the candidates have expressed concrete policies; ask them specific questions and they don't answer."

The student association has about 200 members in PC student clubs in 18 Ontario universities.

Candidates Squirm Through Praise

TORONTO (CP) — The six candidates for the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership sat trying to look modest Thursday while their nominators praised them for five minutes and their seconders for three.

As the speeches droned on, time clicked away on the big clock over centre ice that is used for National Hockey League games.

Education Minister William Davis heard himself described by Syl Apps, MPP for Kingston and the Islands, as "very much his own man" with "the rare ability to bring views of others together to take effective action."

Mines Minister Allan Lawrence was nominated by Don Trimble of Hamilton who has known him for 25 years.

Mr. Trimble said he has demonstrated "ability and stability" and is the man for leadership of the new wave in Ontario. Supporters waved their red, grene and white signs up and down and cheered.

A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence was nominated by 21-year-old Sharon Morrison, a student at the University of Western Ontario.

She said Bert Lawrence makes her proud to be part of the party because, "although he is not a politician's politician, he is responsive to the needs of the people."

George Kerr, minister of energy and resources, spoke for Darcy McKeough.

"People used to talk about Darcy McKeough as a small-town businessman from Chatham," he said. "But look at him now. He has tackled one of the most difficult jobs in our government . . . with imagination and courage."

Mr. Kerr said Mr. McKeough could win the next election and unite all segments of the party.

The only candidate nominated in French and English was Robert Pharand, a 26-year-old University of Ottawa graduate student.

James Harbie, 19, of Ottawa said "the intelligent and decent reception" given the unknown's candidacy "has reaffirmed our faith in the party."

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart drew a warm round of applause when he nominated Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

He said Mr. Welch has been a great force in the government, as a backbencher, as a cabinet minister and as house leader when Premier John Robarts was absent.

Liberties Association Protests

TORONTO (CP) — A decision last week by the Ontario Supreme Court was attacked Thursday by the Canadian Civil Liberties Association in letters to the six candidates seeking nomination for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

The Supreme Court ruled that the Ontario Human Rights Code prohibited discrimination in the renting of self-contained dwelling units but did not apply to rooms or flats that were not self-contained.

Therefore, the court ruled out a complaint of discrimination against a Toronto landlord who refused to rent part of his house to a black Jamaican.

"The CCLA finds it difficult to believe that the Ontario legislature could have harbored such narrow intentions when it enacted this statute," Alan Borovoy, CCLA general counsel, said in the letters.

"It is most appropriate for the law to insist that once a portion of property is put on the public market all dealings with respect to that portion of property must be governed by public standards of fair play.'"

Snowmobilers Are Warned

Heavy snow and mild weather are causing lakes in the Quinte area to slush up and Lands and Forests officials at Tweed have issued a warning for snowmobilers to beware.

Officials state that air holes are an ever present hazard and it is only on heavily travelled lakes that the snow has been packed sufficiently to allow freezing.

Smooth Ride and Posi-traction

To exercise stiff and arthritic muscles, patients are strapped into this Guthrie-Smith dual-purpose suspension bed by Mrs. Kathryn Brown, physiotherapist at the Belleville General Hospital. Clinics are held every Tuesday and Thursday evenings with volunteers from the Belleville committee of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society offering their services. In this case, Mrs. A. A. Gummell will exercise the patient while Mrs. D. A. McKinney checks details of his condition.

Professional Freeloader Has A Ball

TORONTO (CP) — Joe Cameron, a part-time salesman with a taste for the finer things in life, has put his stamp of approval on the cuisine, liquor and entertainment at the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership convention.

Mr. Cameron, 40, is a self-proclaimed professional freeloader who says he has attended every Toronto political convention—federal and provincial—for the past 15 years.

"For free drinks, food and entertainment, nothing has topped this," he said in an interview Thursday, happily surveying the amply-stocked hospitality suite of one leadership candidate in the Royal York Hotel.

He said he thoroughly enjoys political conventions.

"They're all great as long as you're not a delegate and have to sit through all those boring speeches," he said.

Mr. Cameron said he has spent the past three days sampling the largesse of the candidates.

The hospitality suites were set up to supply food and drinks for the convention's 1,748 delegates, and Mr. Cameron's first mission was to obtain a suitable array of badges and ribbons.

He said he just flashes the appropriate ribbon, button or sticker to gain entry to a hospitality suite, or pins them to his blazer.

"Nobody has ever asked me what I'm doing there," said the Nova Scotian. "Everybody always assumes that you're there for a good reason and I am—to have a hell of a good time."

Mr. Cameron said he was most impressed by Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence's limbo party Tuesday night and Municipal Affairs minister Darcy McKeough's bash Wednesday night.

"I've had some really fine spreads placed in front of me. But I must admit I've particularly enjoyed the McKeough corned-beef sandwiches."

CBC Employees Continue Strikes

TORONTO (CP) — Rotating strikes by CBC employees across Canada hit Toronto today in the midst of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party's leadership convention.

The first of about 520 members of Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 667 set up picket lines outside downtown CBC offices at 12:01 a.m.

The workers joined 83 Vancouver CUPE members who went on strike at noon Thursday. Their walkout was to end at midnight. In Montreal, 725 CUPE employees end a 12-hour strike at midnight Thursday night.

The Vancouver strike started as 80 production employees in Winnipeg ended a 24-hour strike by returning to work Thursday noon.

The rotating strikes are the 1,650-member union's latest tactic in a bid to end a 14-month contract dispute with the network.

Union members—film cameramen, editors, carpenters, painters, stagehands, makeup, special effects men and others—are seeking action to resolve salary, job security, fringe benefits and bilingual premium issues.

A union spokesman said Thursday Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey and Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier have not replied to telegrams the union sent them Wednesday requesting a meeting to get talks started again. Negotiations broke down in Montreal two weeks ago.

A CBC spokesman in Toronto said the strike was not expected to halt coverage of the Progressive Conservative convention. The Tories were to elect a new leader later today to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts.

Ken Mitchell, the union's staff representative to the Toronto local, said Maple Leaf Gardens, site of the convention, would be one of 14 locations picketed by the strikers today.

He would not say how long the strike is to continue.

Representatives of the 70-member Toronto local of the Canadian Wire Service Guild, which covers radio and newsroom staff, met to discuss picket line action but the newsmen seemed unlikely to refuse to pass the pickets.

Members of the guild local at Winnipeg did not cross CUPE picket lines Thursday, forcing the CBC to fill news jobs with supervisory personnel.

Shortly after midnight Gilles Lortie, president of the Montreal CUPE local, called the 12-hour walkout a success.

CBC officials said it forced the cancellation of two programs and delayed the taping of two others scheduled for viewing during the weekend.

Bill Davis Shanghais Students

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis, seeking the provincial Progressive Conservative party leadership, came up with new campaign tactic Thursday—high school demonstrators.

About 65 high school students from Exeter, Ont., about 25 miles west of Stratford, arrived in Toronto and were recruited by Mr. Davis' campaigners to demonstrate for him.

The students, who came under the impression they were going to watch the convention now in progress at Maple Leaf Gardens, were handed placards and taken to a downtown hotel to accompany Mr. Davis back to the convention.

School officials were not very happy with the new idea.

W. L. Wooden, principal of South Huron High School, said the students had come to the convention strictly as spectators after the school had received a form-letter invitation from Robert Lowrie, co-chairman of the convention's public relations committee.

"They didn't go down here with an intention of being mustered as forced to support any one candidate. I'd like to know who dragged them into this."

TORONTO (CP) — If the vote count at the convention choosing a new leader for the Ontario Progressive Conservative party doesn't balance today, you could give some credit to Donald MacDonald.

Mr. MacDonald, former leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, registered at the convention Wednesday as a press representative. He will be a panelist on CBC TV coverage of the leadership voting today.

But someone at the registration desk boobed and gave Mr. MacDonald a ticket entitling him to credentials as a voting delegate.

"If they have one fewer vote than they have voting delegates that will be me," Mr. MacDonald said.

Fly's-eye View of PC Leadership Convention

TORONTO (CP) — If you were a fly buzzing through the smoke, balloons and sparklers in Maple Leaf Gardens Thursday night at the leadership convention of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party you might have seen:

Two cloth banners at the south end proclaiming: "No Votes for Conservatives if they seize our animals under Bill 194."

Eleven-year-old Andrea Lawrence of Ottawa waving a sign so hard for her daddy, A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, that the cardboard part fell off its wooden stick and zonked her mother Lois on the head.

Party President Alan Eagleson trying to introduce Mines Minister Allan Lawrence just after a delegate in a red pantsuit fainted near the stage. Delegates booed Mr. Eagleson until he gave those who rushed to her aid a chance to carry her her out.

Leonard Reilly, Toronto Eglinton backbencher, who eight weeks ago "seriously" considered running for the leadership himself, sitting beside Health Minister Thomas Wells, who six weeks ago "seriously" considered running for the leadership—both ensconsed in Allan Lawrence's box.

Or earlier, 88-year-old Charles King of Toronto Humber, berating delegates for waffling on giving youth delegates their two votes in three ridings.

"These young people are better than all of you . . . well I won't say it," he hollered, continuing until they had to turn off his floor microphone.

J. Waldo Monteith, health minister in John Diefenbaker's 1957 federal cabinet, arm-in-arm with Ellen Fairclough, immigration minister in the same cabinet telling each other: "Isn't this just like old times?"

Twenty-two busloads of people from the Niagara Peninsula pouring onto the floor in a massive demonstration for Provincial Secretary Robert Welch. This non-delegate support was supposed to be a surprise, "but it's hard to keep a secret," said Mr. Welch. "I heard it on the radio."

The Clan MacFarlane Scottish band from St. Catharines gave him musical support "for free," they explained, still out of puff from the bagpipes—"because he's a great little guy."

And then there was the maxi-skirted motorcycle rider in that Welch demonstration who fell off her machine—showing delighted delegates that "she" was really a man.

And a fly with big ears could have heard.

Premier John Robarts growling "Attaboy Darcy" as Municipal Affairs Minister McKeough laced into Stephen Lewis, calling the New Democratic Party leader "that sham statesman" and "a Waffle-leaning puppet of union leadership."

John MacNaughton, son of Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton who is chairman of Education Minister William Davis' campaign, shaking his head and saying the Davis people expect he least support from the Allan Lawrence people "because they've been running an ani-Davis campaign so long they're starting to dislike us."

Senator Grattan O'Leary, arriving just in time to hear the last two speeches. Robert Welch's was "just rhetoric, you know" but unknown student candidate Robert Pharand, well he'll be heard from, mark my words." The senator is voting for Mr. Davis today.

The oldest candidae—A. B. R. Lawrence, 47, had the loudest musical demonstration, a Toronto rock group called Heaven who blasted out with Let the Sun Shine In from Hair for eight deafening minutes.

Three demonstrations included On-tari-ari-ari-o, moving Premier Robarts to say huskily to his wife, Norah: "No matter how many times I hear it, I still get a thrill."

Canadian Football League Entry Standing Pat Until 1973

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League is not going to increase its number of teams before 1973, but its television expansion in the United States is growing.

Commissioner Jake Gaudaur said during the league's annual meeting Thursday no formal application was received for a franchise, but two "letters of sincere interest" were studied from groups in London and Windsor-Detroit.

The first day of executive committee meetings dealt mainly with standard procedural items requiring approval yearly and ratification of other previously-announced decisions.

Included among these was the final approval of Hamilton as the site of the 1972 Grey Cup game.

Gaudaur said the league expects to conclude the sale of films of 20 1970 CFL games to Cable Channels Inc. of Rochester, N.Y.

Last year the same number of games from the 1969 season was sold to the U.S. firm and distributed to various community aerial cable companies for viewing.

The fee for the films is nominal, Gaudaur said, but the exposure of the Canadian game in the U.S. is beneficial.

"The interest in the performance of 1969 games was such that the company paid twice as much a guarantee for the 1970 games," Gaudaur said.

The rights fee this year is $10,000 plus a royalty of one-tenth of one cent for each subscriber per hour of programming "which is really nothing until you multiple it by four and one-half million," Gaudaur stated.

Although letters of inquiry about franchises were received from groups in London and Windsor-Detroit, the commissioner said it was "disappointing in a sense" that nothing was received from Halifax.

Feelers from that city had been revealed earlier but the league has received no letters.

The London group, headed by Bob Harris, met the league Thursday to discuss steps necessary to make a formal application.

"I'm prepared to give them a cheque for $25,000 right now," Harris said, referring to one requirement of the CFL constitution, an application fee in that amount, returnable if the franchise is not granted.

The London group appeared prepared for the Wednesday announcement that the city council had voted against helping finance a $3 million stadium.

Harris said the group "could build the stadium ourselves" but said it was necessary that the franchise be a community effort with everyone's support.

Gaudaur said a committee, set up last August, would be instructed to give priority to the study of a structure to stock an expansion team with players.

The commissioner said one of the main problems with expansion would be Canadian players.

"It would be possible to build a solid core of imports in two years," he said "but nobody is willing to give up their Canadians.

"I'd love to see expansion. Halifax, for example would bring the Maritimes into the league. It would add another dimension . . . just like the east-west rivalry which is very healthy for our league."

One of the major items on the CFL agenda is the meeting with the Canadian Football League Players' Association headed by president Mike Wadsworth from Toronto.

A five-man association representation was to meet with the CFL committee to discuss the views of both groups and attempt to settle any differences.

The league Thursday approved a request from the association, moving the All-Star game ahead one day to June 29 from June 30.

Big Jean Hits 500

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The 22-year-old rookie who set up Jean Beliveau's 500th National Hockey League goal was more excited about the historic mark than Beliveau himself.

"When I was a kid I had Beliveau and Frank Mahovlich for my heroes," said Phil Roberto. "I never dreamed I'd ever get to play on a line with them. And, as for assisting on Jean's 500th goal, it's just too much. But it's terrific."

Roberto's drop-pass set up the Montreal Canadiens' team captain for his 500th career goal and third of he game for a 6-2 Montreal win over Minnesota North Stars Thursday night.

In the only other game, Eddie Westfall got three goals to lead Boston Bruins in a 5-3 victory over St. Louis Blues.

Beliveau was much less ecstatic than the rookie right winger from Niagara Falls, Ont.

"Well, of course, I knew that I was getting close to the 500 figure," said the 39-year-old veteran who is playing in his 18th NHL season.

"But I honestly didn't think much about it until I got my second goal of the game, which made my total count 499."

Left winger Frank Mahovlich also was happy to have assisted on Beliveau's big score.

"I'm getting pretty good at setting up these career marks," said the Big M. "I also assisted on Gordie Howe's 700th goal when I played wih him in Detroit."

Mahovlich could be the next player to join the exclusive 500-goal club. Beliveau became only the fourth member.

Howe, former Canadiens star Maurice (Rocket) Richard, and Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks are the other players to have reached the plateau.

Mahovlich and Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs, each Alex Delvecchio of Detroit Red Wings with 409, are the nearest to making 500.

Mahovlich also picked up a goal Thursday night, his 20th of the season, and the Canadiens got steady goaltending from Rogatien Vachon who stopped a penalty shot by Minnesota's Jude Drouin.

The North Stars were awarded the shot by referee Dave Newell after defenceman Jacques Laperriere grabbed the puck in his own goal crease.

John Ferguson and J.C. Tremblay got the other Montreal goals and Bill Goldsworthy scored twice for Minnesota.

The Blues held Boston o a 2-2 tie after two periods at St. Louis before Westfall broke into the clear for the second of his three goals at 6:10 of the final period. He scored his third less than five minutes later and Ken Hodge got another to sew up the Bruins' victory.

Westfall's second goal came while the Bruins were shorthanded—their 18th such goal this season. They have already passed the previous record of 11 shorthanded goals scored by Chicago in the 1964-65 season.

Hogtown Honors Howe

TORONTO (CP) — It may be a bit premature, but it will be Gordie Howe Day here March 31.

Mayor William Dennison, taking advantage of a visit by Detroit Red Wings that coincides with Howe's 43rd birthday, announced plans to arrange a civic reception and all the trimmings for the National Hockey League's greatest goal-scorer.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos announced Thursday that outfielder Mack Jones has signed his contract for the 1971 National Baseball season. Jones, 32, is the 28th member of the 35-man Expos' roster to sign. Meanwhile, the Expos also announced that pitcher Joe Sparma has been sold to Toledo Mud Hens of the International League. Sparma, 29, started the 1970 season with Montreal, but the right-hander was sent down to Buffalo Bisons (later Winnipeg Whips) in the International League after compiling a 0-4 record.

Hornets Move Higher

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Galt Hornets increased their lead in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A standings Thursday to eight points, with a 6-4 win over Owen Sound Crescents.

The Hornets were a last-minute substitute for Woodstock Athletics who cancelled in favor of a four-point game in Owen Sound Sunday.

The Crescents grabbed an early 2-0 lead but Galt tied the game before the end of the first period and outscored Owen Sound 2-1 in each of the second and third periods.

Ron Smith paced the Galt attack with three goals, the others going to Vance Millar, Bruce Reier and Howie Dietrich.

Dale Watson had two goals for Owen Sound. Dave McComb and Bill Abbott scored the others.

Jean Beliveau scored three goals and assisted on another Thursday night to move into a 10th-place tie in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

The points came in Montreal Canadiens' 6-2 victory over Minnesota North Stars. Beliveau's 18 goals and 35 assists gives him a season point total of 53 which is shared by Walter Tkaczuk of New York Rangers who has 17 goals and 36 assists.

League-leader Phil Esposito was held to one point in Boston Bruins' 5-3 win over St. Louis Blues, but was aided by the officials of the National Hockey League Tuesday night when they creditec him with an assist formally owned by line-mate Wayne Cashman. Esposito has 107 points on 47 goals and 60 assists.

BCI Hoop Hosts Again

Belleville Collegiate's midget basketball squad will be trying to be congenial host in BCI's annual midget tournament Saturday, but not on the court.

BCI with a record of 9-1 will be the top local entry in the 16 team tournament, the biggest secondary school tourney held in Belleville, this year.

The city's other representative in the competition will be from Quinte Secondary School, where the midget Saints have recorded seven wins in eight contests this season to lead the Bay of Quinte's western division.

Peterborough will be well represented in the competition with the defending champion Kenner Collegiate team being joined by Adam Scott and Sir Thomas A. Stewart squads.

Winners of the first round games will remain in contention for the championship, while the losers will take part in the consolation round play.

BCI open the action with a 8 p.m. encounter against Centre Hastings in one of the school's gymnasiums, while Quinte meets Campbellford in the other opener.

Both the Championship game and the Consolation final will be played at 7 p.m.

Mo-Hawks Have Good Reason To Wage Fourth-place Battle

There is one overlooked reason Belleville Mo-Hawks should really battle for fourth place in the OHA Senior A standings.

Although the fourth-place finisher earns the dubious distinction of meeting the league pennant-winners — probably Galt Hornets — that "A" best-of-seven series can be stretched out over a greater period than the "B" or "C" series.

Winner of the "A" round also draws a bye into the league final while the "B" and "C" series winners fight it out.

"If we finished fourth, we would only have to play twice a week instead of three times in the playoffs," remarked Mo-Hawk coach Dave Jones, on the eve of the club's 35th game of the schedule, a 9 p.m. Memorial Arena fixture tonight with Kingston Aces.

The Mo-Hawks, Aces, and Oakville Oaks are currently staging an eleventh-hour scramble for the fourth playoff berth. Going into tonight's game, the Oaks and Aces have 33 points and Belleville 32, but the Mo-Hawks enjoy games in hand over both rivals.

Jones also revealed the Mo-Hawks would be sticking with their basic 17-man roster. This past week saw the signing deadline pass. Intermediate recruits John McConnell and defenceman Greg Burkitt had been considered as possible playoff additions, but the club decided against the move.

McConnell earned two assists and picked up two minor penalties in five Mo-Hawk games, while Burkitt played two games, picking up an assist and two minor sentences.

The Mo-Hawks repay tonight's Kingston visit Sunday night. To date, they hold a 6-2 season's edge over the Aces.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Jack Gibbons, secretary of the Minnesota State Athletic Commission, said Thursday he had uncovered evidence that Phil Smith wasn't the opponent knocked out by ranking contender George Foreman in a heavyweight bout here. Foreman, former olympic champion, knocked out his opponent Monday night in 1:40 of the first round of a scheduled 10-round fight, for his 26th consecutive victory as a pro and his 23rd knockout. But Gibbons said his investigation showed the victim was Charlie Boston of Winston-Salem, N.C., who was using Smith's name and boxing record.

This Nice Guy Won

If ever there was a nice guy who finished first, it was Sid Smith.

The two-time winner of the National Hockey League's Lady Byng Trophy for ability combined with sportsmanlike conduct will be joining the NHL Old-Timers in their Friday, Feb. 26 exhibition against some Belleville hockey veterans.

Smith scored 203 goals in 645 regular season and playoff games in a Toronto Maple Leaf uniform and was a member of the Hap Day-coached crew who won the Stanley Cup three consecutive years (1946-49). That marked the first time an NHL team had achieved the feat.

The quiet-spoken leftwinger was also a member of a fourth Toronto Cup-winner in 1950-51, a year in which he scored 30 goals, adding seven more in 11 playoff games.

Smith's most productive NHL campaign came in 1954-55, when he netted 33 goals and won his second Lady Byng Trophy.

SID SMITH

He was one of the few professional players who could lay claim to a 50-goal season, potting 55 goals, and adding 57 assists to win the American Hockey League scoring title in 1948-49 with Pittsburgh before joining Leafs for the playoffs.

Smith retired following the 1957-58 season and the 45-year-old Toronto native now joins the NHL Old-Timers in their fund-raising hockey ventures across the province.

Advance adult tickets for the Feb. 26 Belleville appearance are on sale for $1, with all children's tickets priced at 50 cents. Net proceeds of the game will be shared by the Fairways Junior B club and the city's OMHA entries.

Fairways Soon Stalk Much Bigger Game

The Belleville Fairways will be Hawk hunting tonight, but the local Junior B entry has its long range sights set on bigger game — like Lions.

The Fairways will open their Eastern Ontario Junior B league schedule on Saturpennant-winning Peterborough Lions.

In the other best-of-seven semi-finals round it will be the second-place Oshawa Crushmen taking on the Kingston Frontenacs, with the opening game slated for Friday, Feb. 19.

The reason for the eight-day difference in starting dates is that the Lions leave this weekend for Saskatoon where they will represent Ontario in the Canada games competition.

Belleville's first home date in their play-off series will be Sunday Feb. 28 following the series opener in the Peterborough Memorial Centre.

Trenton will be looking for an upset win tonight after dropping 27 of 28 contests so far this season. The Golden Hawks were unable to come up with enough players for seekend games with Oshawa and Kingston but will be able to ice a team for tonight's encounter and a postponed game with the Fairways that will be played Feb. 19 in Trenton.

Game time tonight will be 9 p.m. at the Trenton Community Gardens.

Canada Games Organizer Keeps Waiting for Roof to Cave In

SASKATOON (CP) — Most of the problems are solved, "but I still keep feeling something disastrous can happen at any minute."

And Gerry Beaudry, 45, assistant general manager, will feel that way until the Canada Winter Games wind up Feb. 21.

Gerry was an adviser at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg, 1967; administrator of Canadian Olympic House at the 1968 Games in Mexico City; assistant manager of the Canada Summer Games in Halifax, 1969; adviser and coordinator for the Arctic Games at Yellowknife, N.W.T., last year.

With a background like that, you wouldn't think he could come up against any new problems.

As he says in his French-Canadian accent: "Hah!"

"We are allowing a maximum of 204 athletes to each province. Then there are six mission members for a total of 210. But I had to make an exception for Quebec, which wanted 211.

"Why? Because it was found during the medical examinations that one of the Quebec badminton players was pregnant. She's married and I don't think I should say the name."

Did Quebec get the 211? No—Gerry compromised on 210½.

Will the lady be able to compete?

"Why not? She isn't THAT pregnant."

Beaudry admits the problems involved in his job aren't generally so delicate.

To solve the others he has a call-director set on his desk which links him with 150 lines through "the largest single switchboard in Saskatchewan."

Beside it sits a radio set linking his office to every venue.

"These are the best Games so far," he said. "But they should be. We were inexperienced in Quebec. We learned in Halifax and now, here, we have more volunteer staff than we can use. The response has been magnificent. Everyone wants to help."

Also, there is the Lucky Dog lottery, run on behalf of the Games, which "enables us to finance the little extras that make a Games work."

The one problem common to all Games, Gerry says, is that "the volunteers don't realize in the beginning the magnitude of the undertaking."

That's where the professionals come in—to guide them.

Interviewing Beaudry means joining him in his world of howling radio, ringing telephones and a constant stream of visitors.

Photographers wanted to borrow gold, silver and bronze medals for a picture; someone came in to clarify a point concerning a boxing rehearsal; guest passes had to be found.

Press kits ran out and he had to arrange for more; the coffee machines didn't arrive and he had to see about that.

Arnie Changes Pesky Putter

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer's new putter failed to provide the confidence he seeks so he plans to change right at the point of sharing the lead in the $140,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament.

Struggling for his first victory in 14 months, Palmer carded a 71 in the second round of the 90-hole tourney to tie with Bob Murphy, George Hixon, and Bert Yancey going into today's third 18-hole round.

After a first-round 67 when he thought his new putter was behaving, Palmer battled the Tamarisk course to a one-under-par 71 and 138 for the 36 holes. Yet on the first six, he missed putts of six, three and eight feet as his miseries of the greens continued.

"I'm still searching for that putting stroke or the satisfaction of having a little more confidence in it," said the man who has won more money at the game than anyone. "Until I find it, it still is a little guessing game on the greens."

With only two of the five scheduled rounds completed, the battle for the $28,000 top prize appeared wide open. Murphy, who won $120,639 last year, fired a second round 68 at Bermuda Dunes while Yancey had a 69 and Hixon, a relative unknown from Tulsa, Okla., a 70 over the same course.

Al Balding of Toronto, who shot a 69 Wednesday, dropped to a 73 but was still the leader among the five Canadians entered:

Gary Bowerman of Toronto shot a 71 for a 144 total, Ken Fulton of Montreal a 70 for 145, George Knudson of Toronto a 77 for 150 and Bill Wright Jr. of Edmonton a 78 for 155.

Peewees Congregating for Big Quebec City Tourney

QUEBEC (CP) — The 12th annual Quebec international peewee hockey tournament opens today with 102 teams and about 1,500 players from six provinces, the Northwest Territories, the United States and West Germany set to take part in the nine-day competition.

The Cedar Hill team from Toronto won the championship last year with a 6-1 win over La Salle, Que. It was the eighth time in the 11 years of the tournament that a Toronto team carried away the honors.

In addition to teams from Quebec and Ontario, British Columbia, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and the Northwest Territories have entries in this year's competition.

Foreign entries come from Boston, Melrose, Mass., St. Clair Shores, Mich., and Hershey, Pa., as well as the Canadian Forces base at Baden-Soellingen, West Germany.

A team fro mthe Paris suburb of Charenton-le-Pont had hoped to play exhibition games at the tournament this year but its participation was vetoed by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. The team took part in the regular competition last year but was eliminated in the first round of play.

A midget team from Korea was denied permission by the CAHA in January to compete in a tournament at Trenton, Ont., in March.

Gordon Juckes, executive director of the association, said at the time the CAHA was standing by its ban on international competition from outside North America this year.

Cubs Unfair: Fergie

CHICAGO (AP) — The Sun-Times says Fergie Jenkins, a 20-game winning pitcher for the Chicago Cubs in each of the last four years, has hired a Montreal lawyer in his bid to get a $100,000 contract for 1971.

The newspaper says Fergie, disappointed after one salary negotiation with the Cubs' vice-president, has retained David L. Schatia to represent him.

Jenkins, the newspaper says, is seeking nearly a 100-per-cent raise. His salary for the last two years has been fixed at an estimated $62,000 on a two-year contract.

"I might come down a few thousands," Jenkins told the Sun-Times from his Chatham, Ont., home. "You always ask for more than you expect to get.

"I'd probably agree to a contract in the high 90s."

Jenkins said that John Holland the vice-president has compared him with the New York Mets' Tom Seaver who last year was believed to have signed for about $75,000.

"It's unfair," said Fergie. "Seaver only had one big year and I've had four in a row."

Malaysia Picks Way Back to Democracy

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — They're rolling back the barbed wire from Malaysia's glittering Parliament House as the country gingerly picks its way back to the democracy lost in racial violence.

Political leaders, aware it might all happen again, are juggling Malay demands for economic equality and non-Malay threats of reaction should the process take a wrong turn.

Parliament, which meets Feb. 20, is dominated by a Malay-run coalition infused with new leadership. It replaces emergency rule by a Malay-weighted National Operations Council set up in May, 1969, after hundreds of Malays and Chinese killed each other in the streets of this Moslem-arched capital.

With the emergency, police strung barbed wire around Parliament in the apparent fear someone would blow up the futuristic white strucuture.

Parliament is expected to be only one of the forces to be kept in balance by leaders bent on retaining stable prosperity, in one of Southeast Asia's most promising nations.

Tensions are still close to the surface.

Malays, almost half the 10 million population, are largely rural dwellers with scant hold on the economy. Chinese, immigrating since the 1800s and growing to a 37-per-cent minority, tower over them. Indians, at 10 per cent of the total, hold a disproportionate edge on business.

Malay leaders contend this situation is wrong, and they propose concrete action to change it.

Special rights and privileges for Malays are written into the 1957 constitution, with yearly programs and schemes to strengthen them. Up to now, it hasn't worked.

"The time for lip service is over," says one Malay in the new guard. "We must have action."

Chinese see handwriting on too many walls in Malay script, and are uneasy. Visa requests by Chinese at foreign embassies—mainly the Australian high commission—have shot up as much as tenfold.

With racial harmony, Malaysia could face a bright future. It puts out the world's largest exports of tin and rubber. Agricultural programs have diversified the economy. Investment prospects sparkle with an expanding market and a rising gross national product.

It's Denied But--

TV Discloses Yanks in Laos

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A credibility gap over Nixon administration denials and television news reports today triggered questions over whether at least a handful of American troops is involved in clandestine operations inside Laos.

One news report came Thursday night from correspondent Howard Tuckner of the American Broadcasting Co., who was with South Vietnamese forces thrusting toward the Ho Chi Minh trail inside Laos.

Millions of viewers saw a man described as an American bathing in a stream with two South Vietnamese soldiers.

Tuckner said the American—identified by the South Vietnamese as a U.S. adviser—ran into the bush when the television team approached him.

The report also showed the body of what was described as an American dressed in the uniform of a South Vietnamese airborne officer. It said the South Vietnamese reported the man was an American adviser.

From Khe Sanh inside South Vietnam, ABC correspondent James Farmer said he had been told by U.S. Green Berets that at least four U.S. advisers were operating in Laos.

The Columbia Broadcasting System also said one of its correspondents had reported that U.S. helicopters flying into Laos often carry Green Beret officers, some dressed in South Vietnamese uniforms.

The Associated Press quoted official sources in Saigon as saying U.S. reconnaissance teams were operating in Laos, on intelligence missions, as they have been doing for several years.

(The Viet Cong delegate at the Paris peace talks charged Thursday that 10 battalions of U.S. combat troops were fighting alongside the South Vietnamese in Laos. The U.S. said the charge is nonsense.)

White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler said the ABC report was being investigated. But he also renewed assurances that the administration is abiding by a congressional ban on the use of American ground combat troops and advisers in Laos.

The Pentagon also denied U.S. ground forces or military advisers are operating inside Laos, and the state department said there was no intention to use them.

But state department spokesman Robert McCloskey said he assumed that U.S. medical evacuation teams—sent in by helicopter to bring out wounded U.S. helicopter crews and South Vietnamese—had their own security force.

Although the defence and state departments were firm in their denials of U.S. ground involvement in Laos, they differed somewhat on the question of a possible South Vietnamese incursion against North Vietnam.

State Secretary William Rogers said flatly at a news conference Wednesday that no assault of any kind is being contemplated against the north.

But Pentagon officials—while stressing that no action of this type is being considered at this time—refuse to rule out the possibility.

Quake Rescue Job Has Gone Smoothly

GRANADA HILLS, Calif. (AP) — What happens when 850 homeless earthquake victims are thrown together at a high school?

"Everything has gone amazingly smoothly," says Larry Poirier, commander of the Red Cross evacuation centre at Granada Hills high school. "The people have been calm and help has come from everywhere."

The high school is the closest evacuation centre to the zone where 80,000 persons were ordered from their homes because of fears that the damaged Van Norman Dam might burst. Many residents moved in with friends and relatives, some went to hotels.

But others had no choice but to camp out at nearby schools and civic buildings.

Cots, supplied by the U.S. Navy, were set up in classrooms. Some evacuees preferred to roll out their sleeping bags on the grass between the buildings.

"It must be something psychological with them," said Poirier. "It may be that they just don't want to sleep under roofs because of the quake."

Aftershocks have continued to give the area an occasional jolt.

Life at the centre is austere for the evacuees, some of whom left $50,000 homes. For the first 24 hours, no hot food was available because gas lines had been cut. Wednesday night, dinners of spaghetti, ravioli and meat loaf were trucked in from another evacuation centre.

The school cafeteria dispenses food on a 24-hour schedule. A supermarket chain donated all perishable foods from its stores in the evacuated area.

Water pressure was so low that toilets could not be flushed. Portable toilets were rented.

"Our most serious problem is boredom," observed Poirier, a husky, 20-year veteran of the air force. "It's especially tough for the teen-agers.

"But we're running movies like True Grit and The Unsinkable Molly Brown in the auditorium—they were donated by a Hollywood company. And the athletic department dispenses sports equipment during the day."

The communal living at Granada Hills high school has been going on for three days and nights since the quake early Tuesday.

Some of the younger set enjoyed life at the centre.

"This is just like a free hotel," said one seven-year-old boy.

City Hall Bomb Scare Delays Bills

A late afternoon bomb scare at city hall yesterday resulted in evacuation of the building and to some extent was responsible for a delay in mailing out interim tax bills.

Frank Morrell, city tax collector, said he and some members of his staff were working late on the tax bill mailing when city police pounded on the front door stating they had received a telephone call that a bomb set to go off at 5.30 had been placed at city hall.

"Police evacuated city hall and searched the building but no trace of a bomb was found," said Mr. Morrell.

As result of the bomb scare, tax department personnel didn't get back at their work until 7 p.m.

But the tax bills, scheduled to be in the mails yesterday, would have been late anyway.

The bills were late in arriving from the computer processors in Ottawa and city hall now will not be able to get them in the mails in time to allow for the required 14-day notice before the first payment is due on February 26.

As result Mr. Morrell said he would ask city council Monday to extend the due date to March 6.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Medicine Is Both Science and Art

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: So help me all my doctor has to do is look at me and I feel better. He's the kindest, most sympathetic human being I've ever met. He has what people don't hear about these days: "beside manner". Don't you think the art of medicine is as important as the science? — Mr. B.

• • •

Comment: Find a doctor with the proper mixture of the two — science and art — and you have the perfect combination Don't let him go. I've always believed that bedside manner is important in the doctor - patient relationship I've often been asked to enumerate some essential qualities the good doctor must have. Here are some of them:

Your doctor should be a good listener, and this is most important. He should be frank and friendly. He should be tactful — neither scare you to death nor keep important facts from you.

He should be compassionate You should get the feeling that he is truly sorry for you and will try everything to help you get out of any mess you are in.

If he is conscientious, you will know you can reach him in an emergency — and not be put off by his nurse or by an answering service. He will tell you if he doesn't make house calls (night or day) — but will also promise that his associate or someone else will get to you if necessary.

• • •

The good doctor will try hard to keep his appointments — you will not have to hang around in the waiting room for hours leafing through old magazines.

He will have a good sense of humor. (You don't want to be greeted by a grumpy doctor when you are filled with complaints.) He is willing to discuss fees without getting uptight. If you or your family become concerned about your illness and would like another opinion, he makes it easy for you to have consultation.

These are only a few of such attributes that go into making a good bedside manner I'm sure you can think of many more.

Often patients ask, "But is there such a doctor around?" I assure you, there are many dedicated men in the profession They wear themselves to a frazzle fighting against time to take care of their patients to the best of their ability.

Your job as a member of the patient - doctor partnership is to keep seeking until you find such a doctor. Sometimes it's not easy, but I promise you that all doctors aren't just interested in making dough. Their greatest satisfaction and fulfillment come from treating their patients and helping them. Bedside manner helps.

At this time I am not prepared to say that Vitamin C is good for colds, or that Vitamin E is unquestionably good for many types of heart conditions. Scientific investigation and time will tell. Meanwhile I get letters like the following:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Would you please tell me why doctors don't use Vitamin E to a greater extent in the treatment of heart disease? Hasn't it been proven beyond a doubt that Vitamin E is a cure all in heart trouble? — Mrs. K

Comment: Not "proven beyond a doubt" — I guess that's the reason why we don't use it as a cure-all. Nevertheless, I don't believe we should be eternal doubters When scientific proof comes along, you can be sure we'll prescribe Vitamin E more than we do, Mrs. K.

Bitter Debate Rages Over Jobless Figures

OTTAWA (CP) — Harried by the opposition with statistics showing eight per cent of the Canadian work force unemployed in January, the government counter-attacked in the Commons Thursday with accusations of right-wing, reactionary posturing.

Key government speaker was Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, who criticized the opposition for a weak, uninformed and often misleading performance on the subject of unemployment and for forming "the most right wing, most reactionary opposition we've ever seen in Canada.

The figures on which Thursday's concern focused, released in the morning by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, show 662,000 people out of work last month, compared with 538,000 in December and 485,000 in January, 1970.

Perhaps the most eagerly-awaited statistic, however, was the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment, calculated to discount climactic factors in determining the underlying health of the economy.

As Finance Minister E. J. Benson had predicted, the rate showed a drop of 6.2 per cent of the work force from 6.6 per cent in December.

Just as the day's sitting began, an outraged opposition demanded a recount, G. W. Baldwin saying the bureau changed its method of reckoning the seasonally-adjusted rate.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled Mr. Baldwin's question of privilege out of order and then prevented Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, responsible for the bureau, from trying to explain.

The bureau later issued a list showing that both the new and the old method of calculating the rate had yielded the same result for December.

Opposition speakers also compared the 130,000 December-to-January increase in unemployed to Mr. Benson's prediction of a 100,000 increase. Mr. Benson replied that his estimate had been seasonally adjusted.

Speaking late in the debate was Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, his third intervention on the subject of the budget.

"I make no apology for speaking three times and at some length," he said. "Each time I have spoken the situation has become more pressing and more serious."

He once again accused the government of having "failed miserably in its responsibilities to Canada, to the Canadian people, to almost two million Canadians directly affected by the scourge of unemployment, and to the Canadian people as a whole because we are all involved in this tragic situation."

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) quoted his leader's view that "men and women who want to work but cannot are losing a little bit of themselves each day."

In response, Mr. Marchand singled out opposition suggestions for a tax cut and reinstatement of the winter works program for special attack.

Who, he wanted to know, would be helped by a tax cut if not the rich? Furthermore, under the winter works program, abandoned in 1967, spending had reached about $25 million a year compared with more than $245 million spent since 1969 assisting new industries and accounting, directly or indirectly, for at least 65,000 jobs.

In view of such programs, he said, opposition claims that the government was not concerned were "soap-box opera."

A somewhat similar theme was struck by Hugh Faulkner, parliamentary secretary to Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, who maintained too many MPs were playing games with unemployment figures and, consequently, with the Canadian people.

"It would seem that we have been developing false expectations in the minds of the people that the problems we face could be solved simply and that all that is required is another government program."

As a solution, Mr. Faulkner proposed that business and labor investigate the possibility of national industry-wide labor negotiations, designed to hold down prices and promote stable economic growth.

More optimism came from Revenue Minister Herb Gray, who said the government has set Canada on the course to full employment of the country's human and material resources.

Economic indicators showed an upswing in Canada's economic activity while at the same time the government had been more successful than the U.S. government in controlling inflation.

Who Said These Things?

What Communist said this? — "These capitalists generally act harmoniously and in concert, to fleece the people."

What liquor baron said this? —"If we take habitual drunkards as a class, their heads and their hearts will bear an advantageous comparison with those of any other class."

What revolutionary extremist said this? — "Any people anywhere being inclined and having the power, have the right to rise up and shake off the existing government, and form a new one that suits them better."

What advocate of "black power" said this? — "If by the mere force of numbers a majority should deprive a minority of any clearly written constitutional right, it might, in a moral point of view, justify revolution — certainly would if such a right were a vital one."

What left-wing union leader said this? — "Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and man deserves much the higher consideration."

What unpatriotic internationalist said this? — "The strongest bond of human sympathy outside the family relation should be one uniting all working people of all nations and tongues and kindreds."

What un-Christian and anti-Biblical man said this? —"My earlier views of the unsoundness of the Christian scheme of salvation and the human origin of the scriptures, have become clearer and stronger with advancing years and I see no reason for thinking I shall ever change them."

What cynic about "self-regulation" said this? — "Moral principle is a looser bond than pecuniary interest."

What fatalist and determinist said this? — "I claim not to have controlled events, but confess plainly that events have controlled me."

What hippie-type said this? — "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled with difficulty, and we must rise to the occasion. As our case is new, so we must think anew and act anew.

What subversive opponent of "loyalty oaths" said this? —"I have found that men who have not even been suspected of disloyalty are very averse to taking an oath of any sort as a condition to exercising an ordinary right of citizenship."

All the preceding statements were made by the 16th President of the United States, Abraham Lincoln.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"I think my 50-year warranty just ran out."

Stanfield Criticizes Development Corporation

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government will be afraid to offer shares in the Canada Development Corp., national Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said today.

He made the comment during a bear-pit discussion with Young Progressive Conservatives attending the Ontario PC leadership convention.

He said Finance Minister Edgar Benson's proposals for the corporation are "muddled."

The federal leader also predicted the government will be afraid to issue $5 shares in the corporation because it may lose money.

"I don't think a share of the Canada Development Corp. will be offered to the public. I don't think the government will want to risk losses on those shares and have to face the people who bought them."

But he said the CDC—now before Parliament as a means to encourage more investment by Canadians in their own country —would be a significant factor in economic nationalism.

"He (Mr. Benson) says it's not a vehicle to maintain Canadian control of companies in Canada but provides Canadians the opportunity to invest in Canada.

"I think that's a lot of nonsense because Canadians have opportunities to invest now."

Continuing on economic nationalism, Mr. Stanfield said it is time to categorize industries that should be protected and then devise the mechanics to do this.

Top priority, he said, should go to such industries as banking and communications.

Changed Formula Provokes Uproar

OTTAWA (CP) — An apparently-innocent footnote to monthly unemployment figures published Thursday provoked a political uproar and upset the concentration of federal statisticians.

Opposition MPs accused the government in the Commons of twisting numbers to make the jobless trend in January look less severe.

Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, whose department is responsible for the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, denied in the House that the method had been changed, then said outside that the change was an internal DBS matter.

Anyway, even if the old method had been used the figure in dispute—seasonally-adjusted percentage of unemployed—would have been exactly the same in January at 6.2 per cent of the labor force, Mr. Pepin said.

Meantime, at DBS headquarters the statisticians reran unemployment numbers through the computer by both old and new methods and said variations in results were only marginal.

Security Worries Stanfield

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government should launch an investigation into terrorism in Canada, national Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said today.

"If we are going to have to live with terrorist activities . . . there are things we should know," he told a Young Progressive Conservatives session at the Ontario PC leadership convention.

"We should be told how good our security is, how good the flow of information is and how accurate it is."

He said that in Montreal there were two previous plots to kidnap foreign diplomats before British Trade Commissioner James Cross was abducted last fall.

Mr. Stanfield said if he were prime minister he would take a tougher stand on capital punishment for murders of politicians and policemen.

He said that although Parliament voted to abolish the death penalty for all persons except killers of policemen and prison guards, the cabinet has been commuting all death sentences.

This, he said, "does tend to make a farce of the present law."

Eye Gifts Are Sought By Coroner

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's supervising coroner has asked all coroners in the province to suggest that next-of-kin donate the eyes of their relatives to the Canadian Eye Bank.

In an interview Thursday, Dr. H. B. Cotnam said: "There are 200 people in Canada walking around blind when they could be given sight through a cornea operation."

"We're trying to get the eye bank a sufficient supply, not only in Ontario but across Canada."

Dr. Cotnam said he is also working to get the provincial government to change a law that allows the next of kin to veto an eye donation even if the dead person asked that they be donated.

Anne Wolf, director of the eye bank's Ontario division, reported Thursday that the action by the coroners is one factor in a large recent increase in eye donations.

Mrs. Wolfe said 84 eyes were donated in January, more than any month in the eye bank's 15-year history.

Brothels Proposed In Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A red light may soon shine amidst the neon of Las Vegas. The district attorney has drafted an ordinance to legalize prostitution, a majority of county commissioners say their initial reaction is favorable and public protest has been nil in this state where legal gambling is a major industry.

Nevada has no state laws regarding prostitution although it has been outlawed as a public nuisance in Las Vegas and Reno since the Second World War.

The proposal prepared by District Attorney Roy Woofter is entitled: An ordinance making it lawful to operate houses of ill fame in Clark County.

The ordinance allows only one brothel per 500,000 population, limiting the county to one at this time, and restricts its location to an area west of the Las Vegas Strip near the freeway from Los Angeles.

The 'In' Crowd Stood Firm

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

TORONTO — In the end it was a simple matter of the establishment sticking together that won the premiership of Ontario for William Davis.

After spending $100,000 from Cornwall to Thunder Bay, it was a simple little telephone call that didn't even cost a dime that turned the tide.

Power Broker Charlie McNaughton matter-of-factly explained it all after the education minister slipped into John Robarts' robes at 1:30 this morning, gingerly adjusting the mantle after a see-saw last ballot that saw him come out on top 812-768.

"Bill talked to Darcy (by telephone over the intricate internal communications system the candidates had set up in Maple Leaf Gardens) after the second ballot. Darcy then agreed that if he was third at the end he would come over."

It was a crushing blow for Allan Lawrence, the mines' minister, when Darcy McKeough became the only losing candidate to publicly attempt to move his support en masse. Up until then Lawrence had whittled down Davis's first ballot strength lead of 117 to 63 going into the show-down ballot.

McKeough's action did not sit well with all his workers.

"They told us he wouldn't throw his support publicly and try to take his vote with him," one upset delegate was heard to say.

Proof that McKeough's voters were not enamored with the move was the ballot result that showed Lawrence picked up 162 of McKeough's votes to 143 for Davis. But it just was not enough.

For Bill Davis it could turn out that emerging as the new premier might prove to be an easier job than triumphing at the polls at the upcoming election. He might yet have to borrow Al Lawrence's slogan of "Winning is just the beginning."

In the short period ahead, before he goes before the much more critical audience — the voting public of Ontario — the new premier is faced with the herculean task of proving to the electorate that he truly does embody that spirit of change which the retiring PM John Robarts said was needed.

He has to do this somehow within the framework of the existing political facts of life — a Robarts cabinet which supported him almost to a man.

Fortunately for Davis, a few cabinet ministers have also decided not to return, giving him a few spots to work with.

Dropping any of the present cabinet members to make changes is going to be difficult, particularly in hindsight and after a look at the tight vote.

At least two of the new men will have to be from the north, if nothing more than just a move to mollify this area after its adopted son was shot down by the establishment south.

Last night Davis said he would make no promises other than to adapt to change and to recognize the need to win the next election.

During the speechmaking, Robarts fondly referred to the candidates who ran as "his team". Other members of his team, the 50-odd sitting members who supported Davis, proved to be the margin of victory.

As the new coach, Davis now has to prove the team is really his. Winning might really be, for him, just the beginning.

Final Ballot 7 Hours Late

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis was chosen early today to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts in an Ontario Conservative leadership convention that was thrown into hours of delay and confusion by balky voting machines.

But what the final hours lacked in dispatch was more than recovered in suspense, as the 41-year-old Brampton lawyer, favored by the party establishment, wound up 44 votes ahead of Mines Minister Allan Lawrence on the fourth ballot.

The end came at 2 a.m.—exactly 11 hours after voting delegates among the crowd of 12,000 in Maple Leaf Gardens began the first ballot which subsequently was cancelled because of what appeared to be failure of 12 of the 15 voting machines to record totals accurately.

The delay was a public relations embarrassment because the schedule had been carefully arranged so that the new leader would be chosen by 7 p.m.—prime television time.

Hundreds of balloons floated down as a weary 6,000 of the party faithful still remaining cheered wildly for their new leader—the man they hope will lead them to victory in a provincial election expected later this year.

Smiling broadly, but maintaining the calm, measured exterior so like that of Mr. Robarts, the stocky education minister thanked the delegates for his victory and went on to say:

"I make no promises except this: To maintain the principles, the integrity of our party, to recognize the necessity to move forward, to adopt those changes which are necessary to society and, most importantly, to recognize the need to win (the next election)."

Mr. Davis, who will decide himself when to accept formally the mantle of the premiership, said the date of the election and the choice of a cabinet will not be discussed until he returns to his Queen's Park office Monday.

There was an unconfirmed report that he planned a fast trip to the Bahamas for the weekend.

"I'm a has-been," said 54-year-old John Parmenter Robarts in his last speech to a party convention as leader and premier. "I love you all. My team, they're fabulous."

Allan Lawrence, 45-year-old Toronto lawyer who fought the hardest fight of the campaign, was smiling but obviously shaken as he took the microphone to ask "that we make it unanimous: Bill Davis."

Also on the platform were the four other candidates who had dropped out earlier: Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Robert Pharand, a graduate student at the University of Ottawa.

One of the emotional highlights came when Mr. McKeough, a 38-year-old Chatham businessman, lost out on the third ballot and threw his support to Mr. Davis.

The youthful McKeough at first headed toward an exit door after the third-ballot result was announced, then wheeled and headed for the Davis box with one of his leading supporters, Energy Minister George Kerr, in tow.

The Gardens erupted in bedlam as Mr. McKeough grabbed the education minister's hand and raised it in a victory salute as someone pinned a Davis sticker on his lapel.

"My people can do what they want to do, but I'm going to vote for Bill Davis," said Mr. McKeough, who represents Chatham-Kent in the legislature.

Asked why he went to the Davis camp, he replied:

"They're both good friends of mine. You just have to go back to the beginning . . . go back to the heart of hearts."

Allan Lawrence was obviously disappointed. As the unofficial returns from the final ballot came in, the lead see-sawed back and forth between the two men and their respective supporters alternately shouted victory or frowned defeat.

Ottawa Dislikes Tankers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Energy Minister Joe Greene said Friday the federal government is opposed to shipping oil from Alaska to the continental United States by tanker down Canada's West Coast.

He suggested instead that the best and cheapest means of transporting oil and natural gas from the north slope of Alaska would be through a Canadian pipeline.

It was the first statement of the federal government's opinion on the issue, raised two weeks ago when British Columbians learned Atlantic Richfield Co. was building a refinery near Ferndale, Wash., 12 miles south of the border.

The company expects to be supplied with Alaska oil by tankers, which would have to navigate the island-dotted 30-mile-wide Strait of Juan de Fuca between Vancouver Island and Washington.

Last week the members of the B.C. legislature unanimously called on the federal government to oppose the plan, after conservationists said the breakup of a large oil tanker would cause an environmental disaster on the coast.

Mr. Greene said the federal government will officially make its views known to the U.S. and propose that Alaska oil and gas move by pipeline through Canada.

He said the offer to use Canada as a "land bridge" has one condition—the pipelines must be open to future shipments of Canadian oil and gas.

Evacuees Go Home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eighty thousand persons have returned home after three nights in motels, tents or friends' houses wondering whether an earthquake-damaged dam near their prosperous suburb would burst.

Cars were lined up for three blocks at the edge of the evacuated San Fernando Valley area in 90-degree afternoon heat as police removed the barricades.

No Major Changes in Policy Expected From New Premier

TORONTO (CP) — No significant changes in provincial policies are expected for the foreseeable future after William Davis takes over the premiership of Ontario from John Robarts.

This was made evident during the campaign for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party when the education minister rejected statements of "instant policies" and indicated he would work to further already-established goals.

He made no campaign promises that deviated from the direction the Conservative government already is taking on such major issues as education costs, taxation, economic nationalism, pollution and regional development.

"To me, to be a Conservative is to retain the productive links with the past, while discarding institutions and procedures that have outlived their usefulness," he said after being nominated formally as a leadership candidate.

What he did not say was that this basic principle has been followed generally throughout 28 years of Tory power in the province, although the process of discarding outdated ideas may have been slower at times than some people thought necessary.

The 41-year-old Brampton lawyer answered critics of the high cost of education—$1.5 million of the provincial budget this year—by noting he has imposed "tough" new ceilings on spending by school boards.

When criticism of spending on education continued, he suggested year-round operation of schools might save money through increased use of facilities and faster graduation by students.

What he did not say was that this was not a fresh idea. The government has had the proposal under study for some time.

On taxation, Mr. Davis has noted there are several programs within government "that are already being held, or cut back."

On economic nationalism, he began his campaign by saying he would encourage Canadian investment, but would "not necessarily" restrict foreign investment—which all the leadership candidates agreed was a vital necessity to the economy.

Later, he suggested the government give "some form of preferential treatment" to Canadian-owned companies seeking loans and "develop policies" whereby foreign companies would be obligated to use Canadian personnel.

He has said "polluters must pay." Polluting industries already are paying fines for pollution of provincial waterways; and some companies have indicated they will be forced to close because they cannot afford control equipment as demanded by the province.

Nevertheless, at some point in what is to be the Davis administration, change is inevitable. Mr. Davis, speaking of the future of the party, had this to say:

"It will have a new leader, a new orientation, a set of priorities defined by another man, and a new style and attitude."

Authentic Indian Jewelry Can Add Interesting Accent

PICTON (Staff) — Thinking beads, the Indian medicine man's ancient prescription for tribal tranquility, are prompting interested "Hows" from shoppers at Picton's Lemon Tree Boutique. These colorful necklaces form part of a collection of jewelry handcrafted by Mohawk Indians living on the Tyendinaga reservation, Deseronto.

Mrs. Walter Fraser, proprietress of the Lemon Tree, began to sell the authentic necklaces several weeks ago and has become absorbed by their history. She remarked that the Indians supposedly were attracted by all moving things and for this reason prized fringed chokers and swinging beads.

Among the collection of jewelry featured in her boutique are braided headbands unusual because of their unbroken three-strand weave. Deerskin ties replace metal fasteners on these mod accessories. Beaded belts of dyed deerskin and braided wristlets also are offered for sale.

Mrs. Fraser expressed her admiration for a choker patterned from a tribal design more than 150 years old. She noted that this necklace and all other pieces of the handcrafted jewelry provide original and striking fashion accents for jumpsuits, pant outfits and other simple styles. She enjoys wearing these accessories because they have "that handmade look demonstrated by minute irregularities".

Thinking beads contradict the theory that the beautiful is seldom useful. These small, brightly colored beads can be fingered by any maiden deep in thought while they accessorize her favorite outfit. Held by a deerskin thong the beads will not break when consulted on a knotty problem.

The Lemon Tree Boutique provides the only Prince Edward County retail outlet for this unusual Indian jewelry. For the woman who has everything this shop's stock of thinking beads could provide something new.

Five Hurt In Crash

A collision between a trailer transport and a car at the intersection of Sidney St. and Dundas St. West about midnight last night sent five people to Belleville General Hospital.

The 1964 model Ford in which they were driving came to rest under the trailer of the transport owned by Doyle's Wonder Bakeries.

Constable John Walker of the Belleville Police Department assisted by an ambulance driver, chopped one door of the car open to free the victims and was forced to hacksaw the steering column to extricate the driver.

Those injured in the accident were Leon Quinlan, 27, of Madoc, who sustained compound facial fractures; Wayne Bedore of Brighton; Brian Garrison, 19, of Trenton and Wanda Jean Veeder, 16, of Middleton Park, Trenton, all of whom sustained facial lacerations and Sandra Gaudreau, 15 of Middleton Park who received facial lacerations and a fractured left ankle.

Education Seminar At Albert

Albert College is the scene this weekend of a pilot project in education — a workshop on staff - student relations sponsored by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

The workshop is the result of a survey conducted by OSSTF that indicated the major areas of interest to teachers is staff - student relations and outdoor education.

E. J. Shipton, principal of Moira Secondary School, is course director. Those attending include teachers, students, administrators and trustees from four counties, Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward, Northumberland - Durham and Hastings.

Because of the limited facilities at Albert College, registration has been restricted to one representative in each category from each county, and one student from each secondary school.

Object of the workshop is an exchange of ideas and attitudes between students and educational personnel at all levels.

The sessions began last night with a discussion of individual differences among students and will continue all day today with discussions of drugs, teacher evaluations and specific school situations.

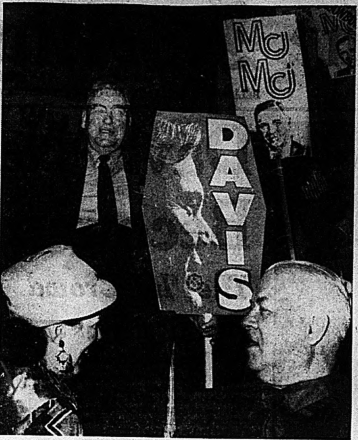
Sheila Lynch Chosen Queen

Sheila Lynch was chosen queen of Tweed Winter Carnival last night at a dance at S. H. Connor School.

The five judges from the Belleville Kinsmen and Kinette club, chose Miss Lynch from 11 candidates, all students, entered in the contest.

Runners-up, who now become carnival princesses, were Mary Courneyea and Peggy Palmateer.

The carnival opened last night with a torchlight parade led by Dianne Gunning, this year's Ontario dairy princess.



In the Thick of It

Quinte-area Conservative members of the provincial and federal houses were right in the middle of yesterday's marathon voting session at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto. Norris Whitney, MPP, Prince Edward-Lennox, is an obvious Davis man, while Lee Grills, MP, Hastings, makes his presence felt on the convention floor.

Madoc's Winter Carnival Feb. 19

Tension mounts here as the local recreation club makes final arrangements for the first winter carnival. Entries for the 'Snow Queen' are now being taken and a number of girls will be competing. The queen and her two princesses will be chosen at a teen dance in the high school on Friday night, February 19, and will ride in a specially-designed float in the torch-light parade the same night for the gala opening activities. A come-as-you-are dance will be held in the Kiwanis Centre the same evening for the older set. All day Saturday organized snowmobile trips will be going on. Hot noon luncheon and hot turkey supper are planned to accommodate the hungry snowmobilers. That night a dance is planned for the Legion Hall. Sunday will be the big day, beginning with a pancake breakfast followed by the big parachute jump and snowmobile races at the fair grounds all afternoon.

Farrow Heads Farm Society

Clarence Farrow is the new president of the Madoc Agricultural Society as a result of the annual meeting held in the council chambers recently. Treasurer Raeburn Robinson reported a successful year financially. The gate receipts of $5,085 were the best on record for the fair. Retiring president, Carman Downey, reported, mentioning the many improvements made to the grounds and the new buildings that were erected to provide further accommodation for the livestock. Philo Harris was present to express his thanks to the Society for the service diploma which they presented to him for his long service. Mr. Harris has worked in conjunction with the fair board for 40 years.

Trouble Brewing

London Suburb is Haven of Asians

SOUTHALL, England (AP) — A cricket ground, pubs, churches, little shops and bookies—this looks like a typical English town. Then you see men in turbans and beards strolling Lady Margaret Road or drinking at the Three Horseshoes. And women with winter coats over their saris, shopping for peanut oil, spices and pickled squash

The population is 25 per cent Indian, the highest rate in Britain. This town near London's Heathrow Airport has become a cultural centre for Asian immigrants.

With the Indians moving in, as many as one-third of the whites have moved out—and now there's trouble between the immigrants and the remaining English.

"I'm fed up," says one white housewife. "No one likes to see his ground taken from under him.

"If I could afford it I'd move out."

She signed a petition protesting to Prime Minister Edward Heath over a move by an Indian group to control the last remaining movie house that still shows English-language films.

It's the Odeon, and on recent weekdays it showed Walt Disney's The Aristocats and Charlie, the Lonesome Cougar. On Sunday the fare was Aukha Jutly, a colorful Punjabi-language musical.

Since the approximately 15,000 Indians began moving in 15 years ago, the town's only other two English-language movie theatres have started showing only Indian films.

Immigration has accelerated in recent years, in Southall as well as all over Britain. Africans and Asians from former British colonies have come here in search of better jobs. Many are Asians forced to leave homes in Africa because of Africanization policies. They feel closer to Britain than to the lands of their ancestors.

There now are more than one million non-white immigrants—about two per cent of the British population. Most of them are concentrated in a few industrial areas, mainly London and Manchester.

Resentment by some working-class whites over disruptions has led to a backlash vote. The best known Tory politician benefitting from this vote is Enoch Powell, who favors "voluntary repatriation" of immigrants.

Probably typical of many Powell supporters is Gillian Goold, organizer of the white citizens' protest over the Odeon affair. She refers to the Indian influx as "this alien onslaught."

Mrs. Goold runs a small scooter shop decorated with a Union Jack and big photos of Heath and Powell.

"English Only Spoken," a sign in her shop warns. Another gives a long list of "No's," ending with "No Bartering, No Smoking, No Trotskyists."

Interviewed in her tiny flat in the back, crammed with five little children and a big black dog, Mrs. Goold says she sees the flood of Indians into Southall as part of a Communist plot.

"It's undermining our country," she maintains. "Our assets and our skills are being driven out by these immigrants. They come here without speaking our language. We spend a lot of money teaching their children English.

"I'm not a screaming racialist but I feel we shouldn't give up our birthright."

Mrs. Goold fears her children may lose their cultural heritage if more immigrants move in. "We are Christian and they are heathen," she says.

Statistics seem to disprove many such charges.

Local social workers say employment is high, so no white jobs are threatened and there's plenty of adequate housing. Welfare costs are actually lower per immigrant than per Englishman, one study shows.

Some whites see it differently.

"They bring disease," says one working-class woman about the immigrants. "We had a TB outbreak at my son's school." Like a number of whites, she objects to the busing that brings non-white children into schools in predominantly white areas.

The woman portrays the Indians as illiterate loafers.

"That's not true," says an Indian leader. "We are simple, hard-working people. And our children are assimilating and learning English, even if their parents are not."

An Indian official of the government's Community Relations Commission says young Indians are less tradition-bound than their parents.

"For example," he says, "young men seeking work at a food-packing plant will shave their beards if hygiene requirements dictate it.

"And they stop wearing turbans if public opinion is against it."

Older members of the Sikh religion—the predominant one among Indians here—ignore public opinion and go on wearing the turbans and beards their religion calls for.

Except for an outbreak in 1958, there have been only minor incidents of racial violence here. A. S. Rai, a successful Indian travel agent, says his older boys were beaten by white kids at school. "They called my boys 'stinky black bastards'," he said.

An editor has seen his local English paper's circulation drop 10 per cent as whites have moved out.

"You'll never get integration here, but perhaps there will be understanding," he says.

Another moderate, an English housewife, says: "People will accept it because of our traditional tolerance and apathy—which comes from our climate, you know. It's too cold and rainy to go outside and stir up trouble."

She welcomes the Indian invasion of her local shops: "Now I don't have to travel so far to buy spices."

More to Come

It's been a bumper year for snow in Prince Edward County. Some residents have had to pile it well above their heads to be able to get to and from their houses and barns. And, of course, winter is a long way from being over.

Perceptually Handicapped Can Be Brilliant

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A warm, concerned teacher with faith in the student's ability to succeed is the only solution to the problems of the child with learning disabilities.

Such a teacher, and one of her successful students introduced a seminar on staff-student relations last night at Albert College.

The teacher was Mrs. Leila Whitcombe, developmental reading consultant with the East York Board of education. Her former student, now enrolled at York University was Miss Jane Irwin, who as a perceptually handicapped girl was predicted to last only six weeks in secondary school.

She lasted the course, graduated with honors from Centennial Community College and is now studying at York with the eventual goal of helping others like herself.

"Jane is just as perceptually handicapped now as she was when she came to us," Mrs. Whitcombe emphasized. But she said, the perceptual-handicapped child can "learn to live with it" and can be "trained around it".

"If you believe they can do it, they will do it," Mrs. Whitcombe said of the teacher's role in working with perceptually handicapped children.

A perceptual handicap is the result of brain damage before, during, or shortly after birth. It does not diminish intelligence — these people are usually very bright, says Mrs. Whitcombe — but it results in the afflicted person either seeing or hearing differently than normal.

Only recently defined as a handicap and still dimly understood by the doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists and teachers working in the field, the condition produces overactivity, clumsiness, faulty speech development and bizarre behavior in the young child.

Mrs. Whitcombe defined the handicap by describing the symptoms her pupils complained of.

"How can you add a column of figures if they keep jumping about, are in a different position each time you try to add, so that you never get the same answer twice?" she asked.

"How can you study geometry when your concepts of shapes are different from most people's, when the corners look different to you than they look to your teacher and fellow students.

"How can you concentrate on what the biology teacher is saying when all the jars and bottles on his desk seem to be falling in toward you?"

The perceptually handicapped student can't concentrate his eyes on one object in a group, can't "shut out objects and shut in the teacher", can't retain a visual image of words.

Because the handicapped person cannot shut out external stimuli and zero in on what he wants to pay attentin to, he soon becomes isolated from society, especially when he makes the transition from the neighborhood elementary school to the big secondary school.

This was how Mrs. Whitcombe and her school's authorities discovered Jane Irwin — she always stood alone in one place in the school and she was consistently failing in all her subjects.

The solution was to remove the thing causing the greatest pressure — mathematics. Then came encouragement — "giving her the incentive to succeed, the realization that teachers realized the problem and believed in her ability to overcome it".

"Jane is as handicapped now as when she came to us, but she has learned to live with it and above all she is setting out to help others who have to live with it," said her teacher.

When a muscle or a blood vessel is severed, others adjacent to it enlarge and take over its function. The brain doesn't work that way.

During a recent conversation with the psychiatrist who heads the Hospital for Sick Children's department for the perceptually handicapped, Mrs. Whitcombe was told that other parts of the brain do not take over the function of the damaged part.

"A warm, concerned human being does far more in the end for a perceptually handicapped student than all we can offer here," he told Mrs. Whitcombe.

Should the student with any kind of learning disability be separated from his fellow students, or should he be kept with regular classes, asked a trustee.

According to Miss Irwin, the student should continue in regular classes and spend a few periods each day in special training.

In her own case, she was given a study carrell where she worked on her own.

"A study carrell has three blank walls; there is nothing to concentrate on but the book before you," said Miss Irwin.

"More people are recognized today as having perceptual handicaps because they are put into situations that bring it out — there are more and more audio and visual stimuli around us. No longer is the student confined to a little desk and a book."

Both Miss Irwin and her teacher said that the open area classroom should have portable study Carrells, something like the new cardboard election booths where the student who can't stand too much distraction can retreat to work on his own.

Although Mrs. Whitcombe did not pretend to be a diagnostician, she was repeatedly asked how to recognize students with handicaps.

"At the high school level a person making repeated spelling errors can't help it," was as far as she would go.

Later Mrs. Whitcombe questioned opportunity classes, the two-year course offered students who fail to pass their grade 8 and are transferred into secondary schools.

"We should take a long, hard look at opportunity classes," she said.

Many brilliant students with perceptual handicaps are labelled "dull" and shunted off to opportunity classes, she indicated.

After the formal session, Miss Irwin commented on the lack of publicly - supported facilities for treating the perceptually handicapped.

Visual training by an optometrist cost her parents $8 a half hour, she said.

"We can be treated, for a price," she said. "But everything is done in the private sector — the government has done nothing for us, except for the devoted teachers who care."

Loyalist Students Protest 'Discrimination'

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

More than 125 Loyalist College students have officially joined a protest to boycott certain downtown retail business establishments for what they term "discrimination".

A student petition pledges the student to "refuse to patronize your establishment until you concede to the fact that we are students and as such are entitled to student rates.

They cite the incidence of Loyalist students, the majority of whom are living away from home, having to pay adult fees to ride the city transit lines, enter local movie houses, and being unable to enter "so-called student dances".

"There's not much to keep we students here . . . nothing to attract out spending," asserts arts student Gerry Bower.

"High school students have dances, are entitled to special movie rates; there's not much to keep our students here, not much to encourage spending."

Mike Manthorpe drew attention to the fact that "Loyalist students don't have an image in the community; no identity."

He charged that the community "doesn't realize the potential of the students" as a source of "buying power and future employment; the growth of the community."

He stated that "educational leaders are trying to sell the college to the community and, once established, they seem to have forgotten it."

Mr. Manthorpe strongly stated that "it's natural to assume you'll lose a certain percentage of students to other communities but it's economical to keep them here. Belleville is paying for people to be educated here and not to populate other areas.

"If Belleville doesn't do something, they'll have an awful headache and it just depends on how fast they take the aspirin," said Mr. Bower.

According to the two young men, many students have had problems obtaining rental accommodations from agencies and real estate firms.

"As soon as they learn we are students, they back off," charged Mike Manthorpe.

"We are infuriated and frustrated at the reaction of some of the realtors; it's discrimination.

"So far, many people in Belleville have looked down their noses at the students," there are others in the "city of Belleville who have done a fantastic service to the students and should be thanked."

Cited as part of the example of what the youths refer to as "discrimination" is the lack of part-time jobs.

They state that as soon as prospective employers learn of their identity as Loyalist students, they "become very blunt."

Again they drew attention to the fact that this was not an attack against those employers and other people who have aided the students and have welcomed them into the community.

On one hand they have complained that as students they have not been entitled to student rates in certain establishments. On the other, as young adults they have been denied apartments.

One local realtor advised them of a clause to be written into a rental contract requiring, as they put it "that we could be thrown out for any complaint; that we make any repairs for any damage".

"That was too much, so we didn't consider it."

The Intelligencer talked with the realtor in question to learn the details of such a contract.

He explained that the landlady for whom he was acting had "lost three tenants during the time the Loyalist students" had lived in her apartment.

He further stated that many landlords have had bad experiences with students from the college. In this case, there were reports of "police being called in, girls in at all hours, beer bottles everywhere.

"There are some students who have made it tough for the good ones, and it is unfortunate," he commented.

"At least I tried to do something for them; even after explaining the owner was not interested in Loyalist students, they were willing to give the youngsters a chance."

He stated that stringent rules had been listed in the contract.

"I still have the agreements here if they want to look at them again," he said.

A local theatre manager explained the position of charging student fees to high school students and not Loyalist College students, a fact made much of by the petitioners.

According to the manager, all full-time students under 18 years of age are allowed into the main floor seats for reduced "student" rates.

"This is a main office stipulation.

"We must draw the line somewhere . . . we don't discriminate," the manager said.

"The motion picture business is not a charitable institution; this is a private enterprize, a business."

The movie house operator explained that theatres are not required to give discounts for students. "It's a privilege, the same as our discounts for the senior citizens.

"It's a pleasure to have the senior citizens come in; they express their appreciation. Most of these students don't even thank us; we get more abuse from the students who get discounts.

"They treat it as their right . . . some of them are really saucy about presenting their student council cards . . . a lot of them demand the special rate as their right."

The manager said Loyalist students "are in a finishing, training program, the same as hospital trainees, apprentices."

The theatre proprietor was quick to point out the many special discount movies brought in especially for students, often at the request of teachers.

"I have several blanket price movies brought in especially; educational films at an extra special rate to the viewer. . I think I'm the only theatre near here to do this."

Movies mentioned were Romeo and Juliet, Macbeth, Lord of the Flies, Othello, Henry V and on Feb. 16, Tom Jones.

"Any time teachers ask for a special screening, they get special rates," if the theatre can provide the film.

Two-man Sub Designed For Arctic Exploration

PICTON (Staff) — Benjamin F. Ackerman, Picton, president of the Toronto-based firm called Arctic Canadian Continental-shelf Exploration Services, has described a new program for Arctic bottom exploration.

Mr. Ackerman, a retired naval commander, announced that preparations have started toward construction of a two man submersible vessel to be flown by Stol aircraft to the frozen ocean surface for periods up to one month. Geophysical surveys will be made from the vessel, which can be lowered through a hole cut in the 12-foot-thick ice. It is capable of operating up to depths of 1,000 feet.

Mr. Ackerman said ACCES will extend its services to major oil and mineral companies conducting Arctic explorations. The submersible vessel and its accompanying navigation and survey equipment are considered readily within the limits of existing technology.

The advantages of the new system of Arctic discovery were detailed by Mr. Ackerman. "We consider it practical to carry out underwater surveys for at least nine and possibly 12 months of the year, whereas surface operations are effectively limited by weather and the heavy dependence on long supply links to a period of six or seven months. An air-lifted submersible operation is also capable of great mobility should data be required in a remote area in a hurry," he explained.

A light, twin-engine Stol freighter aircraft, a number of tracked vehicles, radios, food, navigation equipment, supplies, shelter and fuel will become support tools in this operation.

The submersible, named Narwhal, is designed to carry photographic equipment and geophysical instruments. Seismic refraction, utilizing a stationary and repetitive sound likely located at the base camp will be used to make surveys. The submersible will be capable of conducting magnetometer and gravity studies and the recovery of geological samples following their dislodgement.

The potential of Narwhal was reported during an international symposium on Arctic geology held in San Francisco earlier this month.

Syrup Producers Meet at Madoc

MADOC (Special) — Local maple syrup producers learned many new techniques in tapping trees at the annual Maple Producers Information Day held in the Orange Hall, Madoc last Friday.

One of the speakers, W. A. Humphreys, secretary of the Ontario Maple Syrup Producers Association spoke on quality control and conducted a maple quiz.

Mr. Sinclair, agricultural engineer, spoke on the use of vacuum pumps in sap collection and also on the use of oil in the place of wood for fuel in boiling down the sap

Cyril Shaw of Eldorado announced his intentions to switch to oil this spring.

The election of officers was held. John Kerr of Picton is president; Cyril Shaw, vice-president and Burton Hubble of Belleville, secretary-treasurer. Representatives to the provincial board are John Kerr and Cyril Shaw and directors are William Robinson of Eldorado and Ken Holland of Madoc.

140 Attend Crop Clinic

Deep snowdrifts which this week effectively plugged roads in Prince Edward county cut attendance at yesterday's Quinte district crop clinic held at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Approximately 140 district farmers attended the clinic but only a few farmers from the northern part of Prince Edward were able to get out.

Sponsors of the clinic were Chipman Chemicals, Behlen Manufacturing Company, DeKalb Canada Ltd. and Allis Chalmers Ltd.

The all-day session saw farmers view films on new corn and bean production techniques, and the latest in farm machinery and herbicides.

MURRAY EHRLICK

The East End Council of Churches and Synagogues will hold their ninth annual Brotherhood week dinner on Monday, February 15 with Murray Ehrlick, of Canadian Council of Christians and Jews as guest speaker. The dinner is sponsored this year by the Sons of Jacob Synagogue.

Participants in Brotherhood week are Eastmnister United Church, Emmanuel Baptist Church, Lutheran Holy Trinity Church, St. Columba Presbyterian Church, St. Margaret's Anglican Church, St. Joseph's Catholic Church, the Salvation Army and the Sons of Jacob Synagogue.

Exhibition Booth Or Newsletter?

Hastings county board of education put a booth in Quinte Exhibition last year, but trustees can't make up their minds about continuing the practice this year.

Cost is a big factor in their uncertainty. They learned this week that the booth cost them $800 and that only paid for about 20 per cent of the cost. About 80 per cent of the material was borrowed at no expense to the board. To duplicate the display this year will cost over $1,000.

Trustee F. John Follis of Bancroft said few people stopped at the booth while he was there, but he thought the unsatisfactory location was the reason. He said he was in favor of expanding the display and taking it to other fairs in the fall.

Milford Waller of Thurlow was also in favor of a booth at the fair, where, he said, people could meet and talk to trustees and teachers in an informal atmosphere.

However, the board's publicity budget is limited and plans are to be presented soon for a newsletter, prepared with the help of Loyalist College journalism students.

Trustees decided to defer a decision of the fair booth and weigh its value against that of a newsletter at the next meeting.

But trustee MacDonald Smith of Belleville issued a caution.

"Peterborough had a regular newsletter and every one of the Peterborough trustees was defeated at the last election," he quipped.

Fred Barton On Executive

Fred Barton, advertising manager of The Intelligencer has been elected a director of the Ontario Provincial Dailies Association.

He joins seven other new directors elected at the association's annual meeting in Toronto Friday.

Life Goes On

The tendency in these days of political unrest — in Quebec and Northern Ireland for example — is for the rest of us to feel that these regions are falling apart.

Yet even in the midst of turmoil, which in any event is invariably of an isolated or localized nature, the State continues to function. It does so (in democratic countries in any event, free as they are from military coup style eruptions) because the vast majority of people are law-abiding and continue to function as workers, professionals and creative people of every description.

In recent publications from both regions we see evidence of this. The Quebec government has produced an attractive booklet, its cover showing many facets of provincial life, in color pictures, and packed with information.

We hear a great deal about industrialists being shy of Quebec because of recent events there. The booklet however, seems to reflect otherwise, although figures quoted are for a period before the rise of the FLQ threat and they do indicate a slight decline in investment which nevertheless is less proportionately than that of the country at large.

Quebec has more than half-a-million wage-earners and approximately 18 per cent of the country's total investment. Interim data for 1968 show industrial investment of $587.3 million, a 2.9 per cent decrease, as compared with 12.5 decrease for Canada as a whole and 17.3 per cent for Ontario. Industrial investment rose in twelve of the 18 major groups of industries and the only notable slowdowns in new money occurred in the food and beverages sectors and in pulp, paper and related products.

Significant is the extent of the Quebec government's trade contacts abroad, including offices in London, Paris, Milan, Dusseldorf, and in the United States: Boston, Chicago, Dallas and Los Angeles.

In Northern Ireland too, there is more to the country than the violence and extremism of a minority of Protestants and Catholics, not to mention the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

This year, to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the State, Northern Ireland will feature a 37-acre Expo-style exhibition in Belfast which will be the biggest in the United Kingdom for 20 years. There will be emphasis on the shipping and aircraft industries, as well as the famous linen enterprise and the man-made fibre industry which is the largest in Europe. Since the war 270 new industries have been established and Minister of Commerce Roy Bradford recently visited Sweden, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland and Luxemburg on his third industrial promotion tour in 12 months.

Sport is highly organized in Northern Ireland and the festival year will feature international soccer competition, amateur and professional golf, rugby, air rallies, motor racing and motor cycle events, athletics, hockey, tennis and badminton.

For both Quebec and Northern Ireland there is nowhere to go but up and away from the harrowing events of the past and it is through the genius of its peoples, as reflected by activities such as have been described here, that a brighter future will be ensured for both.

Northern Pressures

We have heard it said that people who settle in our northern regions — in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, regions which are developing more swiftly than we know — adapt to such an extent that interest in the "outside" fades and all of a sudden they are confirmed northern dwellers.

Whatever the truth of this, we have just encountered a contrary view. About this time, any time in fact until as late as April, northerners (and we are speaking of course of the far north) fall prey to deep depression. It was described in a recent CBC news program and it is a kind of hysteria brought on by isolation and the claustrophobic life of the region. It apparently affects womenfolk in particular, closeted as they are in their homes most of the day, and it has led to a compensating reliance on alcohol which makes the per capita consumption one of the highest in Canada.

Such an image of northern life is at odds with another we obtained from the program "This Land," on television recently. Apparently there is a surprising number of young people from all parts of Canada and they have their house parties, but these seemed mild enough. Still, while to the young the north is an adventure, to an older generation the aching solitude of it all, as one writer has so aptly described such emptiness, could well be too much.

But then, even the Eskimo hunters, accustomed to the hazards of the Arctic, fear a strange hallucinatory condition that can steal upon them amid the awesome expanse of ice and water and sky. Maybe this is akin to the other affliction.

So go north young man if you will — but be prepared!

Want to Know Where Your Taxes Are Going?

$ Overseas [Interest Free] and Aid to Foreign Radicals

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Perhaps it is the turning of the taxpayer worm, but Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has returned from Faraway Places and fun and games on foreign strands to hear it loud and clear that charity begins at home.

He is hearing it every day where he can scarcely ignore it — in the House of Commons — even if he tries to shrug it off with a turning of back, a fluttering of hands, and inattention too studied to be convincing.

It is the first time that spokesmen of the three Opposition parties — the Conservatives, New Democrats and Creditistes — have spoken out in unified chorus that, while it may make him feel like a king to distribute riches abroad, neglect of voters at home could transform him into an ex-Prime Minister.

Imagine, Tommy Douglas of the NDP — a born do-gooder speaking for a share-the-wealth party — lecturing him, more in sorrow than in anger, for "playing Santa Claus around the world," while being less than generous with his own people — 500,000 to 700,000 of them unemployed — at home.

And Oxford Conservative MP Wallace Nesbitt, who frequently speaks for his party on foreign affairs, ticking him off for squandering millions on strangers he will never see again, while penny-pinching with Canadians he sees almost every day.

Then, to make it unanimous among the Opposition, Creditiste foreign affairs spokesman MP Adrien Lambert adding up just the interest-free loans Canada has granted — apart from all other forms of foreign aid — to Ceylon, Indonesia, India and Pakistan in recent years to a total of nearly $500 million.

And asking how much, if anything, is being loaned by the federal Government interest - free to hard - pressed provinces and municipalities.

It was enough to give External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, a foreign aid-leader from away back and his Canadian Development Agency—the new and supposedly more acceptable name for the old External Aid Division—a departmental nervous breakdown.

Things have been rough with Mitchell Sharp since Himself returned from the Commonwealth Conference at Singapore.

Mr. Sharp and External Affairs have been spear-heading federal Government crusades in the name of Zambia, Tanzania, Uganda, Ghana and other central African republics against Rhodesia and South Africa. No Canadian arms sales to them, but lots of Canadian condemnation and Canadian pressure on Britain to sell them nothing for defence of the Indian Ocean and protection of the vital oil shipping lanes around the Cape of Good Hope.

Then, to further attempt the destruction of South Africa and Rhodesia, Mitchell Sharp and External Affairs have been helping to finance the hotly controversial Canadian University Services Overseas.

The student subsidy currently runs a tidy $3,200,000 some of which they want to use to finance African liberation movements dedicated to the destruction of South Africa and Rhodesia.

At CUSO's annual meeting last November, the resolution of support for "African Liberation" — some of them terrorist groups based in Zambia and Tanzania — passed by a two-thirds majority.

That $3,200,000 is not the only money that the helpless taxpayers put up for CUSO. Another $400,000 comes from those "Marches for Millions" in which Canadian children trudge miles for causes their parents perhaps do not realize include support for Cuba and African so-called freedom fighters.

But until the Prime Minister returned from Singapore, foreign aid and the pressuring of South Africa and Rhodesia were politically stylish, and parliamentarians, skittish about reaction of militant do-gooders, hesitated to question it.

Then all the Opposition parties spoke out at once.

And former Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker, who in his day as Prime Minister played the "naughty boy," as the London Daily Express described him when he was instrumental in South Africa leaving the Commonwealth, joined the chorus.

What, he asked Pierre Trudeau, had the Government done in objecting to French arms sales to South Africa when it had put such pressure on Britain.

In comparison, not much, conceded Mr. Trudeau.

Then, as if all this was not all so unwelcome to the Government in its sock-it-to-South Africa crusade, along comes Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Jean-Luc Pepin with the report that Canadian trade with that very country is topping an annual $100,000,000.

Just as if he had not been hearing all of the foreign aid static and put - Britain - in - her - place - on -South - African- defence talk, Jean-Luc Pepin proclaims that South Africa is Canada's fourth biggest customer — ahead of such countries, would you believe, as Japan, Germany and France.

Aw well, as Mitchell Sharp and his External Aiders and Zambia - Tanzanian crusaders are starting to find out, you can not win them all, all the time.

The Establishment—A Contrary View

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The lead article on the editorial page of The Intelligencer of Feb. 8, entitled "The Establishment" rightly suggested that "in the eyes of the dissident citizen," his or her dissatisfaction has to do with "money, power, position, and government".

Quite wrongly, I suggest, the writer intimates that "anyone" at odds with the various facets of established order feels free to demonstrate or even kill in the name of opposition. Such a suggestion is ridiculous and unfair to the thousands of people and organizations who demonstrete their displeasure with some segment of our established way of life. They do not resort to violence or abuse in invoking their right to avail themselves of an accepted democratic principle. Certainly they do not kill anyone.

The great majority of these dissidents are not seeking the destruction of our existing order — merely changes in it that will reflect a more equitable sharing of the wealth of the country, and the alleviation of some of the more shameful results of centuries of exploitation.

To admit to these sentiments does not make one a communist, socialist, or misfit of society. Neither does it imply they are lackies or fellow travellers of the radical groups that exist. Politicians and newsmen may find it convenient to categorize all concerned citizens into suitable slots according to the measure of their protest or dissidence, but such summary treatment neither reflects the truth nor abates the grievance.

The thing that is frequently overlooked is that most of the trouble in our society today stems not from the erosion of communism or socialism, but directly from the excesses of a capitalistic society in which the free enterprise system, with its motivation of profit, has caused such grinding poverty, unemployment and misery.

You will note that I do not blame the capitalist society as such, but the uncontrolled excesses of the system. The extremes of capitalism, socialism or right or left are equally repugnant to me. We seem to have left behind the happy "middle of the road" position in which we could benefit from the best aspects of each system.

It is not true to suggest that the unrest of our times can all be laid at the door of those with left leanings. Nor is it true to suggest that those people with socialistic sympathies are killers and subversives. Quite the contrary as a matter of fact.

The unfortunate fact of the matter is, that when you have enough people, whatever their political belief may be, who are, because of the system they are living under, denied their fair share of the things that make life worthwhile, then you have the fertile ground upon which your true radical or professional agitator can fan the flames of insurrection. The dissident factions of our society, if ignored long enough and allowed to grow big enough may well, because of the arrogant indifference of the Establishment, resort to a fait accompli under the leadership of radical extremists and we could end up with an excess of control as bad as the present uncontrolled excesses.

Until we get, in all levels of government, people who are truly representative of the majority of population, instead of the top heavy professional, industrial, business and wealthy clique that govern today we will make very little progress toward a permanent solution of our problems. In the meantime, it is interesting to note that most of our avowed supporters of the capitalistic system take time out on Sundays to go to church and with blatant hypocrisy profess to accept the teachings of the world's greatest socialist, Jesus Christ.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Without playing on words, we should have thought that our editorial made it clear that "anyone," in the context mentioned, referred specifically to the more extreme radical elements in society. As for political leanings — right, left or centre, or just anti-establishment, Mr. Hockley can have his pick. The "excess of control" which could result under an extremist regime is the very thing our editorial warned against; if "The Establishment" is so rotten, as Mr. Hockley suggests, how much worse off we would be under such a regime. This is a free country, with opportunities for all to succeed to one degree or another — even overcome "poverty, unemployment and misery". Mr. Hockley, like anyone else, is free to run for Parliament if he wishes, and put matters right according to his lights. If he should do so, we are sure he will not have a pistol or grenade in his belt!

Mr. Friesen explained to his listeners that the taypayers of Belleville did not contribute one cent to the maintenance of the hospital, but the city had to pay at the statute rate of $1.75 per day for indigent patients. "The hospital is owned by the Women's Christian Association of this city", said Mr. Friesen and "run by a board — six members appointed by the WCA, two from the City Council, one from the Belleville Medical Association and one from the County Medical Association". "In 1937 the hospital operated at a loss of $6,368 while in the past year, the institution was operated on a balanced budget", said the speaker.

Laotian Incursion Looks Like A Calculated Risk

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Incredible as it may seem, the expansion of the Indochina fighting to a third front—possibly the riskiest military operation of the war—has been greeted more in sorrow than in anger by congressional doves and other war critics.

Possibly the six-day, U.S.-ordered news blackout on manoeuvres, followed by the weekend flurry of activity has left them confused and wary.

Or, as the cynics would have it, they're waiting to see which way it goes in the next few days or even weeks before declaring themselves.

Whatever the reason, strongly expressed opinion on the war—and by Nixon administration supporters as well as the critics—has been uncommonly scarce and muted.

Certainly the fantastic drop in American casualties and the Nixon-ordered reduction in troops to an anticipated 280,000 by next spring from the high of 540,000 has deprived political critics of the support of an angry and restive public.

By comparison with the heat generated when Nixon moved the U.S. into Cambodia last spring, the new South Vietnamese adventure in Laos—with Americans flying shotgun—has passed with remarkable calm so far.

What is causing this unusual reticence among critics, some observers suggest, is that no one knows what might be the end result—whether the U.S. will get out of the war through expanding it or just get in deeper.

To military leaders, the invasion to knock out the North Vietnamese supply lines to the South is the culmination of an old dream—a sort of "last hurrah" in which the Americans in their last big operation before the bulk of their numbers return home give the South Vietnamese the needed push toward sustaining themselves when left alone.

If it works out that way, there won't be much the war critics can say since the U.S. has said in advance it will give only air cover for the operation, will not get involved in land fighting and indeed will not even go to the rescue if the South Vietnamese get in serious trouble.

Thus, on the surface, it would seem the Nixon administration has hedged its bets pretty well. If it comes off, no one will complain too much that he pretty brazenly hoodwinked Congress in skirting at least the intention of strictures it had laid down after the Cambodian affair.

He is limiting U.S. involvement to air power, as Congress ordered.

"But, like the Cambodian operation," writes Terence Smith in the New York Times, "the new campaign has raised fears that the Nixon administration is falling into the same trap that ensnarled its predecessor: the notion—still fashionable in the Pentagon—that the key to ending the war is to widen it."

Still, with a negotiated peace obviously impossible the way things are going—or not going—in the Paris talks, the new stance offers a compromise that apparently appeals to the administration.

Finding it impossible to go for a military victory, and refusing to be the first president to turn and run, the new broader but lower war profile offers Nixon the opportunity to at least walk out of the war backwards.

Confessions Private But--

Catholic Church Moves Slowly Toward Public Absolution

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — The Roman Catholic Church is moving cautiously toward public absolution of sins, reducing the emphasis on the confessional box and its whispered confidences between penitent and priest.

Experiments with new penitential services, where priests give general absolution (forgiveness) to their congregations after they have confessed privately, are already under way in The Netherlands and some United States dioceses

At the Vatican, authoritative sources admit that even more radical changes are under urgent discussion. These would permit priests in critically understaffed missionary dioceses to give similar mass absolutions without first hearing sins confessed.

But individual, secret confession, as introduced by the 16th century Council of Trent, will be generally retained by the church and there is no question of abolishing the confessional box, the sources insist.

The changes, limited in application, are being forced on the Vatican by modern conditions. They are not a concession to radical theologians who favor sweeping reform of the sacrament, possibly reducing it to public confession and absolution for whole congregations.

Two separate problems have forced the Vatican to listen to demands for change, and separate solutions are being sought for both, the sources said.

One is the critical shortage of missionary priests, whose numbers have not grown rapidly enough to keep pace with the millions of new converts to Roman Catholicism since the Second World War.

The other problem is the crisis through which the sacrament of confession is passing in the Western world, traditional stronghold of the church.

Partly because of the birth-control controversy and Pope Paul's ban on the use of artificial forms of contraception, growing numbers of North American and West European Catholics have been staying away from the confessional in recent years.

To counter this problem, certain bishops in Holland and the U.S. have, with tacit Vatican permission, tried to make confession more meaningful by introducing new absolution services which emphasize the community and social aspect of the sacrament.

These ceremonies, introduced during the last two years, include prayers and hymn-singing, after which the priest publicly grants absolution to the assembled congregation.

But, first, each penitent must have entered the confessional box to recite his sins privately to the priest. He receives a penance to perform, but absolution is delayed until the public gathering.

The Vatican has taken a wait-and-see attitude to such cautious reforms, begun on the initiative of individual bishops. The Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith—the department watching over purity of doctrine—has not intervened against them.

"We warn local bishops' conferences not to change the substance of confession, but we are not against communal absolution," a Vatican source said. "The Vatican does not intervene; it trusts the bishops' conferences."

If these experiments are judged successful, communal absolution ceremonies could become widespread as part of the modernization of the church.

Dennison Addresses Ministers

The regular meeting of the Belleville Ministerial Association had as guest speaker, William Dennison, proprietor of The Fish and Dove book store on Bridge Street.

Mr. Dennison spoke of the great influence of the written and the spoken word. He asserted that books that have a detrimental effect on building up a person's understanding of human relationships are readily available.

He expressed his hopes that books available through his store will have an equal drawing quality for their positive contents.

The Ministerial Association wholeheartedly upheld Mr. Dennison's goal, and agreed that the written word has as much power as the spoken word.

Quantity of Milk Glass Once Made in Hamilton

Of all the varieties of collectible glass, milk glass is the most readily recognized and the most reproduced on the market.

Milk glass was first known in 18th century England and Europe as a base for enamelling to imitate Chinese glass and porcelain. It became popular in plain white after the middle of the 19th century when white ironstone china was also popular. It was first generally known as milk-white glass, white enamel glass, opaque white, opaque, opal, opalescent and alabaster and may be referred to as such by dealers. By 1870 it was produced in quantity and production continued until well into this centurey.

A great deal of milk glass was made at Hamilton, Ontario, at the Burlington Glass Works. The company was by far the largest glass producer in Canada and had connections with other glass houses in Canada, especially Nova Scotia.

Identifiable Canadian glass commands premium prices and authentication is still going on. Much thought to have been American has been shown to be Canadian. An archeological dig was carried out at the Burlington Glass Works and the findings published in Gerald Stevens Canadian Glass 1825-1925. The results of subsequent archeological digs have been published in the Canadian Collector, in a series of articles, one series by John Sheeler, and one series by Janet Holmes.

Milk glass embraces colored milk glass in blue, caramel, yellow, green, lilac, black (which is really dark purple), amethyst and a dirty grey-white known to American dealers as clambroth. Other colors may be seen but they are rarely antique. Modern milk glass is usually a clear chalk white with no flaws. Old pieces are usually the color of skim milk, with a greyish-blue cast at the edges.

The most sought after milk glass pieces are covered animal dishes. The commonest are chickens on nests. In the main these were not made in Canada. Many were sold originally containing potted meat, candy, mustard, chocolate custard powders or other food, in much the same way as peanut butter is sold in milk glass mugs today. Most covered dishes cost pennies when new.

There are literally hundreds of varieties of covered milk glass animal dishes. The most popular, covered chicken, also has the most variants and is the one most widely reproduced. The miniature chicken on a nest, about 2½" long is worth $55 as an antique. Reproductions are less than $2 retail. Antique full size chickens on nests sell for $20 or more. Reproductions wholesale at $2.50.

There are a number of handbooks on milk glass, one by Ruth Webb Lee and one by E. M. Belknap, both American. They list modern reproductions. Any milk glass buyer would be advised to consult books before paying anything more than $10 for a piece of milk glass.

On the other hand a milk glass dish with a boar's head with red glass eyes, which has not been reproduced is worth $240. Cosmos, a pattern made in Hamilton, is listed at $125 for a pitcher in the American market.

World Tour Is Working Holiday For Nurse

OTTAWA (CP) — A nine-week, round-the-world trip with all expenses paid seems an ideal way to spend a summer vacation, but for Moria Moffett it's a working holiday.

The attractive blonde nurse considers the tour an extension of her regular job of teaching nursing administration at the College of Nursing in Brisbane, Australia. The college has its summer vacation in January and February.

During her travels, paid for by a Winston Churchill scholarship, Miss Moffett hopes to pick up ideas of ways "to make better use of staff to help solve the nursing shortage in Australia." She spent nine days in Canada this wintre.

In Saskatoon she saw University Hospital's system where a nurse is assigned a specific unit consisting of a certain number of rooms to look after.

This enables the nurse to be closer to the care area, she said, rather than be bogged down with administrative duties.

She found the Toronto Quo Vadis Nursing School for training women over 30 unusual.

"In talking with these people I found them just so happy and enthusiastic." She didn't think such a system would work in Australia because it is not really accepted there that married women stay in the working force.

"One thing that intrigued me is that most of the leading women in nursing in North America are married," she said. This wasn't so in Australia. Part of their nursing shortage could be attributed to the fact that most nurses there don't work after marriage.

"And another thing — you'd never have a nurse with a master's degree in Australia."

Miss Moffett liked the idea of the ward management system such as the one at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children.

A non-nurse does administration work in each ward and lets the nurses dedicate their time to patient care. She said this would be a good method of making better use of nursing manpower in Australia, where students do the nursing and trained nurses do administrative and supervisory work.

She doesn't support the idea of training nurses to be doctors' assistants, which seems to be a growing trend in North America.

St. Andrew's Holds Valentine Tea

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church hall was decorated in keeping with the Valentine theme with gay red hearts and cupids for the tea held on Wednesday afternoon. Conveners were Mrs. C. Huiser and Mrs. A. R. Kingston.

Mrs. W. Clendenan, Mrs. L. Sutherland, Miss L. Burnside and Miss F. Mathews greeted the guests at the entrance, while the hostesses for the event were Mrs. G. Barager and Mrs. E. Pigden.

The attractive tea table was centred with a colorful arrangement of red carnations and white spider 'mums. The indvidual guest tables were equally attractive with red cloths centred with red and white doilies bearing hearts and cupids with red heart candies in centre. Those pouring tea were Mrs. D. Murphy, Mrs. R. Jones, Mrs. H. McKay and Mrs. E. Fraser.

Others assisting in the tea room were Mrs. V. Weir, Mrs. H. Arnott, Mrs. B. Sheffield, Mrs. W. Marner, Mrs. M. Barlow, Mrs. H. Kempster, Mrs. S. Hay, Mrs. K. Fargy, and Mrs. R. White. Also assisting were Mrs. E. Shier, Mrs. B. Sine, Mrs. H. Brooks, Miss N. Bell, Mrs. M. Haslip, Mrs. J. Craig, Mrs. M. Armstrong, Mrs. A. Murray, Mrs. A. Harris and Mrs. G. Bennet.

Treasurers were Mrs. G. Miller and Mrs. F. Parsons.

Wares from the various sales tables were available and these included: home bake table convened by Mrs. D. Kane and Mrs. H. Yorke; candy table by Mrs. P. Bondy; and a miscellaneous table by Mrs. W. Mantle.

A LANGUAGE OF LOVE

"We get it there with loving care." — A Florist Association motto.

* * *

Yes, I admit cards, chocolates, perfume are traditional Valentine remembrances, but the original ones, surely were floral," declares an enthusiastic local horticulturalist.

"How do you mean?"

"Just thumb through a flower catalogue. You'll notice that some plant and seed packets might be used for a special Valentine remembrance — for their name has the language of love. Now doesn't that suggest . . ."

"Such as, for example?

"How about "Bleeding Heart," which is a favorite for sentiment. So graceful and attractive, too, with arching stems hung with pink heart pendants."

"That's true."

"Or that good hanging plant "Lovejoy" with dark green leaves and red flowers."

"You spoke of seed packets for a Valentine gift?"

"Yes, such as "Heartsease". And there is "Love-grove" a pretty annual that grows six inches tall, covered with blue, inch-wide flowers, perfect for rock gardens. Then, there is "Hearts and Honey", a morning glory that has feathery foliage and pink flowers which change from pink-orange to rose-pink during the day. What's more, this morning-glory stays open all day, instead of closing in the sunshine."

"Well, you are right about the names as language of love. . ."

"Don't forget "Love-in-a-Mist". Sow the seed in the spring and you'll soon have light blue flowers. Or sow the bright "Love-lies-bleeding", famed for its brilliant foliage. Also there is "Love vine", "Loveplant". . ."

"We are convinced! Though somehow a Valentine flower ought to be a red, red rose."

It was thus, we learned, that while the red rose may be the favorite for Valentine's Day, it is the general favorite rose color in Europe and Japan. But here at home, pink is the favorite, and accounts for more than one-third of the total sales of the Conard-Pyle Company, the largest rose grower on the Eastern Seaboard. (Which company, by the way, pays an annual rent of one red rose to a descendant of William Penn's family to honor a "clause in an old land deed.")!

"What of the yellow roses?"

"Although red roses have been world known for centuries, the yellow rose is relatively new, and appeared in France for the first time about 60 years ago."

While shopping, we note all our florist shops' windows have turned into lovely floral Valentines, and Mrs. William Rowland of Templer's tells us there are various special floral arangements available for Valentine's Day, one most appropriate for a new baby's arrival, named "Love Bundle".

Counsellor Can Help Explain His Behaviour

By DORIS CLARK

A young woman who had been married for three years complained to the marriage counsellor that she and her husband were fighting all the time; that his criticisms were devastating. He was irritable with their little girl, who was actually afraid of him.

The only time he was half-way decent to her was when he wanted sex. Then he wondered why she couldn't be as loving as he wanted her to be.

She sat back and waited for the counsellor to hand her the right psychological pill. Instead, he told her she herself would have to decide what to do. All he could do in the begining was help her find reasons for what was happening.

Perhaps some ideas and habits carried over from childhood were behind the clashing behavior. Understanding these things was the first step towards making a change.

The initial, tough part is to try to see ourselves as others see us.

Dear Doris: African violets grown on your north or east window sill (for best results) or under one of the two fluorescent tube (one cool white, one pale pink, not red) indoor garden fixtures with a tray which should be covered with small stones (kept moist for humidity) can provide hours of pleasure. Also excellent therapy for women and many men, to counteract boredom for replace more physical activity.

Doris, I wonder if they know about the African Violet Society of Canada (coast to coast) and our quarterly magazine Chatter, filled with news on violet culture and activities of many local groups. Sally A

Dear Sally: I'm sure your message will get some new Green Thumbs operating. I will be glad to send details about magazine and AVSC to anyone inquiring.

Dear Doris: I am really leaving. My old man told me I have to smarten up and "Stop acting like a crazy teen-ager." I said I'd go and he said, "Go! So much the better."

A friend of mine said I should give him a warning first because she knew someone who stopped her father this way. It didn't work with me. Her father porobably loved her and mine doesn't.

Is it dangerous for a girl to hitch-hike across the country? Is 17 old enough? I have no money for the train fare.

I also found out I am illegitmate. Can I find out who my real father is? Is it OK for parents to spank a 17-year-old? — Home Leaver

Dear Home Leaver: Let's be practical. Travel, and living on your own, takes money — which you haven't got. But life won't always be like this.

Your father does love you, but the communication gap is immense. He thinks he has to make you walk the straight and narrow of his own virtuous youth.

Better find an older person you can unload to, and set yourself a date for independence, a job of your own and the right to courteous treatment. Finish school first.

For the answers to your other questions, write again, this time enclosing your proper name and address.

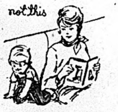
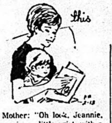
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Jeannie, sit still and listen to the story. This is a nice story about all kinds of farm animals."



Mother: "Oh look, Jeannie, there is a little girl with a kitty. Can you find the little girl's nose and her eyes!"

Even a 1-year-old can be introduced to the pleasures of books, but a child that age won't pay attention to a story for long. Just looking at the pictures to find recognizable objects will hold her interest and be more fun.

Letter to Teacher A Cry for Help

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The problem isn't mine — it's the whole family's. My mother thinks my brother Bob (age 12) needs a psychiatrist because he failed in every subject. Only last week the teacher told Mom that Bob is one of the smartest kids she has seen in all her years of teaching, but he is "unmotivated." On top of failing everything, Bob wrote a note to the teacher the day after he got his report card. He told her he hates his whole family including me. I'm 14 years old and I always thought Bob was my friend. Do you think my brother needs a psychiatrist? He seems normal to me, although he is quite lazy. Thank you. — BIG SIS.

DEAR SIS: A kid who fails every subject and writes his teacher a note saying he hates his family needs outside help. His problem goes deeper than laziness. He has a desire to fail which is probably related to his parents' eagerness for him to succeed.

Bob's letter to the teacher was a cry for help. He was unleashing pent-up hostility. I hope your parents see to it that he gets counseling. He needs it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A man with whom I have been very friendly (we work in the same office) invited me to his daughter's wedding. Mr. R. told me I could bring my boyfriend, but if we had other plans it would be O.K. and to let him know.

As it turned out, we did have other plans. I sent a gift and thought no more about it. The wedding was yesterday. This morning when Mr. R. saw me in the office he gave me a very cold hello. After three hours of sub-zero treatment, he really let me have it. He said my not showing up for his daughter's wedding proved that I was a phony friend.

Did I do something horrible, or is he the phony friend for not being understanding? — PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER.

DEAR PHILLY: The quality of our relationships is shaped by the choices we make. The fact that you did not state in your letter what your boyfriend had planned instead, leads me to believe that you could have attended the wedding had you wanted to. Your co-worker obviously had this feeling, also. In my opinion you made a poor choice and it has cost you a friend.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband has been seeing a married woman with three children for two years. I had no idea what was going on. Ed told me, out of a clear blue sky, that he needed to live away from home for a while because the kids made him nervous. The following week I caught Ed with this woman. He confessed everything, begged me to forgive him and moved back home.

A few days later Ed became despondent and told me the whole sordid story. He asked me to give up my job and stay home with him because he was afraid of what he might do to himself if he were left alone. (Ed works the night shift and I work days.) I stayed home for three weeks and listened to him repeat every detail of his love affair over and over until I thought I'd lose my mind. Yesterday the woman telephoned to say she has confessed everything to her husband and he has forgiven her. She ended by saying, "Now, please let me alone."

Ed is very depressed. He has threatened to shoot her and himself. I'm afraid to leave him alone. What should I do? — M.M.M.

DEAR M.M.M.: Talk to your doctor and take his advice. If your husband needs to be committed, sign the papers for your sake as well as for his. And I hope both you and Ed go back to work at once — on the same shift if possible.

Do It Yourself Lunches for Boys and Girls

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Dear Grandma: I am going to be playing floor hockey at school soon and will need to take a lunch. Mum wondered if you could give me some lunch ideas that I could prepare myself. Maybe some other boys and girls will be glad too to see your answer in the paper. Danny, age 9, in grade 4.

ANSWER: Danny you little rascal! You even enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Your letter sent me rushing to the kitchen and here are some lunch ideas.

GENERAL RULES: 1) Make the lunch the night before. 2) Be sure butter or margarine is out of refrigerator to soften and spread easily. 3) Train yourself to use whole wheat bread. 4) Ask your mother to buy you a lunch box with a small vacuum for your milk. 5) Add one piece of washed and dried fruit such as apple, tangelo or banana but be sure to wrap it in double paper napkin in cold weather to prevent freezing while you walk to school. 6) At 9 years of age you may want only three-quarters of a two-slice sandwich for your lunch. 7) You may prefer a crunchy peanut butter sandwich instead of the cheese I have suggested below. 8) If you make all of your sandwiches at one time, put all sandwich bags in a larger plastic bag and freeze in freezer. They will thaw by the time you eat them for lunch.

SANDWICHES

1) Egg (enough for 2 lunches)

Put 2 eggs on to cook in small saucepan in cold water to barely cover. Put on lid, turn heat on high, bring to boil and reduce heat to simmer for 10 min. Flood with cold water. Break shell all over by cracking egg against counter. Peel off shell. Slice egg into small bowl and add 2 tbsps. mayonnaise and 1 tbsp. green pickle relish, ¼ tsp. salt. Mash very well. Place 4 slices of bread on board and butter 2. Spread other 2 thickly with egg filling. Cover with buttered slices. Cut into quarters and slip into 2 sandwich bags and slip a note inside you can see saying "EGG".

2) Cheese (enough for 1 lunch)

Spread 2 slices fresh whole wheat bread with mayonnaise. Cover thickly with cheese — process or Cheddar or white Baumert. Sprinkle with about 1 tbsp. chopped green onion or broken nuts — peanuts, walnuts, or almonds. Put on top slice. With long sharp knife cut into quarters. Put in sandwich bag and label "CHEESE".

3) Salmon (enough for 2 lunches)

Open a ¼-lb. can salmon. Tip off (or drink) liquid. Tip salmon into bowl. Add 1 tsp. mayonnaise and 1 tsp. green relish and mix very well with fork and break it up. Place 3 slices of bread on bread board. Butter 1½ of them. On bare sides spread salmon. Put buttered slices on top and cut in quarters. Put 3 quarters in each of 2 sandwich bags and label "SALMON".

This gives you an egg sandwich for Monday, cheese or peanut butter for Tuesday, salmon for Wednesday, egg for Thursday and salmon for Friday.

PCs Join NDP in Demanding National Environment Standards

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs joined with the NDP Friday in the Commons to battle for an amendment to the government's reorganization bill.

Proposed by Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West), the amendment would add the word "national" to a clause directing the proposed department of the enviroment to achieve "objectives of standards relating to environmental quality, or to control pollution." The Commons arose for the weekend without voting on the amendment.

Mr. Harding said he wanted the environment minister to set national pollution standards.

But C. M. Drury, president of the treasury board, said it is the government view that the change would in fact narrow the new minister's powers.

On Monday, the Commons debates a Conservative motion condemning the government's economic and agricultural policies.

As well as setting up an environment department, the reorganization bill would allow the prime minister to establish five new ministries of state for specific purposes and appoint an unlimited number of ministers of stat to aid other cabinet ministers.

The bill has been getting detailed study in committee of the whole for several days.

All MPs who spoke affirmed the need for federal powers to establish national pollution standards.

Mr. Drury said that "the government highly favors the creation of national standards."

But the amendment would restrict the minister's power to seek international pollution agreements on pollution along with regional regulations.

Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) said the amendment was necessary to establish federal leadership in the pollution fight and permit the government to set and enforce national standards.

Gerald Baldwin, Conservative House leader, called it essential for the federal government to stake its claim over jurisdiction in pollution control.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) said that without the amendment there was the spectre of anarchy in setting pollution regulations, with every province and municipality free to set its own.

Louis Comeau (PC—South Western Nova) recalled that Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, who will head the environment department, had stressed the need for national standards.

In Monday's debate, MPs will return to the economic issues that have been featured in the debates of the past week.

The Conservative motion attacks the "government's lack of leadership which has humiliated the disadvantaged, dislocated the finances of provinces and municipalities and caused injury and decline to our rural communities. . . ."

Rural areas were "already seriously damaged by the government's failure to provide adequate agricultural policies."

In debate on the reorganization bill, Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) urged the government to hire Indians to carry out environmental programs.

They had unique skills in environmental problems and need the employment that such programs could bring.

Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) said he hoped the government's pollution plans were not just window-dressing and that adequate funds would be supplied to make an effective attack.

Bank of Canada Cuts Rate Quarter Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada Friday acknowledged foreign reductions in interest rates and a steady decline in the rates of interest charged in the Canadian money market by dropping the bank rate to 5¾ from six per cent.

The change goes into effect Monday.

The bank rate, which governs interest charged by the federal bank on its rare loans to commercial banks and investment dealers, is primarily looked upon as a reflection of the prevailing interest-rate situation in financial markets and money lenders.

The reduction, the second in three months, indicates slightly easier credit but does not necessarily mean there will be changes in the interest rates charged for housing or chartered banks.

Rather, it shows a delayed reaction to dropping interest rates in other countries, primarily the United States. The U.S. rate, at six per cent last Nov. 10, was the highest it had been for about 40 years.

But the U.S. rate dropped four times in the last three months. It was set last at an even five per cent Jan. 19.

Canada had maintained its higher rate during the last three months mainly as a safeguard against inflation. The fact that Friday's reduction was only one-quarter of one percentage point, rather than the usual slice of one-half of one percentage point, indicates that the bank still fears giving the inflationary horse too much rein.

In a brief statement, Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, said the action was taken "primarily in the light of the recent reduction in interest abroad."

As well, he noted an "appreciable reduction" in market rates of interest in Canada during the past few months.

The charge for day loans from chartered banks, steady at 5.25 per cent since the beginning of the year, fell to an average closing rate of 5.15 per cent.

U.S. Discount Rate Cut Again

NEW YORK (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board cut its discount rate Friday for the fifth time in three months in a move with only slight, if any, stimulating impact on the United States economy.

The board shaved the rate from five per cent to 4¾ per cent, a decline anticipated in the market with short-term interest rates still plunging.

Nevertheless, the rate, which the Federal Reserve charges its member banks for borrowing to maintain reserves, slipped to the lowest level since March 15, 1968.

The change did reconfirm the trend for easier money, a situation vital to President Nixon's plans for expanding the economy this year.

Quebec Wing of Federal PCs May Form Independent Bloc

OTTAWA (CP) — Sources in the Quebec wing of the federal Progressive Conservative party indicate that formation of "an independent bloc" is being considered unless the Quebec wing wins a few concessions from the federal party.

Such an independent block would support the federal party under the leadership of Robert Stanfield, but only if it was granted more autonomy in representing the aims of Quebec conservatives and if the federal party clarified its position regarding the status of Quebec.

A reliable source said these demands were contained in a recent letter to Mr. Stanfield from Fernand Alie, president of the Quebec wing.

Mr. Alie and a spokesman for Mr. Stanfield acknowledged that a letter did change hands but each declined to discuss the details.

Mr. Alie said the position of the federal party regarding the constitution is not clear.

He said Quebec Conservatives favor a decentralized federalism which will respect the aims and aspirations of Quebecers.

In noting that the separatist Parti Quebecois had expressed an interest in fielding candidates in a federal election, Mr. Alie said that in some respects the aims of the two parties are similar.

"We have fundamentally the same objectives," he said. "We say a federal state is formed of a group of sovereign states."

Roch LaSalle, MP for Joliette and one of four Conservative MPs from Quebec, said formation of an independent Quebec group would be the ideal instrument for Quebecers who oppose the "centralist policy" of Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal government.

Daley Gets Second Sabre Shutout

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For Buffalo Sabres, the chance to blank the opposition has been anything but frequent in their first season in the National Hockey League.

One of the lowest-scoring teams in the league, the expansion Sabres are also one of the teams having the most goals scored against them. In their 55 games played since entering the NHL this season, the Sabres have allowed 206 goals. Only Detroit Red Wings, with 207 goals scored against them in 54 games, have allowed more.

But Friday night the Sabres shut out their opposition for the second time this season, blanking California Golden Seals 3-0 in one of two NHL games scheduled.

The win moved the Sabres into fifth place in the Eastern Division, one point ahead of Vancouver Canucks and two points in front of the Red Wings who were defeated 5-3 by the Canucks in the other game.

The first shut out for the Sabres came last Dec. 6 when they stopped Minnesota North Stars 1-0 with Roger Crozier in goal. Friday night it was Joe Daley's turn as he kicked out 26 shots for his third shutout in his NHL career.

Daley, a Winnipeg native, had a long minor league career before catching on briefly with Pittsburgh Penguins in the 1968-69 season. He played about nine games last season with the Penguins and also with Baltimore Clippers of the American League. He was claimed by the Sabres on waivers from Pittsburgh in the NHL draft last June.

Eddie Shack, who celebrated his 34th birthday Thursday, scored the opening goal for the Sabres on a power play early in the first period and about three minutes later Donnie Marshall made it 2-0 by steering Phil Goyette's goalmouth pass past California goalie Gary Smith. Floyd Smitt scored the other Buffalo goal while the Sabres were shorthanded.

Goalie Jim Rutherford, who kept Detroit Red Wings in the game with Vancouver until late in the third period when the score was tied 3-3, kicked out 43 shots. But the Canucks scored two unanswered goals late in the game for the win before a standing room-only crowd of 15,570.

Mike Corrigan paced the Canucks with two goals while Bobby Schmautz, Rosaire Paiement and Andre Boudrias scored one each. Tim Ecclestone, Mike Robitaille and Nick Libett scored for Detroit.

In games tonight, the Seals meet the Canadiens in Montreal. Los Angeles Kings play the Maple Leafs at Toronto. New York Rangers are at St. Louis against the Blues. Chicago Black Hawks are at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia Flyers play at Minnesota.

Sunday, Boston Bruins play in Toronto in an afternoon game. St. Louis is at New York, Los Angeles at Detroit, Philadelphia at Buffalo, Vancouver at Chicago and Pittsburgh at Minnesota.

Ottawa Forces Tie For First

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa 67s regained a tie for first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Friday night with a 7-3 home-ice win over sixth-place Hamilton Red Wings.

In other games Friday Kitchener Rangers slid past London Knights 5-3 at London to move within one-point of the seventh-place Knights and Montreal Junior Canadiens came from behind to nip Niagara Falls Flyers 5-4, at Niagara Falls.

The Red Wings finished their game at Ottawa Friday with defenceman Mike Neely tending goal for the last 38 seconds as regular goalies Mike Veisor and Merle Tegahmagabow were injured. Neely successfully faced one shot.

Three of the Kitchener-London goals came in the closing four minutes of play as London's Randy Osburn forged a 3-3 tie only to see Kitchener bounce back with two goals in 63 seconds.

Richard Martin led the Jnior Canadiens at Niagara Falls with his 50th and 51st goals of the season, as his mates waited until the third period to turn the tide in their favor.

Woodstock Win Third of Year

It took almost seven minutes of overtime but last-place Woodstock Athletics retained enough power to overcome Owen Sound Crescents 6-5 Friday night in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action.

It was the team's third victory this season with Doug McGowan counting the winner.

In other games, Orillia Terriers dumped Barrie Flyers 5-1 and in an almost identical performance Kingston Aces squashed Belleville Mo-Hawks 6-1.

In Woodstock, Gene McLaren paced the Athletics with two goals while Jerry Harmer, Gerry Harrigan and Mark Bezzin and McGowan scored the others.

Mayo Paquette scored a pair of goals for the visitors and Mike Cain, Gary Vaughn and Paul Domm added the others.

The teams were tied 3-3 after the opening period and Woodstock scored the only goal in the middle frame.

With only 35 seconds remaining in the game, Woodstock led 5-4 but Owen Sound's Paquette tied the score after the team pulled its goalie in favor of an extra forward, forcing overtime.

Owen Sound remains in seventh place, 18 points ahead of last-place Woodstock.

In Orillia, the teams were scoreless in the first period but the Terriers pulled ahead 2-1 after 40 minutes.

Mike Draper, Paul Laurent, Dave Nicholishen, Gary Milroy and Jim O'Brien scored the Orillia goals.

Pat Monohan replied with the Barrie marker.

Orillia and Barrie remain in second and third place, respectively.

Fourth Man In

Captain Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens holds the stick and puck which made him the fourth National Hockey League player ever to score 500 goals in regular season play. The big goal came at 6:42 of the second period and was his third of the game again Minnesota North Stars Beliveau also picked up an assist as Montreal won 6-2. (CP Wirephoto)

Games Get Serious Today

SASKATOON (CP) — After a low-key kickoff Friday that climaxed in a roar of fireworks at the official opening, the second Canada Winter Games swings into what it is all about today.

Between now and Sunday, Feb. 22, more than 2,100 athletes from Canada's 10 provinces and two territories will take part in 16 winter sporting activities, including skiing and hockey.

Visiting dignitaries, including Prime Minister Trudeau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and John Diefenbaker former Conservative leader welcomed the athletes during the day, before taking part in the opening ceremonies at night.

Today gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded in six of 10 events scheduled.

Speedskaters will seek medals in four classes, weightlifting four, figure skating four, judo two, synchronized swimming and fencing, one apiece.

Sunday's medal events include six in speedskating, five in weightlifting, four in free skating, two in both synchronized swimming and judo and one in fencing. Badminton, basketball, boxing and curling plete the program.

Basketball held the spotlight Friday with the start of round-robin play in both men's and women's divisions.

In women's play, Alberta nipped Nova Scotia 61-55, Manitoba throttled the Yukon 90-28, British Columbia tripped Quebec 95-48, Ontario rapped the Northwest Territories 87-17, Saskatchewan defeated Newfoundland 73-28 and New Brunswick handled Prince Edward Island 103-28.

Three men's games reached the 100-point mark with Quebec taking British Columbia 108-77, Ontario defeating N.W.T. 20-32 and Manitoba drubbing Yukon 108-28.

In other men's games, Saskatchewan edged Newfoundland 56-52, Nova Scotia tripped Alberta 78-71 and New Brunswick downed P.E.I. 95-47.

Fresh Blanket For Cup Slopes

MONT STE. ANNE, Que. (CP) — The going was expected to be rough for the early starters today in the women's two-run special slalom events at the Bank of Montreal International World Cup ski race.

The weather office here predicted Friday night that close to six inches of new snow would blanket the 1,300-foot course by the scheduled 9 a.m. EST start of the initial descent.

The second run was scheduled two hours later and the final run of the men's giant slalom slated for the early afternoon, promised no better conditions.

High winds and blowing snow were predicted to replace the fog that had shrouded the upper stretches of the course and hampered the first leg of the men's event Friday.

Two of the girls will be trying for their third World Cup special slalom win this season.

Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., who wound up in a 16th place finish in Friday's giant slalom, previously won the slalom discipline at Montafon, Austria, and Val d'Isere, France, picking up 50 of her 64 World Cup points in these two races.

French star Britt Lafforgue, one of the many brilliant French performers here, will be trying for a third special slalom win this season as well.

Miss Lafforgue currently stands sixth in World Cup points with 90, 44 fewer than Anne-Marie Proell of Austria.

Miss Proell took over first place Friday after the women's giant slalom and leads Michele Jacot of France by a single point.

The French women, led by Isabelle Mir, took the three top spots in Friday's women's giant slalom. Jacqueline Rouvier and Francoise Macchie finished second and third ahead of Miss Proell.

And with the men, it will be another French performer aiming at a triple. Patrick Russel has won giant slaloms at Val d'Isere and Adelbonden. There have been only four giant slaloms this season until the event here and Russel has been second in the two he hasn't won.

Russel wound up in ninth place in Friday's initial leg. His time was two minutes, 12.91 seconds while Bernhard Russi of Switzerland, who finished first, registered a time of 2:11.32.

Austrian Werner Bleiner followed Russi by 20-100th of a second while another Swiss racer, Edmund Bruggman, was 1-10th of a second off Bleiner's pace at 2:11.62.

Bunched sufficiently close in between to make it anyone's race were Henri Duvillard of France, Adolf Roesti of Switzerland, Roger Rossat-Mignod of France, Gustavo Thoeni of Italy and Andrzej Bachleda of Poland.

Thoeni led the men's World Cup points standings with 110 points coming here.

Jean-Noel Ougert came here three points behind the Italian but won't challenge today as he and veteran Austrian Karl Schranz were eliminated from today's second run.

Schranz failed to complete Friday's first descent while Ougert was disqualified.

The three-day weekend meet winds up Sunday with two runs of a special slalom for men scheduled for 10 a.m. and noon.

While the men giant slalom events covered a 6,800-foot course with 88 gates and a vertical drop of 1,840 feet, the special slalom course will measure 1,620 feet, dropping 675 feet and employing 65 to 70 gates.

Knicks Still On Skids

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Knicks and Atlanta Hawks riding National Basketball Association elevators in opposite directions, passed each other and kept right on going Friday night.

The stumbling Knicks had their losing streak extended to six games, dropping a 125-116 decision to the rampaging Hawks, who took their fifth straight. Atlanta has won seven of the last nine and New York has dropped seven of its last nine.

Elsewhere in the NBA Friday night, Detroit Pistons tagged Philadelphia '76ers 118-109. Boston Celtics topped Baltimore Bullets 113-109 in overtime, Phoenix Suns dumped Cleveland Cavaliers 114-105, Chicago Bulls routed Los Angeles Lakers 107-88, Portland Trailblazers slammed Seattle SuperSonics 137-125 and San Francisco Warriors bounced Cincinnati Royals 133-119.

The Hawks, trying to catch Cincinnati and a playoff berth in the NBA's Central Division, got a combined 94 points from Walt Bellamy, Pete Maravich and Lou Hudson to wear down the Willis Reed-less Knicks. Reed remained in New York to rest his ailing left knee.

The Knicks, leaders in the Atlantic Division, lost no ground despite the defeat. Pursuing Philadelphia was knocked off by Detroit.

Hamilton Site of '72 Grey Cup

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League, in one of the final decisions at its annual meeting, has decided to enter the motion picture field.

The League's four-day meeting ended Friday with the executive committee rejecting a Winnipeg proposal to enter a lottery, approving changes in the injury-reserve list and possible changes in the individual-award system of voting.

Clubs now have the option of leaving a player on the injury list for the full 30 days or returning him to the roster after four games.

The CFL also is investigating the possibility of having the Football Reporters of Canada become the sole voters both for the individual trophies presented annually and for the Schenley awards. The step could eliminate the current dilemma of one player winning the trophy for the most valuable player in his conference, but another player being selected as the Schenley nominee.

Commissioner Jake Gaudaur told a news conference the league accepted his proposal to "venture cautiously into the motion picture field."

"This could be a very big potential field," Gaudaur said.

"The league stands to benefit both through exposure and the development of a new source of revenue."

The commissioner said the films would be aimed at television, with cassette companies already preparing attachments to make film cassettes playable through television sets.

Although the products was not on the market, it was expected, in the preliminary stages, to be available by the end of the year.

The commissioner also said the league, which has sold rights to film of 20 CFL games from the 1970 season to a United States cable company for distribution in that country this year, now is considering the possibility of making live films of the games available for the U.S.

The annual meetings produced little new. Hamilton was confirmed as the site of the 1972 Grey Cup, letters of inquiry for franchises were received from groups in London, Ont., and Windsor-Detroit and all rules recommended by the rules committee were given formal approval.

Avery Under Fire

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Willy Schaeffler, head coach of the United States Alpine ski team, said Friday the International Olympic Committee should be more liberal about professionalism but the International Ski Federation should be tougher about amateurism.

Schaeffler gave his views in an interview against a background of controversy between Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the IOC, and Marc Hodler of Switzerland, president of FIS.

Brundage contends that skiers who make money from their sport by appearing in advertisements or using a particular manufacturer's gear are guilty of professionalism and should be barred from Olympic competition.

Hodler argues that training is so long, arduous and expensive that athletes must be permitted to make up for lost time and income.

Schaeffler is here with a small American Alpine team—two men and a girl—for international winter sports week, the Pre-Olympics.

He said Brundage and IOC should give a little.

"But FIS is the governing body of skiing," he said. "It could easily get together with the IOC. It could make a firm rule about what is permitted, and make it stick.

Retains Lightweight Crown

Buchanan Convinces Spectators

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The partisan fans came to boo the visitor from Scotland but stayed to cheer him. And today Kenny Buchanan headed for home in Edinburgh, his world lightweight boxing crown intact.

"He's the champ and it will take a lot of fighter to beat him," said the challenger, Ruben Navarro. He pointed to himself as the fighter who could do it.

Ruben, the No. 3 contender who took the title fight on 72 hours notice, gave it a good go. But he was no match for the boxing dandy from abroad, who retained the championship by unanimous decision in 15 spirited rounds.

Navarro's Mexican-American supporters gave him a thunderous cheer when he entered the ring at the Los Angeles Sports Arena while greeting the Scot with hearty boos.

Gradually the boos faded and, in the final two rounds, the cheers went to Buchanan—as well as their hometown hero.

In the opening seconds a straight right to the ear decked the titleholder, the first time, it was said, he had ever hit the canvas.

Navarro thought it was a clean knockdown. Buchanan inferred later it might have been. But referee Arthur Mercante ruled it a slip—so a slip it went.

Navarro scored with an overhand right on occasion. But too often it was foiled by Kenny's fall-away defence. The blow would start, Kenny would lean away and either the punch was short or had lost its anger by the time it reached target.

Navarro was warned three times for unintentional low blows and once for an illegal kidney punch. One point was deducted for one flagrant low punch.

The referee scored it 9-4. Los Angeles Judge Lee Grossman had 9-4 and Harry Gibbs, from Lodon, had it 9-2. The Associated Press scored it 10-3. Scoring was one or more points for the winner of a round, none for the loser and none for an even round.

The crowd was 10,360, at least 5,000 less than expected, and gate receipts were $92,366. The belated defection of ex-champion Mando Ramos last Tuesday cost the show at least $25,000 in refunds and anticipated gate sale. Ramos cancelled out with a severe groin injury.

Palmer Tied by A Nose; Bowerman Top Canadian

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A woman's nose played a major role Friday in the third round of the Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament.

The nose kept an Arnold Palmer shot from going into the woods and knocking him out of his tie for the lead with Jimmy Weichers.

Both scored 204 or 12 strokes under par for the first 54 holes of the 90-hole tournament over four desert courses. Palmer fired a 66 Friday and Weichers a 64 as both played the Indian Wells Country Club course.

Weichers wold have been alone in the lead if it weren't for that nose.

On the 18th hole, actually the ninth played by Palmer in the third round, his tee shot hooked into the rough and bounced toward the trees before hitting the nose of Lynn Morgan and stopping in playing position.

Palmer then hit a No. 3 iron shot within 10 feet of the 462-yard hole and sank his putt for one of his two eagles. If the ball had continued into the woods on the tee shot, he would have lost one, if not two shots.

One stroke back of the co-leaders was Ray Floyd with a 66 and a 205 total.

Billy Casper shot a 68 for 207.

The five Canadians in the tournament are far down the field. Gary Bowerman of Toronto leads the group with 217 after shooting a 73. Ken Fulton of Montreal shot a 76 for 221 and Al Balding of Toronto was a stroke behind at 222 after coming in with an 80. George Knudson, also of Toronto, had an 80 for 230 while Bill Wright Jr. of Edmonton came in with 79 for 234.

TORONO (CP) — A Peugeot driven by Bruce Collins of Val Caron, Ont., and Don Nelson of Lively, Ont., left here at 7 p.m., Friday on the first leg of the 1,100-mile Canadian international winter rally.

The route swings northeast to west of Peterborough, with the first leg ending at Actinolite, 25 miles north of Belleville. Most of the route is on back roads.

This year the route is all within Ontario, with the first cars due in at Ottawa at 8 a.m. today for the 10-hour stopover.

The 22-year-old champion, prone to overweight, is sparring daily, taking a two-mile run each morning and has even moved out of his home to avoid breaking diet regulations. Manager Roger Larivee said Friday the Montreal fighter will make the 147-pound welter limit for the 12-round bout and remain in "great shape" despite the hard work. The fight at the 18,000-seat Montreal Forum will be Paduano's first since his defeat by world lightweight champion Ken Buchanan of Scotland at Madison Square Gardens in December.

Playoff Probable for Mixed Curlers

KITCHENER (CP) — Two rinks were tied for first place and three others in second, raising the possibility of one or more playoff games, as the Ontario mixed curling championship entered its sixth round today.

Only seven rounds were scheduled but with Bill Whittington of Ridgetown and Vince Lebano of Orillia each with 4-1 win-loss records and Stan Jones of Toronto, Ross Pearce of Toronto and Murray MacGrego of Guelph close behind with three wins and two losses the prospect of at least one playoff game was high.

Even Harold Peltzer of Peterborough, with two wins and three losses, had a chance of catching up in today's two rounds.

Harry Adams of Ottawa trailed with only one win and four losses while Jim Hollingshed of Niagara Falls remained winless.

In fifth-round action Friday night Whittington downed Hollingshead 8-6, Pearce beat Adams 8-3, Lebano edged Jones 6-5 and Peltzer defeated MacGregor 5-4.

Jones won in the third round, 8-7 against Adams, but lost to Whittington 11-5 in the fourth. It was Whittington's second victory of the day after downing Peltzer 6-4 in third-round play. MacGregor also won in both the third and fourth rounds, 10-4 over Pearce and 16-4 over Hollingshead. Lebano won the third round 11-8 over Hollingshead but lost 7-3 to Pearce in the fourth. In the other fourth-round game Adams defeated Peltzer 7-5.

Belleville Mo-Hawk goalie Steve Rexe watches defenceman Lionel Botly fend off Kingston forward Pete Ford during OHA Senior A hockey action at the Memorial Arena Friday night. The Aces took their third win in nine starts against the Mo-Hawks, beating their hosts 6-1.

Mo-Hawks Full of Fight, But No Signs on Scoreboard

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Outside of landing a few punches, Belleville Mo-Hawks couldn't connect at all in a 6-1 senior hockey loss to Kingston Aces Friday night.

The Mo-Hawks' 19th loss of 35 OHA Senior A games was a dismal affair for the 1,000 spectators, largest local crowd in some weeks.

Les Colligan's shutout-spoiling goal with only 11 seconds remaining in the game provided some cause for spectator enthusiasm. But the previous 59 minutes and 49 seconds belonged to the Aces, who were winning their second straight game over the Mo-Hawks, after dropping six of the clubs' initial seven meetings.

The Mo-Hawks repay the visit in Kingston Sunday night, the last of 10 regular-season meetings between the eastern Ontario rivals.

A pair of sloppy first-period goals by John Mercer — one that Steve Rexe had a piece of from the point, another that went in from behind the net off the Belleville goalie's skate — provided the Aces with the necessary momentum.

Pat Driscoll and Charlie Convery earned second-period goals by beating Mo-Hawk defencemen to the puck, while third-period goals by Rod Graham and Convery didn't meet too much opposition from Rexe, who was bombed with 44 shots.

LES COLLIGAN

When Ray Johnston and Aces' bad boy Pete Ford tangled after only 42 seconds of play, those in attendance were left with the distinct impression the Mo-Hawks were fighting mad.

Five minutes later, Ralph Plane verified that by landing a couple of haymakers on Aces' defenceman Bob Olajos, no pushover of a sparring partner.

Ford also took a couple of well-placed second-period unches from usually - placid Lorne O'Donnell and earned an automatic 10-minute misconduct for drawing his second fight.ing major of the game.

The fourth event on the evening's card amounted to a lop-sided verdict to Les Colligan over a surprised Tom Smallman, whose nose was bleeding before he dropped his gloves.

Unfortunately, the Mo-Hawks couldn't translate their high spirits into scoring threats. They mustered 26 shots on Mike Lovett, and only had about two serious chances for goals in the entire game.

Obviously, missing the sidelined services of centre Doug Senior, and defenceman Lou Kazowski, the Mo-Hawks wallowed in one of their most disorganized performances of the season.

Playing - coach Dave Jones was fortunate. He got to miss the last half of the game after being served a misconduct and game misconduct by referee Blair Graham for excessively disputing a second-period penalty call.

The win gave Kingston temporary possession of fourth place in the eight-team standings, two points ahead of idle Oakville, and three ahead of the Mo-Hawks.

McIntosh Top Skip In Forces

CHILLIWACK, BC (CP) — Hector McIntosh of Trenton, Ont., counted three in the 11th end today, then ran Merv Paine of Edmonton out of rocks to win the playoff final and the Canadian Forces curling championship.

McIntosh went ahead 8 - 7 after 10 ends in the gruelling 3½-hour match, sewed up his victory in the 11th and played a takeout game the rest of the way.

He got by Ed Wood of Bagotville, Que., 7-6 in the playoff semi-final when Wood missed a take out on the final end.

Wood had a chance to win the title in the final draw, but fell 10-6 to Dennis Vickland of Comox, BC, forcing a three-way tie and a playoff.

His loss left him with a record of four wins and two losses, the same as Paine and McIntosh.

Paine had gained at least a share of first place with a 16-7 win over Fred Jones of Summerside, PEI, while McIntosh demolished John Roy of Falconbridge, Ont., representing Northern Ontario, 10-1 in a game called after six ends.

Vickland and Roy finished the competition with records of 3-3. Jones was 2-4 and Laurie Cann of Soest, West Germany had only one win in six games.

Dozen Hawks Surprise All Fairways

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

If medals were handed out to hockey trainers then it is quite likely that Steve Bedard would rank near the top of the list "for service above and beyond the call of duty".

The Trenton Golden Hawk trainer, who also performs in a playing role for the Stirling juvenile team, donned a gold and black sweater last night to help lead the Golden Hawks to their second win of the Eastern Ontario Junior B season, a 5-2 decision over the Belleville Fairways.

Trenton accomplished the feat despite having only a dozen players able to dress for the game. Their hopes took a further turn for the worse when standout winger Mike Hall was caught by an errant high stick and forced to retire for the remainder of the contest with a suspected broken jaw.

"It was backchecking that won it for us. That and goaltending. the boys were coming back like fiends. I've known all season that we had a better team than we've shown," noted a jubilant Norm Cairns after his team's victory.

"They came to play hockey and we didn't," explained Fairways general manager Jim Matthews, a statement which pretty well described the efforts of the Belleville team which has already clinched a spot in the league play-offs.

Another unlikely hero for the winners proved to be Grant Lengille, who had been cut previously this season from the juvenile all-stars. Lengille scored once and assisted on two other goals in the first period as the Golden Hawks bounced back from a 1-0 deficit.

The opening Fairway tally came when left winger Cliff Janitsch banged a pass from Terry Meagher into an open Trenton net.

At the other end of the rink, Arnie Istead was the victim of three Trenton goals in the 32 minutes he played, sharing the duties with Ron Jury. The Belleville backstop could only be faulted on Langille's tally which went between his pads off a shot from the faceoff circle.

Istead rectified his mistake in the second period by stymying tricky Trenton centre Mark Woodward on a clear-cut breakaway.

Woodward came up with the key goal of the game early in the third period after the Fairways' Dave Ferguson had notched the only score of a wide open second frame to cut the Trenton lead to 3-2.

The speedy centre took a pass from linemate Ken Holmes and fired a shot that eased some of the pressure on the Golden Hawks. Jeff Howard added the final Trenton goal on a pass from Woodward.

Belleville rightwinger Brian O'Coin drew a game misconduct for some over-zealous complaints of a cross-checking penalty handed out by referee Keith McDonald, meaning that the Tweed performer will miss the Fairways 9 p.m. Sunday home ice encounter with the Cobourg Cougars.

Belleville and Trenton meet in the final league game next Friday night in Trenton.

No Doubt Who She's For

Meg Davis, seven-year-old daughter of William Davis, proudly tells delegates to the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership convention who she favors. Her father won the leadership and will be Ontario's next premier. (CP Photo)

Quiet and Understated

Davis Is From Same Mould as Robarts

TORONTO (CP) — The reign of the establishment in the Ontario Progressive Conservative party was secured in a steamy Maple Leaf Gardens early today as William Grenville Davis became premier-elect.

Mr. Davis, a 41-year-old Brampton lawyer who was branded the convention's establishment candidate, is from the same political mould as John Parmenter Robarts, the man he will replace.

Both are quiet, confident and understated. And that was Mr. Davis' mood as he mounted the podium and told a weary, but cheering audience:

"I make no promises tonight, except this: To maintain the principles, the integrity of our party, to recognize the necessity to move forward, to adapt to changes which are necessary to society and most important to recognize the need to win."

The speech by the man who became education minister more than nine years ago was a soft touch that served as an anti-climax to a frantic ballot-box clash between Mr. Davis and the man who almost stopped him—Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs.

And, in the same calculating manner as Mr. Robarts, he told reporters he has no immediate plans for cabinet changes and any provincial election plans won't be known at least until Monday, if then.

Although he'll be moving into a new office at Queen's Park, the father of five is still likely to be haunted by his education portfolio in his new role as premier.

It was his education policy that kept him on the defensive during the tough winter campaign that saw candidates criss-cross the province many times.

In many places he went, Mr. Davis was besieged by demonstrators advocating government support past Grade 10 for students in Roman Catholic high schools.

Others wanted to know why education costs soared to 41 per cent of a provincial budget of $3,739,300,000.

Allan Lawrence was the first of his cabinet colleagues to criticize him, saying he would limit education costs to one-third of the budget.

A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough also criticized the department's spending record.

But during the convention, Mr. Davis made a firm stand on his record on both issues.

"I've just got to be tough," he told delegates to a policy session.

He was greeted by boos from a Roman Catholic school group when he made his nomination acceptance speech Thursday night.

Mr. Davis was born into a hard-line Tory family. His father was a friend of the late Thomas L. Kennedy who was premier for a short time between George Drew and Leslie Frost.

Mr. Kennedy took a liking to young Billy Davis and began introducing him as "a boy who'll be premier some day" when he was 13 years of age.

Mr. Davis cut his political teeth at 16 when he was a delegate to a national party convention. At 20, he was president of the Peel riding association.

After being called to the bar in 1955, he wasted no time seeking his own political fortune.

With Mr. Kennedy's blessing he contested and won the Peel North seat four years later and has held it ever since.

Losers Went Down in Different Styles

TORONTO (CP) — The losers all went down differently Friday.

Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs, blamed himself.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough dropped off the ballot in flamboyant fashion.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch lost momentum.

A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, was philosophical.

And Robert Pharand, a 26-year-old University of Ottawa graduate student, knew he didn't stand a chance anyway.

But McKeough provided the drama and Allan Lawrence a pledge of unity as William Davis, 41, was elected leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party and next premier.

Before the education minister could say his first public words as premier-elect, Mr. Lawrence strode to the podium and asked delegates who had struggled through four ballots and 11 hours of voting:

"I want to have one more ballot. I want to make it unanimous: Bill Davis."

But the political play entered its last act before the final ballot.

Mr. McKeough, low man on the third ballot, left his seat and headed for the Davis camp after his 346-vote total was announced.

When he reached Mr. Davis, he grabbed his hand and raised it over his head while a supporter pasted a Davis sticker on his lapel. The demonstration was probably the clincher in the Davis victory.

Asked why he went to Davis instead of Mr. Lawrence, Mr. McKeough replied:

"They're both good friends of mine. You just have to go back to the beginning . . . go back to the heart of hearts."

Mr. Lawrence, who replied "me, I guess" when asked what was wrong with his campaign, accepted the McKeough move gracefully.

"He had the vote. You have to make your decision. There's nothing wrong in that."

None of the other defeated leadership hopefuls gave any indication of support as they dropped out of the race.

Mr. Welch was hoping for at least a solid third place on the second ballot.

"I'd have been a little happier if I'd have finished third. Now, I've got to get back to my job Monday morning, take up my responsibilities as provincial secretary and get ready to work with our new leader."

Bert Lawrence was philosophical after withdrawing from the ballot after the first round of voting left him with 128 votes out of 1,657.

He withdrew because "to stay in would have held up the voting and because I have nowhere to go."

"What the hell else can you do?"

Willie Walked The Water But Almost Got Dunking

TORONTO (CP) — The hand-painted placard up in the blues at Maple Leaf Gardens early today proclaimed in big red letters: "Willie Walks on Water."

Indeed he did. But Education Minister William Davis, elected new leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party in a political barnburner that went 12 hours and four ballots, almost got a dunking.

In a cliff-hanging leadership convention finish that boiled down to 44 votes from among the 1,580 delegates who rode out the evening, Mr. Davis dealt a death blow to a determined challenge from Mines Minister Allan Lawrence.

The final count in a red-hot contest prolonged by the almost-total failure of mechanical voting machines: Davis 812, Lawrence 768.

Outwardly calm throughout the entire voting procedure while his strategists sweated blood, Mr. Davis said he intends to disappear for the weekend.

In an interview minutes after he became the successor to John Parmenter Robarts, the 41-year-old lawyer said he will discuss all matters—including the possibility of a provincial election—when he returns to his office Monday.

The leadership voting, which capped three days of wild wheeling and dealing, built steadily in suspense and tension that peaked in the final minutes of the convention.

At 1:50 a.m. EST, just 10 minutes before the official results were announced, Mr. Davis still refused to admit that he had been elected, even though he was getting steady reports of a 40-vote lead from his ballot box scrutineers.

"I don't know where they come from—thye're unofficial totals," said Mr. Davis. "I don't know whether they're accurate or not."

As it turned out, the unofficial totals were indeed inaccurate, though they clearly indicated a Davis trend. The scrutineers made it 890 to 846 for the education minister—a total of 156 votes more than had been cast.

"I don't know whether they're accurate or not," the Brampton lawyer yelled above the roar of his supporters, who were convinced that he'd won on the basis of the unofficial tally.

"There are more people voting in this than in the last ballot and I find that a little strange."

Then, minutes later, PC President Alan Eagleson stepped to the podium and gave the order of finish: "Bill Davis, Allan Lawrence."

In the front-row seat behind the visitors' bench in the big, boiling-hot hockey palace, the suppressed tension visibily drained from Mr. Davis' face.

What are your thoughts at this moment?

"I want to get to the podium—and my daughter (seven-year-old Meg) is more interested in the balloons than anything else."

Meg was busily swatting at balloons, paying no attention to the mountain of Davis supporters above the family.

A crestfallen Allan Lawrence, who charged at the leadership from a standing start that almost killed off Mr. Davis' large pre-convention lead, took the Eagleson announcement with a tremor of emotion.

He averted his eyes for a second, looked down, then came up with a broad smile for his wife Moira.

Mr. McKeough, eliminated on the third ballot, strode over to the Davis camp in a move he claimed was not pre-arranged—no deals, no compromises.

"They're both good friends of mine. You just have to go back to the beginning, go back to the heart of hearts. This was the greatest night of my life."

Even Robarts Blew His Cool When Vote Machines Goofed

TORONTO (CP) — Tempers frayed, delegates booed the party brass and even retiring Premier John Robarts blew his cool Friday night when voting machines at the Ontario Progressive Conservative convention turned the first leadership ballot into a mechanized nightmare.

A sheepish R. Alan Eagleson, provincial PC association president, had the dubious distinction of informing the 1,689 delegates that the first ballot—which started at 3 p.m. EST—had to be junked.

He said 12 of the 15 machines supplied by Shoup Voting Machine Corp. of New York packed it in and threw the first round of voting out of kilter.

"The first vote has been rejected and will have to be retaken," Mr. Eagleson bellowed from the Maple Leaf Gardens podium, amid a chorus of boos. "It and all further ballots will be by secret ballot and not by machine."

Immediately behind the podium, convention executive director Arthur Harnett faced angry floor strategists from the camps of the six leadership candidates.

They were demanding explanations of what went wrong as results spewed out by the errant machines found their way into the hands of scrutineers and campaign organizers, in turn throwing their strategies out the window.

Mr. Harnett and Mr. Eagleson made an emergency call for ballot boxes and within minutes a committee was busily cranking out paper ballots on a duplicating machine.

In the middle of it all, Premier Robarts returned to the convention and sourly observed that paper ballots were good enough in the good old days and "I see no reason why we shouldn't still be using them."

Exactly what went wrong with the voting machines was still a matter of speculation early today. In some cases the machines registered more votes than voters, in other instances the reverse was true.

The machine itself is a complicated system of levers. When a delegate entered one of the booths, he pulled a lever from right to left.

This closed a curtain and engaged the voting machinery. In front of him was a list of six candidates with a small lever beside it. The voter had to push the smaller levers from right to left to cast his ballot, then yank it back again to record his vote and open the curtains.

Shoup representatives who installed the machinery insisted that the problems were caused by human failures rather than mechanical—that delegates hadn't been properly instructed on how to operate the machines.

However, Mr. Eagleson and other convention organizers said the vote count produced by the machines was so far out of kilter that it had to be a mechanical failure.

The machines were supplied through a Liberal, lawyer Thomas (Windy) O'Neill of Toronto, who has the Canadian franchise for Shoup.

"I know it's not the machine," he said in an interview Friday night. "It must have been the delegates' fault . . . I know it was human error and I want to find out exactly what happened."

"The machines have been used for 55 years in the United States," said Mr. O'Neill: "I don't know what happened to them this time, if indeed anything did."

The thorny problem caused by the spoiled first ballot was resolved at a meeting involving Mr. Eagleson, the six candidates, their campaign managers and scrutineers.

By the time they decided to hold another first ballot with paper ballots, more than two hours had gone by, and it was two more hours until voting started again.

In the meantime, several sets of unofficial allies from the aborted first ballot were making the rounds.

In an interview NDP Leader Stephen Lewis commented: "It sort of reminds me how the government works. It's a little tough for the Torries to get into the mechanical age."

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said: "I had a friend phone me and say he'd be damned if he'd buy a used car from the Tories now."

With a warm smile and hasty feet they serve Babyburgers for small appetites, Teenburgers and Papaburgers for big eaters and Mamaburgers that are just right for in-between appetites. Markets Are Quiet This Week

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets were quiet this week in the absence of any major economic developments.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a major indicator of market movement, closed the week at 177.68, down .50.

It was the second consecutive week it had moved lower.

The Toronto exchange's western oil index gained 1.48 points to 209.96. Last week the oil index, in the wake of apparently-unconfirmed rumors of an oil strike in the Arctic, jumped up several points.

Volume this week at Toronto was 11.5 million shares, down from 14.65 million last week.

So far, 1971 has been a slow year for trading on Canadian markets, but the general trend established during the last six weeks has been upward.

January's volume of trading at Toronto was 48.1 million shares, down from 65.8 million in the corresponding month of 1970.

Dollar value of shares dropped to $382.3 million last month from $413.6 million in January, 1970.

The Toronto exchange's industrial index has advanced 2.85 per cent since the beginning of the year, the gold index 10.72 per cent, base metals 6.33 per cent and western oils 7.04 per cent.

This week was busy on Wall Street. The New York Stock Exchange's volume of 110.61 million shares represented the busiest week of trading in history. The Dow Jones average of key industrial issues gained 12.26 points to 888.83.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was down .69 to 175.2.

Combined volume was 6.04 million shares, compared with 7.48 million last week.

Losses outnumbered gains 278 to 160.

On index at Toronto, golds were up 4.40 to 180.57 and base metals .57 to 94.94.

Masons Honor Bruce Smith

The Quinte Friendship Chapter 227 of the Royal Arch Masons recently paid tribute to Bruce H. Smith when he was presented with a 25-year service medal.

The ceremony marked the anniversary of his being installed as First Principal of the Chapter.

A high-ranking official of the Royal Arch Masons of Canada for Ontario, Fred Welham, recalled the extensive service rendered by Mr. Smith and his elections as Grand First Principal for 1959 and 1960.

Present and past Grand Chapter officers from Toronto, Hamilton and all eight chapters of the Prince Edward District 11 were in attendance.

Among the officers and executive in attendance were Charles Emmett, Fred C. Conley, G. J. Purcell, Melville Spiers, Ralph Bell, William Connor, Morley Hancock and Grant Gabel.

A banquet was served by wives of the officers following the business meeting.

Aube Weisman, vice-chairman of the bursary and scholarship fund, reported that in the past few years, more than $20,000 had been given to youngsters to aid in their college and university terms.

The 50th anniversary of the chapter's founding is being celebrated this year.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Over-exertion Harmful to Many

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Are you really against exercise? Or is most of your objection to what most doctors believe is good for preventing heart attacks really tongue - in - cheek? In other words, are you just trying to get a "rise" out of your readers? This is too important a subject to make sport of. Don't you think? — Mr. N.

• • •

Comment: I have never been more serious. I believe that over - exertion kills more than it helps. Trying to get a "rise" out of people? I think you will admit that the forum of a staid medical society is no place for it. Yet, during the past few years (and as late as last month) I have been a duly invited and programed speaker to give my views on exercise.

For example, in such estimable medical groups as the Wayne County (Detroit) Medical Society, the Dade County Medical Association (Miami, Fla.), and the District of Columbia Medical Society (Washington, D.C.).

• • •

Yes, Mr. N., I have been very serious — in trying to counteract the contagion of exercise which has spread across this country. Here is a letter, received this morning, which gives you an indication of why I am raising my voice against the universal prescription of "exercise."

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm having trouble again. I've just been informed about two weeks ago that I have angina pectoris. It all began about a year ago in a health studio, while doing exercises — including eight minutes of in-place jogging — I suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis. I was in the hospital for eight weeks, so you see my attack was a serious one. I was advised to continue my exercises.

In the summer we swim more than usual. A year ago I fixed up a bike and my 8 - year - old daughter and I would take a three to five mile bike ride every evening before her bedtime. In the winter we set the bike up on a stand in the basement. While I watched the news on TV I'd ride 15 to 30 minutes — at least from three to four times a week. This past summer we had the bikes out for about 90 miles.

Every day, while showering and drying before breakfast, I have done four holding yoga squats, three different arm movements of 20 each, 20 bends to touch the toes and 20 twists. At night after work I have one of those wheels one rolls out on the floor, and I roll and stretch out 20 times, twist 20 times, do 12 pushups and 10 to 20 legups. (I try to stay away from strain, but my heart sure pumps hard.)

What do you suggest, Dr. Steincrohn? Shall I continue? — Mr. L.

• • •

Comment: Your own doctor will have to make that decision. Meanwhile, to get my viewpoint on the exercise problem, I recommend that you get hold of my recently published book, "How To Be Lazy, Healthy and Fit." (It may be in your public library by now.)

You may also be interested in a note received today from a physical therapist of a large medical center in Maryland: "For many years I have been appalled by the large number of totally unqualified — as well as qualified — individuals who advocate exercise as the remedy for everything from fallen arches to facial wrinkling. I am delighted that you, as a cardiologist, have taken the stand you have against arbitrary exercise. The medical profession has an obligation to the public to make it aware of the subtle danger of exercise. You have a staunch supporter in me. — Mr. H."

Judge Upholds Accused Who Had Reviled Him

MONTREAL (CP) — The sometimes tulmultuous trials of five Quebecers charged with seditious conspiracy took a surprising turn Friday when Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet quashed the charges in Court of Queens Bench.

The judge, whose impartiality and fitness to preside at the trial had been challenged in its earlier stages, stunned the courtroom when he brought down his ruling.

In his 17-page written statement in which he reviewed the defendants' petition to quash, he ruled that the charges covered too long a period of time, were faulty in their wording and lacked sufficient details.

The accused, all arrested Oct. 16 under the War Measures Act invoked to deal with Quebec's two political kidnappings, were labor leader Michel Chartrand, lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Pierre Vallieres, teacher Charles Gagnon and broadcasting producer Jacques Larue Langlois.

The five were accused of seditious conspiracy by advocating the overthrow of the Canadian and Quebec governments between Jan. 1, 1968 and Oct. 16, 1970.

All were arrested Oct. 16 under the act and only Larue — Langlois — released in December — obtained bail.

After Mr. Justice Ouimet finished reading his judgment, the Crown immediately asked for an adjournment to get "further instructions" from the Quebec justice department.

After the adjournment, Mr. Justice Ouimet granted a Crown request for postponement of further charges against the five until the spring assizes which open March 1.

The five still face charges of being members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, which claimed responsibility for kidnapping British diplomat James Cross Oct. 5 and for the Oct. 10 abduction of Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister found strangled a week later.

After the postponement, Lemieux applied for bail for the four still in custody. Mr. Justice Ouimet said he will hear the application Monday.

In his judgment, Mr. Justice Ouimet said that the accused were before him on a preferred indictment which bypasses preliminary hearing procedures.

"In fact, as there was no preliminary hearing, one cannot know what the Crown alleges against them and they are justified in claiming they are unable to guess what they are accused of during a period of three years."

The judge noted that the petition argued that the Criminal Code must give an accused "reasonable information" concerning the act to be proved against him.

The men were charged with having been parties to a conspiracy aimed at changing the Quebec government by "advocating force without lawful authority."

The judge asked how "can one conspire by carrying out the process of advocating."

How could the accused "hope to prepare a full and complete defence against such a vague and imprecise indictment?"

"How can it be claimed that the indictment contains, with regard to the circumstances of the alleged offence, sufficient details reasonably to inform the accused about the acts or omissions to be proved against them and to identify the affair mentioned?"

Defendants Vallieres and Lemieux took hurried notes as, in the first part of his judgment, Mr. Justice Ouimet cited jurisprudence to reject some arguments presented by the defendants. Their arrest, detention and arraignment under the War Measures Act, he said, was "perfectly legal."

But when he began criticizing the charges, Vallieres and Lemieux dropped their pencils in surprise.

After a brief adjournment, Chartrand rose and told the judge he had "nothing against your judgment insofar as the last part of it is concerned."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 14

Your birthday today: If you are already busy in some creative enterprise, the year ahead promises much progress — including sudden realizations that you have to cut back to where you were to try again. If you're not, the drift of your year brings you into experimentations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your bold approach provokes positive reactions from competitors and members of the opposite sex. Home life includes a lively incident.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Make your decisions and appointments early. There's a great deal to do and find out about, many people to see.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Surprises come in from all sides this Sunday, mostly pleasant. Find time for sports, games, entertainments.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Curiosity and close observations clear up various puzzles. Check on what's happening in your community.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The unexpected is the normal order of this Sunday. Comments and criticisms turn out unfounded or mischevious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Take your full share in community observances, and keep busy. You have choices as to hobbies or pastimes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Everybody finds a different course to follow. Have patience with younger people and their broken schedules.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): This Sunday you can learn something that has eluded you far too long. Take positive action.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): A restless mood is normal — see that you do not let it upset your loved ones, or lead you into sharing in somebody else's mischief.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Listen to business people talk shop, to family problems emerging a little at a time, to volunteers tell of the community needs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): It is all too easy to conclude that others are wrong merely by noting they don't agree with you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Do your part in the weekend customs of your neighborhood. Nothing is to be gained by taking gossip or personal comment seriously.

For February 15

Your birthday today: Adjustment is your key to success this coming year as you cope with natural limitations, find ways of getting past old problems. Today's natives seldom reveal their deeper nature to casual observers or even loved ones. Most have acting talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Business is good and promises to be better, according to how seriously you pursue it. In social, family life let others see the softer side of your nature.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Apply for improvements, pursue new ratings or positions. Hobbies may produce revenue. Find true, pleasant things to tell others about themselves.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Set up important interviews, offer services or expertise in a novel form. Take the initiative in social activities; bring family, friends along.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Career advancement prospects are excellent. So are cash settlements, lump sum purchases, your working day and your home life.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Start new ventures, explore fresh contacts. Look around, bring in old friends, share coming good fortune. The key to success is in your timing — be punctual.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Get organized. You have more co-operation than you'd suspect from the remarks people make. Put in a little overtime if necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Take a keen look around you, then straighten out the most complex or tangled situation you confront. Do what is possible for the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Now you can put together a confidential or exclusive deal in any career issue. Demonstrate your technical competence. An incident will show whether your ideas are correct.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): If you are together with your inner nature, you'll add to your resources — new tools, better understanding, personal treasures. Start early and keep at it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You have a special knack to contribute to group efforts. Strive for a broader viewpoint; enlist co-operation from seemingly unlikely candidates.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 2; — Feb. 18): Attend to formalities, legal matters, records. You are on your own at present in an emotionally detached mood — free to think for yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Planning of investments, founding partnerships promise well. Social activities can be lively, but don't neglect work.

Trudeau and Fifteen Ministers Confer With Farm Union Leaders

SASKATOON (CP) — Cash is short these days on Canadian farms, Prime Minister Trudeau heard Friday as he and 15 of his ministers swept into the province for a two-day visit that included the colorful launching of the Canada Winter Games.

In a carefully-planned sortie, Mr. Trudeau sat down to a dialogue Friday with the National Farmers Union on farm problems here, and then raised the flag on the winter games bringing 2,100 athletes from the 10 provinces and two territories into more than a week of intensive activity.

Today, the exercise continued in Regina, with the annual sub mission of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture plus activities including a dinner tendered by the Saskatchewan Liberal government.

"The situation in the country is very disturbed," Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmers Union, told Mr. Trudeau in winding up the public statement Friday of his organization which claims representntation coast to coast.

Farmers were "very anxious . . . very concerned about income." They wanted to "make a buck."

"I want to make that verh clear," said Mr. Atkinson, whose supporters back in the summer of 1969 had greeted Mr. Trudeau—in his last trip to Saskatchewan with demonstrations ranging from piles of rotted wet grain to signs saying: "Hustle wheat, not women."

Friday's encounter was a contrast in polite discussion, with Mr. Trudeau—whose party holds just two of the province's 15 federal seats—thanking the group for a good meeting with constructive suggestions.

The prime minister, natty in a raspberry-colored shirt, blue jacket and light-colored slacks, climbed aboard a table on arrival, swinging his legs, and then sat down flanked by Agriculture Minister Olson and Otto Lang, minister of manpower and immigration who answers to Parliament for the Canadian wheat board and on general grain questions.

It was a standing-room-only audience, polite but not enthusiastic.

Use of the cabinet as a travel team was introduced in the early 1960s by then-prime minister John Diefenbaker in a visit to Quebec and continued last year when the cabinet went to Winnipeg for the province's centennial celebrations.

There were three demonstrations for the Trudeau visit.

Mr. Trudeau was greeted at Saskatoon airport, on arrival by government aircraft, by a small band of demonstrators urging liberalization of abortion law. The same demonstrators picketed the Saskatoon exhibition grounds for the opening of the winter games.

Outside the Trudeau hotel, when he arrived, youths broke into a chant of "jobs, jobs, jobs"—and inside he was greeted by a massed choir accompanied by a small band playing and singing songs specially composed for the Games.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, Mr. Diefenbaker and Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan were other luminaries in town—plus the cabinet ministers who speedily fanned out through the province for speeches.

The farm union brief said the government's anti-inflation policy "had had no impact on reducing farm costs while farm prices in several sectors have dropped sharply."

Farmers were the victims of this policy rather than its benefactors.

The government apparently believed in efficient, low-cost food production but this "quite clearly . . . visualizes a sizeable reduction in the number of practising farmers in Canada."

"Our concerns are that present federal farm policies fail to properly assess and accept the unique nature of farming and the needs of farm people."

North Ireland Armed Camp Heading for Crisis

BELFAST (AP) — Northern Ireland is an armed camp that seems to be heading for crisis, both economic and military.

Senior officials believe it is only a matter of time before the Irish Republican Army renews guerrilla tactics which in the last week have caused 11 deaths. They are afraid that unless the IRA can be stopped quickly Northern Ireland's Protestants will react angrily.

"The gun is back in Irish politics," an official said. "All Irish history shows that when that happens the result is a bloodletting."

The current violence comes from IRA's Provisional wing, composed of Roman Catholic nationalists trying to expel the British Army and unite the mainly-Protestant country with the Catholic - dominated Republic of Ireland to the south.

The Provisionals have many rifles and automatic weapons and apparently possess a large supply of gelignite, a type of dynamite. This explosive was used Tuesday in a booby trap that killed five civilians.

On the other side, the similarly outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force also is well armed and trained. It is dedicated to maintaining Protestant rule in the six-county North and rejecting any link with the Republic.

At te moment the UVF is largely passive but military officials do not expect this situation to continue if IRA activity is stepped up.

In between the outlawed forces is the embattled British force which came in August, 1969, to head off a bloodbath between Protestants and Catholics in Belfast's back streets.

Recent reinforcements have brought the British Army's strength in Ulster to 7,400 men, and it is clear that they are having trouble keeping the peace even before Northern Ireland's "marching season" begins. Each spring and summer Catholic and Protestant organizations stage parades and counter-parades, and at the height of last year's marching season 12,000 British soldiers were in the country.

Northern Ireland's prime minister, James Chichester-Clark, has put into action two regulations intended to strengthen the security forces' hand in countering the IRA.

One makes it an offence for any person to dress or behave in public so as to suggest that he is a member of a subversive organization. The other outlaws concealment of dead or wounded.

All political solutions appear to have been rejected in advance by Protestant and Catholic extremists.

Votes for Sale at Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The signs put up during Carleton University's current student council elections advertised a handy service:

Students wanting to sell their votes could do so; candidates wanting to buy the votes could also do so.

The signs, the student newspaper The Carleton reported, said Student Elector Services would handle the transactions, buying votes at 20 cents each and selling them to candidates at 25, returning the profit to the vote-seller.

To sell a vote, just call A Division, the signs said. To buy a vote call B Division.

But the telephone numbers listed were those of the A and B divisions of the RCMP.

A check by the newspaper revealed that the RCMP A Division, handling narcotics cases among other things, received several calls from students seeking cash for their franchise rights.

Candidates were more on the ball. The RCMP B Division didn't get a call.

Nixon Says Davis 'Caretaker'

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon today welcomed new Progressive Conservative Leader William Davis as the "incoming caretaker of an outgoing government."

The Ontario Liberal leader said in a prepared statement that his party regards it "as fitting that Bill Davis assumes the leadership and so takes full responsibility for the educational waste and crisis of which he has been chief architect."

Mr. Nixon said the convention proved that the Tories give priority to form over substance, styleover content and entertainment over policy.

The Liberals "look forward to doing battle with a tired government" rejuvenated by "tired men mouthing feeble slogans."

Moonman Tests Mental Telepathy

HOUSTON (AP) — Moon rocks and astronauts come under careful scrutiny again today as evaluation of the Apollo 14 mission continues to the isolation of the Lunar Receiving Laboratory.

During the first day in the two-week laboratory quarantine Friday, astronaut Edgar D. Mitchell acknowledged he had conducted a personal experiment in mental telepathy during the flight and scientists became intrigued by a mysterious white rock.

It had been reported earlier that Mitchell tried to send symbols by mental telepathy to a Chicago man who claims to be a psychic.

A space agency spokesman in the lab said Mitchell confirmed he conducted an experiment in mental telepathy but the astronauts declined to discuss it further. The experiment was described as a personal project.

Mitchell and his crew-mates, Alan B. Shepard and Stuart A. Roosa, are confined to the lab until Feb. 26 on the remote chance they brought germs back to earth.

In another section of the laboratory, scientists opened the first box of moon rocks collected by Shepard and Mitchell in the Fra Mauro highlands a week ago.

The container opened Friday had about nine pounds of the 95 pounds of material brought to earth by the astronauts. But it was a three-inch-long chip off a large white rock, which the moonwalkers described while on the surface, which attracted most attention.

Geologists have speculated it might be part of the primitive lunar crust that they theorize underlies the area.

"Nobody knows what the rock is and obviously there is going to have to be a lot of work," said Dr. Robin Brett, chief of the geochemistry branch at the Manned Spacecraft Centre.

Brett reported another rock analysed for radioactivity had 10 times more potassium, thorium and uranium than was found in the lunar samples returned by the crews of Apollos 11 and 12 in 1969.

Body Parts Donations Debated

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons talked about hearts in pre-Valentine debate in the Commons Friday, then went on to eyes, kidneys and the general problem of donating body parts on death.

Veterinarian Maurice Foster (L—Algoma) introduced a motion during private members' hour advocating that the government convene a national conference to encourage the enactment of uniform anatomical gift legislation in all Canadian provinces.

The motion also called for consideration of the need for international agreements on the transfer of human tissue between Canada and other countries.

Mr. Foster said uniform legislation on regulations for donating body parts has been adopted in every U.S. state but in Canada legislation is far behind scientific know-how.

Last summer draft legislation was approved at a meeting of provincial public servants in Charlottetown but no province had yet implemented it.

At present, he said, negotiation with patients and their next-of-kin often causes so much delay that the needed organs or tissue is finally unusuable.

Murray McBride (L—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton), a United Church minister, agreed with Mr. Foster, saying that no matter what a person wants done with his body, if he dies outside of hospital the decision rests with the next-of-kin.

If he died in hospital, written consent or oral consent with three witnesses was usually needed to use any body organs.

The House took no action on the motion. It was talked out without a vote by government members.

Bid to Halt Polar Bear Hunt Fails

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A bid by Bryan Pearson, a member of the Northwest Territories council, to halt sports hunting of polar bears was denied Friday.

Mr. Pearson, elected member from Frobisher Bay, told the council he objected to the hunt because, "it robbed Eskimos of their heritage."

The council didn't agree.

Lyle Trimble of Aklavik, dean of the council, said the Eskimos had asked for the sports hunt which enables a limited number of them to sell their bear licences to outside hunters for $2,000 each.

"I think there'll be open season on council members if we tell them we're cancelling the program because it doesn't fit in with their culture," Mr. Trimble said.

The killing of the bears has been governed by a quota system for the last three years.

A LOW CUT

MARTIGNY, Switzerland (AP) — Birdwatchers report swallows migrating northward have been seen taking a low cut through the four-mile Grand St. Bernard Road tunnel from Italy to Switzerland rather than flying over the 8,000-ft. Alpine heights.

China Stages Rallies Pledging Aid to Laos

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Anti-American rallies and marches swept across China today as Peking drummed up popular support for its pledge to aid its allies in Indochina.

Hundreds of thousands of troops and civilians demonstrated in major cities following Peking's angry weekend denunciations of the U.S.-supported South Vietnamese incursion in Laos, the New China news agency reported.

Radio Peking broadcast a communique from the pro-Communist Pathet Lao command in Southern Laos saying that fierce fighting is still raging there.

The communique said Pathet Lao forces intercepted U.S. and Saigon troops pushing into Laos, wiping out 1,500 soldiers and shooting down 89 aircraft.

In Saigon, Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam of South Vietnam today discounted Peking's angry reaction over the invasion of Laos and said he did not think there would be any Chinese response to the thrust.

Defending the attack by Saigon forces against the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos, Lam said his government firmly believes it will shorten the war and he felt most of the world supports the move.

"The war is almost finished here in Vietnam," Lam said.

Lam described the Laotian push as "quite successful." He reiterated President Nguyen Van Thieu's initial statement that the thrust would be limited in time and area.

The spectre of Chinese intervention in Laos was raised at a huge rally in Peking Sunday, attended by several hundred thousand slogan-shouting demonstrators, including Korean War veterans.

Peking radio said slogan-chanting demonstrators swarmed through the streets of major cities, shouting "the Chinese people will never allow U.S. imperialism to do as it pleases in Indochina."

Observers in Hong Kong said the stress on people's war and self-reliance in Peking's statements on Indochina seemed to point against China's direct intervention in Laos—at least for the time being.

The rallies follow a spate of stern official statements by Peking warning that China would not remain indifferent to events in Laos.

CIA Bombed Accidentally

SAIGON (CP) — An American fighter-bomber renewed the attack on missile sites in North Vietnam Sunday while other U.S. warplanes bombed a U.S. Central Intelligence Agency in northern Laos accidentally.

In the ground war, South Vietnamese troops starting the second week of their drive in southern Laos reported they burned an abandoned North Vietnamese training centre containing 400 buildings 12 by 15 feet. They said they also seized 400 bicycles the Communists used to carry supplies along the Ho Chi Minh trail, and swept up more caches of food and munitions.

South Vietnamese forces have stopped all movements of troops and supplies along the Ho Chi Minh trail, the general directing the operation said today.

"We are sitting on the Ho Chi Minh trail and strangling it," said Lt.-Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander of the estimated 13,000 troops in Laos.

Violence Expected

NEW YORK (CP) — Andre Ouellet, parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Sharp, said today that more violence can be expected in Canada and in the rest of the world.

The Liberal member of Parliament for Papineau spoke to the New York State Society of Newspaper Editors about the October Kidnappings and terror in Quebec.

"Even now," he said, "I don't think anyone is naive enough to imagine that we have heard the last of the FLQ, or that violence that is a growing threat to society everywhere will leave Canada unscathed."

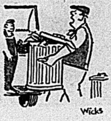
Israel Balks At Proposal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Israeli cabinet has rejected a set of peace proposals offered by UN mediator Gunnar V. Jarring, reliable sources in Jerusalem say. The Egyptian government, however, replied "positively" to Jarring, the authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram reports.



"Another bloomin'. load of Rolls-Royce shares!"

The newspaper gave no details of the Egyptian response but said it had been forwarded to the Big Four governments.

Jarring submitted his proposals last week to Israel and Egypt. They have not been published, but it is understood they call for Israeli withdrawal from the Suez canal and the Sinai Peninsula, occupied during the 1967 war; stationing of UN troops at the foot of the Sinai to protect Israeli shipping through the Strait of Tiran, and a declaration by Egypt of readiness to sign a peace treaty with Israel.

The two provisions concerning the occupied Arab territory were the basis of Israel's key objections, the sources said.

Israel has repeated often that the Sinai must not be released without a peace treaty and that it has little faith in UN peacekeeping forces. The informants said these old objections were brought up in Sunday's six-hour cabinet meeting.

Premier Golda Meir's government also considered that Jarring overstepped his authority because his mandate from the UN Security Council authorizes him to act only as a go-between and not as an initiator.

The sources said Israel would continue to press Egypt, through Jarring, for a response to its request last month that the Egyptians give a formal expression of willingness to conclude a peace treaty with Israel.

Israel made this request last month. Israel sources said the Egyptians have not responded, and the Jerusalem government feels that this failure to reply has deadlocked the talks.

Egypt sent two warplanes over Israeli positions on the Suez canal Sunday, the Tel Aviv military command said, the first such intrusion since the ceasefire was extended Feb. 5. A spokesman said Israel complained to the UN Truce Supervision Organization.

Israeli soldiers killed four infiltrators near the Yiftah kibbutz near the Lebanese border Saturday and two more Sunday night when an army patrol intercepted an Arab band in the Jordan valley a few miles north of the Dead Sea.

The Jordanian capital, Amman, was quiet Sunday after a night of clashes between federal troops and Palestinian Arab guerrillas entrenched on a hill overlooking the airport.

U. S. Building Bombed in Arctic

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP) — The RCMP said Sunday they have interview 40 persons but have no leads in the bombing of a United States government building Saturday.

A bomb blast destroyed the 20-by-20 wooden frame building which is used only during the summer to co-ordinate the supplying of DEW line sites along the arctic coast. The building was unoccupied and no one was injured.

An RCMP spokesman said some kind of bombing device was set but no further details were available.

U.S. Airman Kidnapped In Turkey

ANKARA (AP) — At least three armed Turks, believed to be leftist extremists, kidnapped a U.S. airman from an American base on the outskirts of Ankara early today.

U.S. officials said Airman Jimmy Finley, 25, of Fort Worth, Tex., was on guard duty when he was abducted.

The kidnappers entered the base undetected, apparently forced Finley into an air force pickup truck and drove the truck off the base about 3:30 a.m., firing a hail of bullets at American guards at the entrance.

The guards, who were unarmed, "hit the deck" at the guardhouse and were uninjured, officials said. They said Finley also was unarmed.

The truck was found abandoned about 10 miles outside Ankara, but there was no trace of Finley or the kidnappers.

Police said they had no clue to the identity of the kidnappers.

Saturday Blow Fills Highways

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The Quinte district today was still shaking off the bruising effects of its latest battering from one of the harshest winters in years.

Work gangs were still mounting mopping-up operations on the hefty wake of a crippling storm which immobilized the entire area late Saturday night.

Whipped by steady winds, up to 10 inches of snow in the Belleville - Trenton area halted all movement on main highways, isolated rural areas and left travellers stranded.

Dept. of Highways crews, working round - the - clock since Saturday were still on the job today tidying up driving conditions on main traffic arteries.

A king-size snow removal chore faced urban communities while in rural areas some workers were reported travelling by snowmobile early today where country roads still were obscured by heavy drifts.

The storm reached record depths in some parts of southern Ontario and Quebec, disrupting air, train and auto traffic east of Lake Huron. Toronto hotels were forced to accommodate hundreds of extra guests as planes were diverted from northern United States airports.

Among the victims is believed to be Mabel MacNiven, 40, of Toronto, whose body was found in a field Sunday. Police surmise she died of exposure after she left her husband, two children and another woman in a stranded car to seek help.

In Belleville, the latest blow in a winter marked by snowstorms, will likely bring a request for more city hall funds for snow removal, cautioned city engineer Wilbur Purcell.

The storm's timing however, gave the district a day of grace to plow itself close to normalcy in time for a new work week.

Householders and local and highway clearance crews spent Sunday in a massive digout from under the overnight drifts.

The exact amount of snow was difficult to determine.

The weather office at CFB Trenton measured a 10-inch fallout.

In Belleville, seven inches was recorded at the city's filtration plant, but winds —peaking up to 38 miles an nour at Trenton — made exact records difficult to register.

The steady blow, swirling drifts across the district, cut visibility to nil, causing motorists caught in the storm to abandon their automobiles.

Getting His Kicks

Despite appearances Belleville Collegiate midget basketball player Barry Van Zoeren isn't trying for a football-style conversion in Saturday's BCI Midget Basketball Tournament. The Collegians took a 30-22 decision from Cobourg West to win the championship and then were forced to find accommodations for their opponents as 80 of the out-of-town competitors were stranded by Saturday's snow storm. Western Oil Firms Will Pay More for Persian Gulf Crude

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Major Western oil companies, promised an uninterrupted supply of Persian Gulf oil for the next five years under an agreement reached Sunday, are preparing for tougher price negotiations with Libya beginning this week.

Deputy Premier Abdul Salam Jalloud of Libya said during the weekend that price increases demanded by the six Gulf states were below Libya's minimum requirements. Libya and Algeria supply Western Europe with almost one third of its oil, and company officials said Sunday that Libyan oil at least might be cut off if quick agreement is not reached.

The Gulf agreement is binding on Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Iran, Kuwait, Abu Dhabi and Qatar, who supply almost half of Western Europe's needs and 92 per cent of Japan's.

Under the Gulf agreement, the posted price of light crude from the Gulf will go immediately to $2.17 a barrel, up 38 cents. Heavy crude will cost 40.5 cents more at $2.125 a barrel.

The agreement will produce an extra $1.200 million for the Persian Gulf countries this year and $11,000 million during the five years the pact runs.

Ending more than a month of difficult price negotiations, the agreement was signed nine hours before a midnight deadline set by the OPEC after which it said member nations would unilaterally enact higher prices and taxes by legislation. Failure by the companies to comply could have resulted in a shutdown of their wells.

Western oilmen said the agreement will push up costs of transportation and heavy industry in Western Europe and Japan because the higher prices will be passed on to consumers. This, they reasoned, will make U.S. industrial exports more competitive in world markets.

Noting that U.S. deposits won't last forever, a senior oil company official said:

"The current price trend may encourage the United States to start exploiting its shale oil deposits which until now has not been regarded as an economic prospect."

Quinte Digs Out

Provincial police said abandoned cars on Highway 2 had to be towed away because of interference with snowplowing operations.

The highway between Brighton and Trenton was impassable for 12 hours.

At Colborne, cars stranded across the highway halted two Voyageur Colonial buses.

Passengers on one bus spent about eight hours aboard the coach waiting out the storm, said a company official in Belleville. The second bus made it in to Colborne.

In Belleville, various travellers caught between destinations spent the night in the city.

Among the stranded were basketball teams from Whitby, Oshawa and Cobourg which had participated in a tournament at Belleville Collegiate.

A Collegiate spokesman said about 80 out-of-town players were billeted at homes around the city for the night.

Guests at a wedding party at the Belleville Shrine Club also were forced to find accommodation overnight. Because of plane cancellations at Toronto and delayed trains the bridal couple also had to postpone their departure from Belleville, said a club employee.

Overnight passenger trains from Toronto and Montreal arrived in Belleville up to five hours late, a Canadian National Railways official said.

At Belleville General Hospital some nurses worked double shifts Saturday night and Sunday morning. With nurses resident in rural areas stranded, colleagues resident in the city and part - time nurses were called on duty.

The response of the nursing staff was "exceptional," said a BGH spokesman.

One reported for work on a snowmobile. Anoher hitched a ride with a passing snowmobiler.

"The public were very helpful offering rides to any of our nurses they saw walking to work," added the official.

Near Stirling, a crew from City Ambulance used a snowmobile to rush oxygen to a rural resident feared to have suffered a heart seizure.

Provincial police in Belleville at one point alerted St. John Ambulance which operates a snowmobile emergency service, when the husband of a pregnant woman called from Trenton Township to say his wife appeared to have labor pains. The emergency was later cancelled, after the family doctor had been contacted.

In Prince Edward County a grader was despatched Sunday night to clear Picton streets for a woman being rushed to Prince Edward County Hospital. A highways department phone was also used in Hillier township Sunday morning to aid a local resident suffering a heart seizure. The plow cleared the way for a provincial police cruiser rushing the man to hospital in Trenton.

More than a foot of snow drifted over Prince Edward during the weekend, causing several schools to remain closed today.

A county works spokesman said most roads in the county were passable today.

A spokesman for the Picton Public works department reported all town streets open this morning. He described them as narrow and said that work crews will attempt to widen them today and to draw snow. He added that the snow is "a little heavy" at intersections but said that workmen will clear them in a "day or two".

The spokesman remarked that public works employees have worked around the clock during the past few days to keep streets open. "People will just have to bide by the times, we didn't ask for this," he commented, referring to the 13-inch weekend snowfall.

Snowmobiles, made available to local police by the Bay of Quinte Snowmobile Club in the event of emergencies, were not needed.

Belleville police sent for a snowmobile once — to take a stranded truck driver from Adams Street to a hotel.

In Trenton and Belleville this morning, traffic was flowing easily on all major thoroughfares after round-the-clock clearance operations.

One-way traffic was still reported on most Trenton side streets.

Meantime, the work of unplugging rural roads in many Hastings County Townships continued today.

On the Tyendinaga Mohawk reserve, all four schools were closed today.

Despite appearances, the snowfall in the Belleville-Trenton area has yet to reach its winter average.

The CFB Trenton weather forecaster said a total of 63 inches has fallen in the Bay of Quinte shoreline area so far this winter. The average is 65 inches for a full winter.

However, the fallout has been more severe in the district's northern townships.

At Bancroft, the lands and forests department reports 37.7 inches of snow in the bush — a record depth.

Snowfall to date in the Tweed area has been measured by the department at 103.8 inches — compared to an average 65.91 inches for a full winter. The last above-normal fall was the winter of 1959-60.

MEASURE MEDICINES CAREFULLY

When your physician instructs you to take a teaspoonful of a liquid medicine he means for you to do just that. He has calculated how much active ingredient will be in that teaspoonful of the prescription and taking more or less will possibly be extending the length of the illness he is trying to treat.

Follow all the directions on your prescription package for they are there for important reasons. The label will tell you how and when to take the medicine and how much to take. Sometimes it will tell you how to store it, what to do if you need more, as well as anything else your physician thinks you should know. Never keep a medicine bottle that does not have an instruction label.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service and charge accounts.

Premier-Elect

Young as Ontario Premier-elect William Davis is, he nevertheless has many years of experience as a lawyer, administrator and politician.

It is easy to recognize in the 41-year-old Mr. Davis many of the same qualities that enabled Premier Robarts to win party acclaim nine years ago and give the province stable government to this day.

His acceptance speech was a model of caution. He pointed out that he was making no promises other than to "maintain the principles, the integrity of our party, to recognize the necessity to move forward, to adapt to changes which are necessary to society and most important to recognize the need to win".

In talking of the need to win, Mr. Davis hinted that an election was not far away. One of his rivals for the leadership had suggested that the next election would be on the issue of free enterprise versus socialism and there is no doubt that the New Democratic Party, itself under the new leadership of Stephen Lewis, will be making a strong pitch to the electorate.

At present though the NDP, with 20 seats in the Legislature, still lags behind the Liberal party with 27 seats. The Conservatives, who have been in power in Ontario for nearly three decades hold 69 seats. The life of the present Parliament runs out in October 1972 so there is the possibility of an election being called any time between now and then.

Mr. Davis will assume the Premiership with criticism of soaring education costs ringing in his ears. As Minister of Education this was one of the hurdles he had to face in the contest for Premier. His chief opponent, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence was the first of his cabinet colleagues to criticize him, saying he would limit education costs to one-third of the budget. The Opposition can be counted upon to resume the attack in the next election.

From the Government's standpoint Premier Robarts' decision to retire has been a strategic one. Mr. Robarts, apart from a desire to return to private life and to his law practice, has said that nothing stands still in politics. At 54 he is still a comparatively young man, but at the same time he has sensed the psychology of the times and gauged accurately the rising strength of the left. In order to meet this challenge, and to give fresh life to his party, he has stepped down.

The next election will certainly be an interesting one. Meanwhile we might reflect once again on the rigors of politics, as manifested by the long drawn out affair in Toronto, and aggravated as it was by the failure of the mechanical vote-counting machines. But the future lies ahead and time waits for no man. Ontario needs continuing stability and good government. We believe it will get it under William Davis.

A Perfectionist

We were reading about that sterling Malayan fellow — a British Railways porter — who got too enthusiastic at dressing up Beckenham Hill station in Kent, sweeping up, trimming the grass and buying flowers out of his meagre pay. For his efforts, he has been banished (as The Daily Mail put it) to "the asphalt wastes of Blackfriars station, where no flowers bloom."

The trouble was that porter Yahaya Bahari found himself in court for brandishing his grass-cutting sickle at a passenger for dropping an empty cigarette packet on the platform. The Press, aware of the generally unkempt appearance of the British Railways station scene, put in a good word for Bahari who, incidentally, bicycled most of the way to England from Malaya ten years ago and whose ambition is to be "the best railwayman in the southern region."

Meanwhile Bahari is doing penance at Blackfriars, for how long is not stated, but for us it recalls walks along a chill, windy Fleet Street in winter to Blackfriars subway station.

It calls to mind also some other traditionally windy thoroughfares — Portage Avenue in Winnipeg, not to mention downtown Toronto on a stormy day, and some foreign parts too: Edinburgh's Princess Street and the gusty chasms of Wellington, New Zealand.

But there is nothing like a brisk (or even stronger) wind to make one feel really alive; for after all, did not the poet say "Blow blow thou winter wind, Thou art not so unkind as man's ingratitude . . . " As one Yahaya Bahari might have cause to feel right now, but then he sounds like the kind of man who will keep his head high, light a candle to curse the darkness, or even make a flower grow in Blackfriars.

Unanimity Lacking

UK's Common Market Entry Remains Doubtful

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — Backers of Britain's projected membership in the European Common Market have reason to be worried both over the progress of negotiations at Brussels and the state of domestic British opinion.

Official London is complaining about what it calls the slow pace of bargaining in Brussels, headquarters of the Common Market and site of the current talks on possible British entry.

Britain is blaming the six Market members for the alleged tardiness. But the pace of bargaining has not been helped by the confusion resulting from one vital aspect of the talks.

Geoffrey Rippon, chief British negotiator, is said to have given the impression that his country is prepared to concede ground on its original opposition to anything more than three per cent of the Common Market budget as Britain's initial contribution to the economic community's finances.

Now, Sir Con O'Neill, Britain's deputy negotiator, has issued a reiteration of the three-per-cent figure, described by President Pompidou of France as nothing more than an example of the British sense of humor.

All this is bound to encourage the "anti-marketeers" in Britain who have recently been intensifying their longstanding campaign against what they call the threatened sellout of their country to the Common Market.

At the moment this faction has to contend with the possible boon to the Common Market cause represented by the collapse of Rolls-Royce. The Rolls disaster convinced some observers in London that without a European partnership Britain is incapable of the huge effort needed to sustain such sophisticated ventures as making revolutionary aircraft engines.

However, pro-Market circles in Britain have little basis for believing that joining the European Economic Community—the official Market name—is currenly a popular idea with a majority of their compatriots.

That prominent student of majority feeling, former prime minister Harold Wilson, has lately lapsed into tactical silence on the Common Market question and is criticized in this connection by the left-wing New Statesman, which alleges that he has shown an uncharacteristic lack of leadership.

Conservative Prime Minister Heath has always been a staunch supporter of the Common Market idea. But there are suggestions that Heath is failing to give the Market idea mass appeal at a time when such anti-marketeers as MP Enoch Powell are mounting strong attacks.

In general it appears that Britons—now facing the task of switching to decimal from the old form of currency—are little inclined to savor the additional adjustments needed for entry into Europe, no matter how inevitable some groups in Britain may consider such entry to be.

Forestry Management and the Future

Victoria Daily Colonist

Some interesting points are made by an American forestry expert on the question of preservation of wilderness areas. He hits at those who advocate the keeping of more and more timberland in a "forever wild" state.

In an article in the New York Times, Fred C. Simmons says the advocates can't possibly realize the amount of grief they are piling up for future generations.

A 30 - year - veteran of the United States Forest Service and executive secretary of the Northeastern Loggers Association, Mr. Simmons says "disintegration and mortality" are inevitable for most stands of timber. And that goes for Douglas fir and redwoods, he says.

By not allowing them to be cut there is the distinct possibility they will become extinct. And the forester explains: sunlight is required for many of the more attractive species of trees to reproduce and grow; sunlight is deprived by allowing timberland to over-mature in dense growth.

This results in "inferior" species of trees taking over, and Mr. Simmons points to various locations in the east where virgin stands of white pine have been succeeded by hemlock and beech, and also the disappearance of birches, the pines and black cherry.

What he is advocating boils down to scientific forest management with controlled timber harvesting for increased productivity in the woods.

It is all very well to say nature will look after maintenance of the forests with thinning of timber stands through lightning-set fires and epidemics of insects and disease.

But growth and spread of population hits hard at this argument. Leaving the development of future forests to the process of nature would demand a complete departure from the woods by man. There could be no controls on his part of floods, fires or pests that were responsible, before his time, in the reproduction of many of the species of trees now enjoyed.

Could there not be a compromise? Instead of huge areas being set aside, perhaps the addition of many more smaller reserves of virgin forests, such as the Cathedral Grove area near the Alberni Valley, would satisfy.

Mr. Simmons would argue that they, too, eventually would become "biological deserts," but a system could be devised for the establishment of a series of cathedral groves in succession which would ensure wilderness areas for all time.

More on 'The Establishment'

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

As an occasional dissident in our not always perfect society, I found your editorial The Establishment, rather disturbing.

As the local press voice, you are part of the local establishment. As part of the "host of non-establishment people" I resent being branded as a Communist. Branding your opponents with a despicable label the majority of society are known to oppose is a well-known tool of pacts or oligarchies. By doing so you can often place your opponents into an artificial minority rather than as leaders of a respectable opposition with legitimate criticism of the establishment's use of power.

Violence should not be tolerated by any just, freedom-loving society. But how long can that society remain free and just if its men in power restrict freedom of speech, freedom of assembly and its public voice tries to brand all its critics as Communists.

To a large degree, a large majority of people are non-establishment, not having power, and many of these people are at least, non - establishment, anti-establishment. The members of Ontario's New Democratic and Liberal Parties are, and are "people who seek power for themselves".

We need men of great ability to form our establishments, but they must be men who can tolerate men of equal ability in the anti-establishment group and treat their opponents as partners in government, not opponents to government.

H. M. J. HALL

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Hall, we suggest, has over-reacted to our editorial. Of course there must be dissent; it is all around us today and provided it is orderly and constructive nobody can object to this legitimate democratic process. But dissent is one thing and anarchy is another, and it was with the anarchists who are out to destroy, whether for its own sake or in the interests of political subversion, with whom our editorial was concerned. As for the newspapers of our day, this one included, they are part of the community and citizens are free to take issue with any views expressed by them.

Community Benefits From City Yardmen's Fund

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

With regard to the write up on Feb. 10, this letter must be published for the benefit of our local citizens who at present are the main supporters of the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund.

The Fund's main object is to assist local non-profit making organizations in their fine work in helping the needy.

It is true that half the proceeds of sales go to lucky winners, the second half is used in part, to pay for operational expenses, and the balance of the monies go to the needy of Belleville and the betterment of the community.

The 10 members of the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund do not receive any remuneration for their services and are all working very hard to make their program a success.

In the sixth paragraph the report referred to "balance of monies being retained by the sponsoring organizations".

We suggest that this would lead the public to believe that the second half of the monies is kept by the organization for their use. In the case of the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund, the second half is all earmarked for charitable causes, after expenses, benefitting our local people.

It is suggested again that the sponsoring organization "benefit from local lotteries." Again we say that insofar as the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund is concerned, all profits are returned to local charity and local programs.

We are all proud to belong to this organization. We firmly believe that this coming year the city of Belleville as a whole will reap many benefits from this fund.

French Canadians And The Civil Service

Ottawa Journal

The opposition is not against the hiring of 250 French-speaking persons; not against the Public Service Commission implementing decisions of Cabinet; not against Cabinet Ministers keeping hands off the operations of the Public Service Commission.

The opposition, and some of Trudeau's own Liberals, are concerned about any scheme, advanced in the interest of bilingualism or any other good cause, which even seems to undermine the merit principle within the Public Service.

Of course there are still some who are utterly unreasonable about the legitimate efforts to increase the number of French-speaking public servants.

Newsprint as Fodder!

Kingston Whig-Standard

Nobody likes a newspaper with old news in it. Right? Wrong?

According to United States Department of Agriculture scientists, cows don't mind eating old newsprint — comic strips and all. The paper, however, must be served in a "salad" of molasses, hay and grain.

In the Department's magazine Agricultural Research, we are told that during feeding tests, newspapers were ground up and blended into rations ranging up to 24 per cent paper. At higher levels, the scientists no[illegible] additional molasses was ne[illegible]ed to make the food acceptable to stock. The rations also included ground timothy hay, soybean meal, cracked corn and minerals.

"Overall, newsprint did not appear to have any adverse effects on the animals studied, and up to at least 8 per cent can serve as a roughage substitute," the scientists report.

Now, that's what we would call really digesting the news.

CTC Ends Subsidies

Train to Stay But Meals, Sleepers, Must Pay—Or They Go!

Winnipeg Free Press

People in this country, and out of it, who hope to take a train trip across Canada this year (and there are some of us left) will be pleased with the Canadian Transport Commission's order to the CPR that its crack train, the Canadian, is to be kept running.

They will be less pleased however, at another recommendation: that the railway put sleeping and dining car services on a paying basis, or drop them inasmuch as subsidies for these services are to be discontinued.

At least half the enjoyment of a cross-country train trip lies in the eating and sleeping. (The other half comes from the sense of disengagement from the world that only a train trip can provide, and from looking out the window for hours at Canada's ever-changing scenery.) Sleeping in a roomette or even in an upper berth, as the train races across the Prairies or creaks through the passes of the Rockies, is a unique experience. Eating on a CPR diner has been one of the real enjoyments of life, from the standpoint of food, service and scenery.

And these are now endangered. If the CPR drops these services, nobody is going to travel by train and sit up in a day coach and make do at the coff[illegible] shop (if there is one) or lunch bars at infrequent stops. If the railway takes this course it will, in effect, if not in fact, be doing what the CTC is telling it not to do—withdrawing from transcontinental passenger service.

It will be almost as bad if the railway tries to make ends meet by reducing the standard of the service. The only other alternative is to raise prices for meals and sleeping accommodation. Unpalatable as this may be, many people would prefer it to either of the other two.

A Mixed Blessing

Individual Timetabling Hard for Some Students to Handle

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Individual timetabling — a tailored - to - measure - for-each-student schedule of courses and the hours they will be taken, is operating policy in Hastings county secondary schools.

It was hailed at its inception as the answer to individual differences and varied talents among the student enrolment in large schools. It allows each student to proceed at his own rate, to concentrate his efforts in the fields where his talents lie.

Individual timetabling, with one blow, struck out many of the evils deplored in the Hall-Dennis report on Ontario education. It eliminated the "lock-step" method of proceeding through high school at a pre-determined pace; it allowed students to drop subjects they didn't need or could not cope with, it allowed them to take non-credit "enrichment" courses in subjects of special interest to them; but best of all, it ended segregation of students in different streams that labelled them forever as "dumb," "average," or "bright".

But it's proving to be a mixed blessing.

"The adverse effects of individual timetabling outweigh the good," a group of students told their teachers at a seminar in Belleville Saturday.

"It's the greatest," said others.

"What it does to the relationships of students with one another — that's its weakness," declared Northumberland-Durham's director of education.

Because of the concern of teachers and students over the drawbacks of the individual timetable, it was a leading subject for exploration at the staff - student relations workshop conducted at Albert College this weekend.

A selected group of students, teachers, administrators and trustees attended the pilot workshop sponsored by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation and directed by E. J. Shipton, principal of Moira Secondary School. Four counties were presented.

Under the old system, a student was assigned to a course when he entered secondary school — a four or a five year course in either general arts and science, in tech, or in commercial. He then moved from subject to subject during the day with the class he had been assigned to, taking many of his subjects with his homeroom teacher.

Now the student sees his homeroom teacher and fellow students for a few minutes in the morning, then moves from subject to subject on his own, encountering a different group of people every 40 minutes during the school day.

The result, say senior students, is a loss of identity, of a feeling of security gained from being a member of the homeroom team.

"Individual timetabling has torn down old friendships, made me feel like a faceless nonentity," was the way one student explained his objections.

But a grade 9 student who had never experienced any other kind of high school schedule said she enjoyed the opportunity the individual timetable gave her to meet many other students in her school.

A teacher summed up the feelings of students in her discussion group:

"They said the worst problems of adolescents are insecurity and inhibitions," she said. "They need the crutch given by the old homeroom system. They also said early specialization is forced on students under the individual timetable.

"But it gives the student control over his own life," countered another teacher. "The challenge is there, if he can accept it."

Another group of students came up with personal observations on the types of students who do best under the old and the new systems.

People who are blase, cold and indifferent do best under individual timetables, they said. Warm people don't do as well.

"Extroverts flourish under the individual timetable, introverts are destroyed," they reported.

"The lonely kid is lonelier than ever before when he goes on individual timetabling," noted a teacher. "He is an outcast, he hasn't a friend. He wouldn't have one among the 30 members of his homeroom either, but he would feel more secure."

This brought a definition of "the loneliest kids in the school" from Frank Thom, director of education for the Northumberland — Durham board of education.

"They are the brightest kids in the class, who happen to be younger than their classmates," he said. "They are too young physically to fit in with the others socially, and they are too old intellectually to fit in socially with others of their own age and physical development group."

Individual timetabling will succeed only if teachers as well as students work overcome the difficulties it presents, the discussion group concluded.

It requires increased work and effort from the school guidance departments.

"Any school can devise means of building social relationships," said Mr. Thom. "It is up to administration. The principal sets the tone in a school, just as the director sets it for his system."

Prize-winning Plumbing

Snow sculpture comes in all shapes and sizes as the students of Nicholson High School have show here. The life-size toilet is non functional but does make a comfortable place to rest as these students show. Other activities at Zwick's Island included hockey games with the teachers, races, tug o'war and one very long sled run with an equally impressive jump at the bottom. After the day in the snow, the students returned to the school for a hootenanny that led into the evening.

Speaker Says Alcohol As Dangerous as Drugs

Why do people use drugs?

To solve the human problems that are best solved by other human beings.

"Problems are never solved by drugs," said Robert Gray, course director for the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario at a workshop at Albert College Saturday.

Mr. Gray, who sets up and conducts courses on the non-medical use of drugs for concerned groups across the province, told representatives at the staff-student relations workshop that, "adults are unconscious of the extent to which drugs are a way of life in North America.

"If schools are going to be involved in teaching about drugs, more has to be considered than youth and the non-medical use of drugs," he said.

"We must look at how our society has used drugs in the past — alcohol is the prime example," he charged. "We must look at the use of prescription drugs and at the use of over-the-counter drugs.

"We must look at why people use them, and how they use them. Alcohol, for instance, is used wisely and effective by many people, but it has an inherent danger."

Don't focus on the negative aspects of drug abuse, he cautioned. A negative approach runs counter to the experiences students have in observing their parents and their fellow students.

Not just students have to learn about use and abuse of drugs, he indicated.

"Teachers have to learn about its (drugs' and alcohol's) potentials in terms of benefits and dangers," he said. "The community has to become part of the learning environment too.

"North American society is conditioned to the non-medical use of drugs," Mr. Gray asserted. "We must bring it back into the conscious awareness of everyone." The long-term objective is the reduction of the over-all availability of drugs."

Even alcohol?

Especially alcohol, according to Mr. Gray.

"One million of Ontario's population of eight million is affected by alcoholism," he said. "That's one-eighth of the population. Alcohol is the most serious social problem we have.

"Most people don't realize that alcohol is one of the strongest psychotrophic — mood changing—drugs known to man," he said.

Mr. Gray has strong words about the medical use of drugs — especially those given by doctors only by prescription.

Doctors, he indicated, are too free in seeking a chemical solution to every medical problem.

He would like to see everyone educated to the point of asking a doctor each time he wrote a prescription: Why are you giving this to me? What does it do to me? And has it any potential ill effects?

Reminded that doctors have an age - old general policy of not revealing the nature of a prescription to a patient, and many have recently been proved to know little about the new drugs in their arsenal, Mr. Gray had a strong answer.

"If the population demanded answers, doctors would soon learn to give them."

Half Licences Still to Go

No person with 1970 licence plates will be able to drive to church Sunday morning, Feb. 28, if that is the only means of getting there.

The deadline for the new plates, one day earlier this year, is midnight, Saturday, Feb. 27. At that time, 2,157,563 vehicles should have been issued the new white on blue plates.

George Olsen, Belleville agent for the Ontario Department of Transport, Motor Vehicle Licencing office announced this morning that "we've sold just over 6,000 plates and have about the same amount still to go."

He reported that the number sold by this time was "about the same as last year" with a steady flow of customers keeping the office staff busy from Thursday to Saturday. As yet there have been no real lineups and business was slow for the first three days of last week.

The Ontario Department of Transport reports, by Jan. 31, more than 31 per cent of the total plates in Ontario had been issued, an increase of five per cent over the same period in 1970.

During the first nine months of 1970, more than 6,000 motorists were convicted of driving without current year plates affixed to their vehicles. The majority of the offenses occurred just over the deadline. Conviction can draw a fine of not less than $20 and not more than $100.

Registration fees for the 1971 plates are the same as last year . . . $35 for eight-cylinder passenger cars and dual purpose vehicles, $27.50 for six cylinder vehicles, and $20 for four cylinder vehicles. The fee for motorcycles and for antique cars with limited driving restrictions is $10. Licensing for the latter is available from the Ontario Department of Transport offices in Toronto.

Where the ownership of a used vehicle is being transferred at the time of registration, a certificate of mechanical fitness is required before plates can be issued. Vehicles previously licensed outside the province also require such a certificate before being issued their first Ontario plates.

CFB Dakota Finds Plane

TRENTON (Staff—Search ended successfully Saturday morning in northern Quebec for a Shawinigan man missing since Thursday.

A Dakota from Trenton's 424 Squadron picked up a distress signal from Andre Beaupre, 21, at 11 a.m. and a Voyageur helicopter from Ottawa moved in to rescue the man soon after.

Mr. Beaupre, an employee of E. B. Eddy Paper Co., had been flying his ski-equipped plane, a single-engined Taylorcraft from Shawinigan to Lac Nilgault, 40 miles north of Deep River, Ont., when he ran into a snow storm.

Low on fuel, he put his aircraft down on a frozen lake to sit out the bad weather.

Searchers were hampered by weather Thursday and Friday but when the storm lifted in the area Saturday, the missing man was found unharmed.

Form Plant To Expand

TRENTON (Staff) — Officials of Moore Business Forms Ltd. have announced a 20,000 sq. ft. expansion is planned to their 90,000 sq. ft. Trenton plant.

Construction of the addition to the Douglas Rd. printing works will begin in the spring of 1972 and will bring the Trenton operation to the size anticipated when Moore moved here in the early 60s.

Industrial committee chairman for the town, Paul Tripp, said he had been aware that Moore planned to increase the size of the north end plant — it was just a matter of when they would do so.

He said the company's decision to expand can be taken as a sign of confidence in Trenton as an industrial site and is particularly reassuring in view of present economic conditions.

Moore Business Forms now employ 120. With the expansion, they expect to hire an additional 180 employees by 1975. The firm also expects to be operating on a three, rather than two shift, basis by 1975.

Home and School Association News

QUEEN ELIZABETH

Queen Elizabeth Home and School Association met Tuesday for a program on psychological services, special education and guidance in Hastings County.

Parents and teachers who had met earlier in the class rooms, were welcomed by the Home and School Association president, George Botting.

H. R. Frink, principal, introduceed the chief panelist Mal Godin, co-ordinator of psychological services in the county. Mr. Godin, in turn, introduced the other panelists, Miss Pretoria Johnson, consultant for special education and Jack Dixon, curriculum consultant in guidance.

Mr. Godin outlined the program of psychological services beginning with a survey he conducted when he came to Hastings County in 1969. The survey was necessary to establish the particular needs of the many different communities in the county and the program was made accordingly. The psychologist works with teachers so that they in turn may help the hard-to-reach students, he has consultations with students and parents and where necessary arranges for a battery of tests to help diagnose the students particular problem in learning.

Mr. Godin stressed that no assessment is made until all the pertinent facts have been gathered from the student, his teachers, his school records. After a diagnostic assessment is made, the parents are called to the school to try to plan a program to help the student overcome his difficulty. Special education consultant Miss Johnson is called in to help plan special programs for slow learners, the perceptually handicapped, and the gifted.

Miss Johnson spoke next on the problems of children with learning disabilities. She described some of the characteristics and emphasized the need for firmness, patience, encouragement and an understanding, that the sight or hearing of some children is distorted. Miss Johnson stressed the fact that these children can be helped to overcome their learning handicaps and in a relatively short time if the handicap is diagnosed in the first year of school.

Jack Dixon, the third panelist, spoke on the role the guidance counsellor plays in school. He outlined three different types of counselling: group counselling in which society in general and the feelings toward others are discussed; testing and parent-student counselling. Mr. Dixon also showed a series of slides to create a sensitivity to young people and to illustrate the wide variety of homes, interests and needs of individuals.

Parent and teachers were invited to question the panelists following the speeches, and to chat further over coffee and cookies.

Stranger Questions Parenthood of Boys

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wouldn't believe this if it hadn't happened to me. The other evening my husband and I took our two young sons out to dinner. We were enjoying ourselves when suddenly a loud-mouth walked over to our table and said, "My wife and I have a bet. I say those two boys are adopted. My wife says they aren't." My husband and I were stunned. The man continued, "I'm sure I win the bet because you two are both dark complected and black-haired and the kids are fair."

I was so taken by surprise I didn't know what to say. I replied, "The boys are not adopted. They resemble my side of the family. I am the only brunet."

When the man left, the boys began to ask questions. My husband was furious. He said I should have told the slob it was none of his business. Although my husband is probably right, I feel that had I refused to answer his question the boys might have got the impression that perhaps they were adopted. Please give us your opinion. — H. T.

DEAR H. T.: Sorry. I'm with your husband. Strangers who ask intimate questions don't deserve a civil reply. After the man left you could then have pointed out to the boys what a rude question it was and explained that it is not unusual for two dark parents to have light complexioned, blond children, and vice versa.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently, a dearly loved, much admired and respected man died. He was an ideal husband and father, a community leader, financially successful and the sort of person everyone looked up to. After his death his wife and adult children went through his personal belongings — together. What they found was shattering and heartbreaking. They discovered a collection of pornographic magazines and books, stacks of obscene pictures and a suitcase filled with stag movies.

The family is crushed. They now feel his life was a sham — that he was a hypocrite. No one can understand it. How could a person have kept his true character so completely hidden from those who were so close to him? A prurient interest in sex is as unlike this man as night is from day. Please explain. — STUNNED IN CONNECTICUT.

DEAR STUNNED: It is not unusual for a person to have a private, kooky, compartment in his life — ranging from the slightly offbeat to the wildly bizarre. This needn't mean the person was evil or sinister. It merely means that in this particular area he had strudel in his noodle.

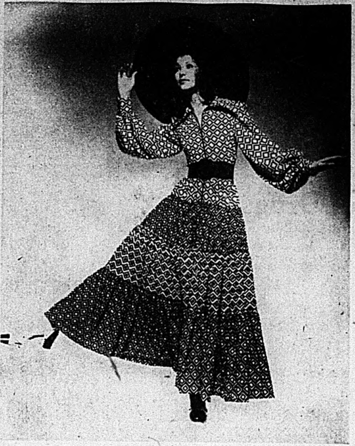
* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My cousin and I married brothers of European background. Our in-laws have been in this country for over 20 years. They speak good English when they want to, but they don't want to when my cousin and I are around.

Last night my husband was saying something to me in English. My father-in-law interrupted in their native tongue. My husband then responded in their native language and I couldn't understand one single word after that. I'm sure his dad told him to stop talking English.

My cousin and I have had several arguments with our husbands about this. We feel they should have enough respect for us to tell their parents to speak English in our presence. Our husbands refuse to do it. What's the answer? — TOWER OF BABEL.

DEAR BABS: You and your cousin should have long since learned some words in your in-laws native tongue. It would have demonstrated a desire to be bonafide members of the tribe. And it would have endeared you to them permanently. Get your husbands to teach you some words and phrases. Try them out on the in-laws soon. It will improve the relationship immensely.



FLOUNCES ARE BACK — A series of skirt flounces are featured on this fashion by Leo Narducci. Made of rayon crepe de chine, the chalkboard print is on a series of different color bases. Flounces, ruffles and tiers are making a comeback in Spring '71 fashions. (CP Photo)

Flounces, Ruffles and Tiers Back in New Spring Fashions

NEW YORK (CP) — Flounces, ruffles and tiers are back in the spring fashions—for those who are slim enough to wear them.

They appear on formal styling, such as Ceil Chapman's ruffle necked ankle-length plaid chiffon, and in casuals, such as Joan Leslie's flounced skirts in denim with a front-laced tunic.

Flounces infiltrated many of the designer collections in recent weeks, obviously more suited to cocktail clothes than street wear. Anne Fogarty showed a sleeveless dress with a short fitted jacket outlined with ruffles to complement the ruffled hemline of the dress. Adele Simpson flounced the hemline and shirred the neckline with three completely pleated tiers for an ankle evening dress in Qiana surah.

Indeed, as Malcolm Starr says: "Ruffles and ruching banish any hint of droop and drag in evening clothes."

Even casual calico prints receive the flounced treatment. Several such prints used a second ground color or even another print for the ruffled hem, neckline and wrists. Leo Narducci showed an elongated ankle-length shirt style in a chalkboard print, red-suede-belted. The hipbone top was a pale ground, with three graduated and deep flounces in different color grounds.

This combination of different color grounds or even different prints for flounces and ruffles makes for some eye-catching effects.

But even traditional styles and unexpected fabrics took on flounces. Jerry Silverman, for example, flounced the hem of a grey-and-white check coat-dress in a polyester knit. And Anne Fogarty introduced a group of imported fibrenes —silk-like linen—accented by fine tucking and ruffles.

Flounces have been spasmodically coming back into fashion over the last few years. Indeed in the spring of 1968 ruffles were everywhere. But previously, they appeared infrequently and would even fade entirely away for a few seasons.

Actually the frilly look had its greatest impact and popularity from 1850 to 1860 when dresses were ruched, pinked, scalloped, flounced and finished with ribbons, flowers, bows and lace.

Tiers were popular just before the First World War. The ankle length dresses were often a tunic style with a three-tiered skirt. Oddly, just after the Second World War, a startlingly similar fashion was started by the French designer Nina Ricci.

Tiers really did not reappear again until the spring of 1965. They carried over into 1966 when the full skirts burst into wide hemline flounces, tiers, pleats, deep front panels and trumpet godets.

This spring there is also a lot of pleating, sometimes sparingly on the sides, or all-over crystal pleating. This extremely fine pleating looks, in repose, as if there were no pleating.

This is true even of the ruffles and flounces in most collections. The styles are not too ruffly or too flounced.

Jeans Now Have Variety Of Styles and Colors

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jeans have come a long way since the days when they were synonymous with blue denims and were banned from some schools as unsightly, says an official of Monarch Wear of Canada Ltd.

Ivan Berkowitz, executive vice-president of the Winnipeg-based firm, said jeans, once manufactured mainly for North American cowboys, have become "a worldwide phenomenon" since coming to popularity in the 1940s.

"Girls now are wearing them to school instead of tunics that were ugly and uncomfortable from the point of view of warmth," said Mr. Berkowitz, whose company recently announced plans for two new pant plants.

One will be located in a renovated textile plant in Winnipeg and will employ about 100 people, and the other is set for Donnacona, Que. There are sewing factories in Steinbach, Portage la Prairie and Beausejour in Manitoba and in Thunder Bay.

"I think we are creating as many different ideas here as anywhere," said Mr. Berkowitz, gesturing at racks of jeans in a variety of colors and styles and made of materials ranging from denim to corduroy and velvet.

Committee Announces the Date Of Miss E. Ontario Pageant

The Miss Eastern Ontario Beauty Pageant committee has announced that the 17th annual pageant would be held on Saturday, March 27 this year, one week later than usual. The later date was decided upon to coincide with the high school spring holiday period in the province. This format will be used to determine the pageant date in future years.

Once again the event will be staged at the Perth and District Collegiate beginning at 9 a.m. in the morning with registration of contestants. The afternoon program is scheduled for 2 p.m. in the auditorium, with the evening finals at 8 p.m.

Orville Buchanan has again been appointed chairman and has expressed high hopes for the best pageant yet. The 1970 pageant was rated by the people attending as by far the finest and most successful in the long history of the event.

Bill Perkins is recording secretary this year and James Buchanan takes over the position of treasurer. Returning as director of public relations, publicity and advertising is Murray Stone. Mr Stone will also assume the duties this year of contestant chairman, in place of Mr. Perkins. Production manager is John Clement, and stage manager Gordon Gilhuly. Burke Brisson is in charge of stage lighting.

Mr. Stone noted that inquiries re the pageant have been coming in since last October, with interest apparently at an all-time high, following last year's eminently successful event. Information is going out across Eastern Ontario to all cities, towns and villages with regard to contestant entries. The territory covered by the pageant ranges from Deep River in the north along a line to Belleville on the south, and west, and all Eastern Ontario east of this line to the Quebec border, and south to the St Lawrence.

All girls 17 to 24 inclusive, and unmarried are eligible for entry. They may enter individually or may be sponsored by an organization group or individual. Entry fee is $15. Contestants do not have to be reigning queens or princesses to enter. One stipulation is that no professional models are permitted entry. Any student, teacher, secretary, store clerk, office worker, nurse, etc. may enter; anyone except professional models.

Politics Not Discussed At Home

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. William Davis, wife of the newly elected leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, says she and her husband spend little of their home life talking about politics.

Kathy Davis said in a weekend interview that she is deeply interested in political issues, but "Bill doesn't bring his problems home."

A native of the Chicago area and former kindergarten teacher in a Negro ghetto in California, she married M.R. Davis in 1963—a year after his first wife died.

She campaigned with her husband only on weekends, believing she was more needed at home during the week. The couple has five children—Neil, 15, Nancy, 13, Cathy, 12, Ian, 9, and Meg, 7.

Mrs. Davis, who met her husband while on vacation in Ontario's Georgian Bay area, said that she still is trying to get used to the idea of having her husband publicly criticized.

"He's been fortunate," she said, however. "He's been treated fairly. But of course there have been some problems due to circumstances . . . the cost of education."

The toughest part of the campaign, she said, was to resist the temptation to smoke. She quit four years ago "because I thought the children would be more likely to smoke if I smoked than if I didn't."

She said that meeting people during the leadership campaign and at the convention last week was easier than she had expected.

"I faced it with some trepidation, but I was suprised by the openess and friendly attitudes of everybody. Even the people not supporting Bill were straightforward."

The only unpleasant incident during the leadership voting last Friday night and Saturday morning came when a well-wisher almost trampled her in a rush to congratulate Mr. Davis.

The man jumped over the railing into the front row of box seats at Maple Leaf Gardens where Mrs. Davis was sitting. He bumped into her, knocked her against her seat, and kept going to reach Mr. Davis.

"He was only excited," she said. "But I was worried about the children."

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

PROCLAMATION

"Ontario Heart Foundation Week"

FEBRUARY 21ST TO FEBRUARY 28, 1971

This is "Heart Foundation Week". During the week of February 21st to 28th, 1971, the Belleville Chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation will launch an appeal for funds.

Heart disease can affect each of us. The disease can be, and is being, controlled, but this is only possible through medical research and an informed public.

The rate of progress towards the elimination of heart attacks and strokes depends on the funds available to underwrite the qualified and dedicated people who undertake this work in our university hospitals. In Ontario, your Heart Foundation has been asked to support over a million and-a-quarter dollars in grants-in-aid and fellowships.

Had it not been for the concerted drive in heart research over the past few years, life expectancy in Canada would not be as high as it is today. Many thousands of Canadians owe their lives to the doctors and scientists who have devoted their time and talents towards a better understanding of diseases of the heart and circulatory system.

THEREFORE, by the virture of the authority vested in me as Mayor of the City of Belleville, I do hereby proclaim the week of February 21st to February 28th, 1971, as:

"ONTARIO HEART FOUNDATION WEEK"

DATED at the Mayor's Office
this 8th day of February, 1971.

Successful Living

Cutting the Apron Strings After Marriage Pays in the Long Run

By DORIS CLARK

Sometimes it isn't easy to save up the down payment on a house. It may seem a needed economy to bunk in with parents for a while after marriage. But I suggest it is better to postpone the wedding than to live with relatives.

Goodness knows it is hard enough to adjust to the living habits of another person. (One young man says, "It just means giving in all the time.") Youth does better without the well-meaning interference of third, fourth and fifth parties. Cut the apron strings.

• • •

Dear Doris: I was interested in the letter from the middle - aged gentleman who is lonely, likes gardening and does not have any relatives. Neither do we. We often feel lonely for an older person. All our relatives are in Holland.

With five children, my time is filled with cooking, baking (which I love), cleaning and sewing. We are a bit old-fashioned and we want to live as real Christians, which keeps us humble and busy. In case the gentleman feels like meeting us, I will enclose our address. — Friends Needed.

Dear Friends: There are two ways of accounting for your lack of friends:

1. You are here from Europe, and hesitant to make the first gesture towards friendship with native-born Canadians.

2. You have recently moved into a strange community.

There are Dutch churches — if you want them — in your area, and there are quite a number of the Canadian kind. Link your family up with a new church home.

Then there are other recreation groups near you such as Guides, Scouts and Y's. Some of that good baking should be a natural ticket of admission to social affairs.

Setting up a bridge foursome could mean a regular night together with friends every two weeks. Get something good going for you.

• • •

Dear Doris: I read that an operation was performed on a girl which caused her to grow six inches in six months. A gland was taken from a donor who was in a fatal accident and transplanted into the girl.

What I would like to know is, is there such an operation performed in Canada, where and the cost of it?

I am 20 years old and stand barely five feet tall. — Too Short.

Dear Too Short: The very fact that the operation made the news indicates its rarity. The patient must have had something seriously wrong impeding her development. If you have reason to suspect ill-health in your case, your doctor is the one to consult.

Otherwise, there's nothing very bad about standing five feet tall. Good things come in small packages. A petite girl can be appealing and feminine.

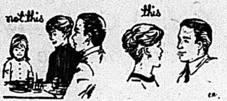
Tall girls have their hang-ups, remember.

• • •

(Doris has studied human behavior and can shed light on your dilemma. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Jenny, you spoil our dinner hour every night with your complaining and scowling. Why can't you be more pleasant once in awhile?"

Father: "I'm sick of all the fussing we have around here."

Mother: "Maybe Jenny is cross because we fuss at her so much at the table. I know I've been awfully critical of her lately."

Father: "I suppose I have, too, because I've been worried about my job. I'll try to be more pleasant."

Children usually respond to the manners and moods of their parents. Question your own actions if your youngster seems cross and unhappy with you much of the time.

Try This Homemade Pudding Mix

By MARY MOORE

Whenever I give you a homemade mix I am inundated with requests for more copies.

I think it is because they are usually half ready and in addition are economical.

Today's homemade pudding mix is basically blanc mange pudding, but besides the basic mix, obviously we have added the directions for making four different variations. Serve one per week for a while.

HOMEMADE PUDDING MIX with Four Variations

NOTE: This total amount when cooked in the variations given below and tomorrow will make 25 servings.

1½ cups corn starch
1½ cups granulated sugar
7½ cups skim milk powder
1 tsp. salt

Mix and sift corn starch, sugar, milk powder and salt three times. Store in tightly covered containers. (Betty used two 3-lb. peanut butter jars.) Sifted yield: 8¼ cups Mix.

NO 1: VANILLA PUDDING
(Serves 5)

1½ cups pudding mix (stir before measuring)
2½ cups water
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 tsps. vanilla
2 tbsps. butter or margarine

Measure pudding mix into top of double boiler. Stir in water slowly until smooth. Over direct heat bring slowly to boil and cook, stirring, one min. longer. Place over boiling water in bottom of double boiler and cook, stirring occasionally for ten minutes. Slowly blend some of the pudding into beaten eggs, then stir it back into remaining pudding. Cook and stir 1 min. longer. Remove from heat and add vanilla and butter or margarine. When cool enough pour into serving dishes and chill. Good served with canned sliced peaches or chopped nuts.

NO. 2: COCONUT PUDDING
(Serves 5)

Ingredients same as above with addition of ¼ cup featherstrip or desiccated coconut to the dry mix in first step of preparation. Method same as above.

NOTE NO. 2: See tomorrow for variations No. 3 and No. 4 — Butterscotch and Chocolate Puddings.

Russel Adds Finishing Touch to French Ski Picture

MONT STE. ANNE, Que. (CP) — It seems only fitting that Patrick Russel of France should have finished Sunday what three of his women teammates had started with such a flourish three days earlier.

Russel, 25; wound up the three-day Bank of Montreal International World Cup ski meet with a brilliant victory in the men's two-run special slalom after three French girls—Isabelle Mir, Jacqueline Rouvier and Francoise Macchi—had done surprisingly well for France Friday with a one-two-three finish in the women's giant slalom.

But in between the French victories, the weather, a pair of men from Switzerland and a sister tandem from the United States—Marilyn and Barbara Cochran—had all done their share to insert themselves into the spotlight.

Russel, while able to win two giant slaloms in Europe, had only a third-place special slalom effort to his credit earlier this season.

But he made up for the discrepancy in rare style Sunday when his runs of 47.37 and 52.58 seconds gave him over-all time of one minute, 39.95 seconds; one tenth of a second faster than Gustavo Theoni of Italy.

The victory also allowed Russel to vault into a 10-point lead over Thoeni in the men's World Cup standings. The French skier now has 125 points, 10 more than the Italian racer.

Before coming here, Russel had been in fourth place in the point standings, with 100, behind Theoni, and team-mates Jean-Noel Augert with 107 and Henri Duvillard with 103.

Augert failed to gain a point here when he failed to finish both the giant and special slalom.

In addition to Augert, Austria's Karl Schranz, World Cup winner for 1969 and 1970, failed to finish the same events. The Austrian remained well behind the field with 57 points.

Duvillard brought his total to 105 points with his eighth-place finish in Sunday's special slalom.

Alain Penz of France finished third behind Russel and Theoni with a time of 1:40:47.

Only 27 of the 62 starters finished Sunday's two-run down the 88-gate, 1520-foot course with its vertical drop of 620 feet.

Three Canadians—Jim Hunter of Calgary, Doug Temple of Vancouver and Russell Goodman of Montreal were the only North Americans to survive the heavy, wind-blown snow that threatened to wipe out the course during parts of the race.

Hunter completed his two runs in 1:53.23. Temple's time was 1:55.43, while Goodman clocked 2:00.53.

The weather had threatened to cancel the event. A severe sleet and snow storm Saturday night and early Sunday, accompanied by wind gusts up to 40 miles an hour, almost completely paralysed road travel throughout the province.

However road crews cleared a path the 25-mile distance from Quebec City where the skiers were billeted, to the mountain and the race got under way 90 minutes behind schedule.

Saturday afternoon saw completion of the two-run men's giant slalom with Switzerland's Bernhard Russi and Edmund Bruggmann taking first and second places respectively. Russi clocked a total time of 4:42.18 with team-mate Bruggman only six-one hundredths of a second behind. Austria's Werner Bleiner finished third at 4:42.35.

..Young Reto Barrington of Calgary was the top North American in the giant slalom in 13th place with runs of 2:14.95 and 2:32.32 for a 4:47.27 total.

Saturday morning, the Cochran sisters from Richmond, Vt., surprised with their one-two finish in the women's special slalom.

Marilyn, 21, put together runs of 42.75 and 39.45 seconds for a 1:22.20 total while her younger sister Barbara with 42.87 and 40.58 had an over-all total of 1:23.45. Austrians Wiltrud Drexel and Anne-Marie Proell were third and fourth.

Miss Proell took over first place in the women's World Cup points race from Michelle Jacot of France by picking up 19 points here while the French girl had to settle for one.

Miss Proell now has 142 points, Miss Jacot 133, Miss Drexel 108, Miss Mir 103, and Miss Macchi 102. Canada's Betsy Clifford is in seventh place with 64 points.

Miss Clifford finished eighth in Saturday's special slalom after a poor first run of 44.38 seconds. She recovered well and cleared the 48-gate second run in 40.85 for a total time of 1:25.23.

Judy Crawford of Toronto was 10th, Diane Culver of Montreal 15th, Dianaa Gibson of Toronto 16th and Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., 17th in the same event.

Miss Culver was top Canadian in Friday's opening giant slalom, finishing 12th while Miss Clifford was 16th. Marilyn Cochran and Thoeni were awarded the sponsor's trophy Sunday night as combined title winners in the women's and men's events.

Miss Cochran received the trophy for her special slalom victory combined with a sixth-place finish in the giant slalom.

Thoeni's award was for his second-place finish in the men's special slalom, combined with a seventh in the giant.

Towers Stumble On Second Step

Towers Food City Novices stumbled on their second step in the Prescott Tournament dropping a 4-1 decision to Cornwall to eliminate them from the competition.

The Belleville all-stars had opened play with a 3-2 victory over Brockville. Gary McInroy, Randy Cox and Mike MacDonald tallied for Towers in their opening round win, while Tim Coates picked up the only marker in their loss to Corowall.

Returning to regular league play Sunday, Towers got back on the winning track with a 3-1 decision over the Trenton novice all-stars.

Gary Frederick led the way with two goals, while Pat Willman added the other Belleville score.

Mulroney's Novice B all-stars proved to be too much competition for their Wayfare Restaurant house leage opposition coming up with a 10-2 victory.

Mark Crawford and Peter Fradette fired two goals each for Mulroneys with single tallies going to Kevin Meagher, John Henry, Tim Soule, Brad Miller, Steve Mofina and Bruce McBrien.

Terry and Rick DuPlain each scored a goal for the losers.

Meagre Fare For O'Neill Rivals

Competitors in the Toronto Winterfest snowmobile races couldn't accuse Belleville racer Mary O'Neill of being greedy — she didn't win everything at the major weekend competition.

However with $300 of a possible $320 prize money and nine trophies the local competitor did leave slim pickings for other women entries from across the province.

Mrs. O'Neill collected five first-place finishes and one second to emerge as the top over-all performer in the contest, including both men and women.

They were also enough to move her into first place in the combined Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation's point standings. The Bellebeen ranked first in the women's section.

Kinsmen Pull OMHA Chestnuts Out of Fire

The Kinsmen bantams came through in the 11th hour to take a 4-3 decision from Trenton in the biggest upset of the OMHA play-down series between the rival communities.

Bruce Sutherland's second goal of the game at 16.22 of the final period to give the Kinsmen their victory after Peter Crawford had pulled the Belleville team into a tie three minutes earlier.

The win evened the best-of-three series at one game apiece after Trenton had trounced the Kinsmen 7-1 in the opening game.

Steve Kirby scored the other Belleville goals, while Larry Doucette, Bob White and Allan McIntosh tallied for Trenton.

The Rollins peewees opened their best-of-three series in fine fashion with a 7-2 trimming of Trenton.

Bobby Crawford's hat trick supplied much of the winners' scoring power with Paul Hayman, Tony Meagher, Bob Thompson and Pat Mulvihill getting the other goals.

Richard Belzewski and Tim Hughes scored for the losers.

In the older age brackets Trenton managed some revenge with victories in midget and juvenile action.

The Blake Kerr Imperial midgets dropped a 5-3 decision to Trenton despite the scoring efforts of Russ Herrington, Rob Foster and Brian Cousins. The winners took a 2-0 lead in the five-game series.

No report of the juvenile contest was submitted to the Intelligencer, but it was learned that the Trenton junior ranks juveniles defeated Western Tire 4-1 to even their best-of-five series at one game apiece.

Oak Hills 'Bashed' By Oshawa

"Bill's Bash" proved to be a tough test for Nancy Greene competitors from both the Oshawa White Stars and the Oak Hill Ski Club.

The appropriately - named Oak Hill slope proved to be more hospitable to the visitng Oshawa team, however, as they emerged with a 145-80 decision over their hosts.

Larry Wilson was the top Oak Hill performer with a third place finish, while Larry Mayell (6th) and Dwayne Mayell (9th) were the other local skiers to rank in the top 10.

The meet was the final one of the season for the Oak Hill team.

Apollo Lifters All Win Medals

SASKATOON (CP-Staff) — There probably weren't many people in this heart - of - the Prairies city who had heard of Belleville before this weekend.

But after the weekend's weightlifting competition at the first Canada Winter Games, there were probably a few competitors and spectators who went hunting for their Ontario road maps.

Paul Barrett, Bob and Art Walt, and Ron Hayes — all of Belleville's Apollo Barbell Club — accounted for four of the nine medals won by Ontario team weightlifters. The Ontario weightlifters, all gold medallists from December's Ontario Winter Games in Etobicoke, each won medals in the nine - class competition here.

Brightest Belleville lights were middleweight Paul Barrett and light - heavyweight Art Walt, who each won gold medals. Flyweight Ron Hayes won a second - place silver Saturday, and Bob Walt added a third - place bronze in the hotly - contested middle-heavyweight division.

Barrett, a 21 - year - old in his final year of BA studies at Carleton University, compiled a three-lift total of 800 pounds to take top honors in the 165-pound middleweight class. He totalled 790 at Etobicoke in December, and has a personal best of 815.

Art Walt's winning 825-pound total in the 181-pound class was also up from his Ontario Games 810, but still 20 below his record.

Saturday, Edmonton unknown Darrell Shultz blocked Apollo's Ron Hayes' path to a gold flyweight medal. Schultz, a 17 - year - old who has been lifting weights only six months, got off to a 25-pound lead after the press, and hung on for a 490-475 edge over Hayes.

The Belleville lifter, only 16 in December, hoisted a record-tying 200-pound clean and jerk, but still fell short of Schultz's winning total.

Bob Walt ran the toughest competition in his bronze-medal-heavyweight finish.

Winner Wayne Wilson of Vancouver totalled 920 pounds, 30 better than Walt has ever done. Runner-up Claude April of Montreal recorded a 905 total.

Walt totalled 845 pounds to equal his winning Ontario Games effort.

The four Belleville competitors were scheduled to fly home today

Coming Round the Mountain

Bennett Smets, 14, rounds the marker flags with ease in the Southern Ontario Zone "D" Class slalom races held Saturday at Batawa Ski Club. Bennett, junior club champion, who lives at 21 Sidney St., Batawa, was one of 80 competitors.

Batawa Established On Ski Race Circuit

By KENNETH SMITH
Intelligencer Trenton Bureau

BATAWA — Saturday's Class "D" slalom races at Batawa Ski Club established the Quinte area on the southern Ontario ski zone circuit.

Usually, 'big name' clubs are chosen to host province-wide races but over the weekend Batawa went on the map too.

Eighty young racers and hundreds of enthusiasts converged on the slopes here leaving compliments behind as they left.

"We wanted the club to get a reputation and hopefully we are getting a good one" says Batawa Ski Club president John Cormack.

Club members were out 'til 2 a.m. conditioning the slopes the night before the races, and Saturday 30 more served as starters, timers, gatekeepers and scoreboard keepers.

"A club like this just cannot afford to host a racing event unless it gets lots of free help and we got it" club spokesman Tom Hudson enthused.

The host Batawa club had three racers competing Saturday: Leslie Ann Cormack, Bennett Smets and John Dekker.

Leslie, a 12 - year - old, placed 18th in girl's "D" class. Junior Bata club champion Bennett Smets, 14, was 38th among the boys, with 12 - year - old John Dekker 44th.

"The thing that has to be considered is that our kids are 3 years younger than most of the others" John Cormack says. Some entries were as old as 20."

Two Kitchener skiers took top honors in Saturday's events. Sixteen - year - old Kay Scroggins was top girl, Geoff. Todd, 17, top boy. Both represented Chicopee Ski Club.

Already the club is optimistic about competing again on the home slopes against Hidden Valley, Alpine, Georgian Peaks, Devil's Glenn, Toronto Ski Club and the other dozen clubs represented here over the weekend.

"We will have the races again. We'll have to. The kids will force the issue," John Cormack concluded. Batawa's junior racers have the racing bug and many years of competition ahead of them. It's only the beginning.

Referee Gives Aces' Coach Unexpected Wedding Present

KINGSTON — Coach Danny McLeod might have expected a wedding present from his Kingston Aces, but one from referee Bill Brethaur must have come as a pleasant surprise.

In the second period of Sunday's OHA Senior A game with Belleville, Brethaur awarded a highly-questionable penalty shot to Kingston's Bob Clayton. Clayton scored, and the Aces eventually won by a one-goal margin, 4-3.

Coach McLeod, married for the third time over the weekend, would have been highly-pleased with the two-point present from the Aces, which gave them a five - point bulge over the Mo-Hawks in the battle for fourth place. Oakville are in fifth, three ahead of Belleville.

The penalty shot came with the score tied 1-1 and the Aces hemmed in their own end on a Mo-Hawk power play.

Clayton poked the puck past point man Dave Jones and raced up ice with Greg Marchen in pursuit. Marchen overtook the speedy Kingston centre enough to hook him, but Brethaur motioned for the penalty shot.

Clayton beat Steve Rexe with a shot into the upper right - hand corner.

"I was right beside him" Marchen growled afterwards. "No way that was a penalty shot call," agreed Lionel Botly.

Pat Driscoll and Les Colligan traded first - period power-play goals, and Lorne O'Donnell's power-play score tied the game again near the end of the second period.

LES COLLIGAN

Two quick goals by Rod Graham and Charlie Convery broke up a tight game midway through the final period.

Colligan, the physical target for his former Kingston teammates most of the night, narrowed Kingston's edge to 4-3 with his second goal at 12.44.

The Mo-Hawks pulled Rexe — who turned in a fine 37-stop effort — in the game's final minute, but couldn't get the equalizer. However, the empty - net gamble didn't backfire on them as it did in their last visit to Kingston.

Already missing the services of Doug Senior and defenceman Lou Kazowski until the playoffs, the Mo-Hawks were even more short-handed Sunday. Defenceman Bob Wilson was snowed in at Havelock, and an ankle sprain sidelined winger Al Ferguson for the last half of the game.

Forward Wayne McConnell took five stitches from a first-period puck cut, but returned to action.

The Aces drew six of the Game's 10 minor penalties, several of them for stupid shots at Les Colligan.

The two goals by Colligan, who Friday spoiled Mike Lovett's shutout bid with 11 seconds remaining in a 6-1 loss to the Aces, gave the industrious winger 15 for the year, second only to Ferguson's 17.

A total of greater concern to the Mo-Hawks, however, is that of Owen Sound in the eight - team senior A standings. The Crescents picked up a big four-point win over Woodstock Sunday and now trail sixth-place Belleville by only four points in the battle for the final playoff berth.

Thump Cobourg 9-1

Fairways Have Goals at Heart

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

February 14th is supposed to be all sweetness and light, throbbing hearts and love. Some people aren't fooled by this exterior shmaltz however, guys like Bugs Moran and Vic Dabuzinskas know that some pretty awful things can happen to you on Valentine's Day.

Moran went through the traumatic experience of losing seven of his prime henchmen to a fellow Chicago mobster who wasn't in a lovable mood on Valentine's Day.

Dabuzinskas experienced only slightly less trauma last night as the Cobourg goalie was subjected to an eight-goal explosion as the Belleville Fairways enacted a 9-1 St. Valentine's Day Massacre on the Cougars.

Dabuzinskas, who has seen little action as the Eastern Ontario Junior B team's back-up goalie was the victim of eight unanswered Fairway scores, before giving way to regular netminder Mike J. Caine who yielded the final Belleville goal.

Mike Caine, namesake of the Cobourg netminder and the only player in the league to sport colored skates, ruined the Belleville shutout by darting through the home team's defence to score with just over two minutes remaining to play in the game.

Ron Jury was the victim of Caine's shutout spoiler. The regular Fairway netminder worked the first and third periods of the game, while back-up Arnie Istead held Cobourg off the scoresheet in the second period.

Neither Belleville backstop was over-worked as the Cougars abandoned their smash 'em, bash 'em style of play for a wide open game which proved to be right up Belleville's fairway.

Coach Floyd Crawford was naturally pleased with the outcome, but admitted that he hadn't looked on the game as a key contest. "I was really relaxed for this game," said the Fairway head man. "They know what I expect of them by now and it's up to them to do it. I was more interested tonight in watching individuals than how the team performed as a whole."

DAVE SMITH

One individual well worth watching was centre Dave Smith who fired three goals for the winners. Another was left winger Joe Clarke adding four assists to a two-goal effort.

The Belleville coach was particularly pleased with the improved showing of right winger Terry Meacher who picked up a goal and two assists in the contest. "He's getting back to the point where he can give that second effort, which is really his strong point," noted Crawford.

Among the other high flying Fairways were scoring leader Danny Lupenette, whose goal and four assists will almost certainly assure him of a berth among the league's top 10 marksmen. Defense - minded winger Doug James clicked for a pair of goals to round out the Belleville scoring.

On the blue line, second year man Kevin Dockrill did a fine job of moving the puck for a strong offensive showing.

The game was the final one for fifth-place Cobourg, while the Fairways have only a Friday night encounter in Trenton remaining in the regular schedule before meeting Peterborough in a playoff semi-final.

BCI Midgets Snow Under Tournament Opposition

Visiting teams to the sixth annual BCI Midget Basketball Tournament received a sthormy greeting in More ways than one Saturday.

The host Collegians stormed to the championship with four consecutive victories, while a 10-inch snow storm in the Quinte area stranded 80 of the out-of-town competitors.

The BCI midgets capped their tournament success with a 30-22 decision over Cobourg West in the championship game.

The winners, who held a narrow 17-14 lead at half time got a nine point effort from Barry Van Zoeren, while Russ Simonds added eight more.

Colin Basinger was the top pointgetter in the game hitting for 10 in a losing effort.

"The best part of our game would have to be our performance in the second halves," Brown. "I don't know if it was better conditioning or what, but we managed to break open our last three games in the third quarter."

Simonds was an offensive standout for the champions throughout the tournament, while guard Mark Gallupe gave a solid all - round performance, and forward Fred Cass turned in a strong rebounding effort.

Simonds pumped in a total of 54 points in the four tournament contests. All games consisted of four eight-minute quarters.

Brown praised the work of the teams "sixth man", Terry Donovan despite the low scoring totals of the BCI substitute. "Terry came off the bench in the last three games and really helped turn them around," Brown noted. "He didn't score too many points, but the ones he did make came at crucial times and he played good defence."

The approximately 80 players who were forced to spend Saturday night in Belleville because of hazardous driving conditions included the members of the Whitby, Cobourg and Oshawa entries. The first two were given accommodation in a local hotel, while Oshawa's Eastdale team was billeted with Belleville families.

The Collegians hadn't been quite so hospitable to Eastdale on the basketball court, handing them a 62-33 loss that eliminated them from further play.

In the consolation final Whitby's Henry Street Secondary School stopped Picton 41-31 to take the "B" championship.

Sorichetti led the winners with 11 points with Atkinson adding 10. For Picton Tim Barrett collected nine points followed by Jack McAlpine with eight.

A total of 16 teams were entered in the event, the sixth time that it has been held.

Manitoba Ice Muscle Prevents Winter Games Walkaway

SASKATOON (CP) — While mighty Ontario was making a walkaway of the Canada Winter Games, Manitoba, minus its top star, was showing plenty of muscle on the ice.

Manitobans amassed a total of 10 medals Sunday, bringing their haul to 15 since they started handing out medals Saturday in the 10-day winter spectacle which ends Sunday.

The 13-member Manitoba team won five of the 10 speedskating events which ended Sunday, without Sylvia Burka, Canada's skater of the year in 1970, a 500-metre specialist who is in West Germany training for an international competition.

"Just think what we would have done with our best skater," said coach Ron Marchuk.

Today is a quiet day for the athletes from the 10 provinces and two territories.

Only four medal presentations will be made, two in fencing and two in judo, compared with the 38 in the last two days.

Ontario, defending games champion, has already piled up 17 gold, 14 silver and eight bronze medals for a big lead over second-place British Columbia which has 8-7-9.

Manitoba holds third place in medal standings ahead of Quebec which has just eight and only two gold.

Gayle Gordon, 15, of Winnipeg, won gold medals in the 1,500 and the 500 metres, the only two races in which she was able to remain upright. In her other three races she fell and didn't place.

Ron McLeish, 17, of Winnipeg, helped the westerners retain the speedskating crown they won in the first games in Quebec City in 1967, also getting two gold medals in the 800 and 500 metres. Cathy Priestner, 14, of Winnipeg, took the other gold with a victory in the 400 metres.

Four of the 16 sports on the games program ended Sunday with everything wound up in speedskating, synchronized swimming, figure skating and weightlifting.

Ontario's strong figure skating team took the bulk of the medals, including the two top events, women's and men's A singles.

Daria Prychun, a 16-year-old blonde beauty from Toronto, won the gold medal in the top women's category with a dazzling display watched by former prime minister John Diefenbaker.

Robert Rubens, 19, also of Toronto, 1970 Canadian junior champion, walked off with the class A men's title.

Ontario showed its strength in weightlifting, particularly on the strong back of Russ Prior of Hamilton who overwhelmed all rivals to the extent that he complained "there was no competition for me here today."

His winning lifts of 1,015 pounds in the heavyweight class was 175 pounds more than his closest rival which earned him the tournament's outstanding lifter trophy.

Women's foils ended with Ontario parrying and thrusting to a perfect 7-0 record in the round-robin tournament. British Columbia finished second and Quebec third.

Jean Read, 38, of Toronto, won the individual gold medal.

Quebec made its presence at the games felt, winning two of the three gold medals in synchronized swimming. However, the team title went to B.C.'s eight-girl team with Alberta third.

Canadian champion Jojo Carrier, 15, of Quebec City, was a crowd favorite and she delighted them with a solo performance for which she earned a gold medal. It was her second gold. She won one in duet competition Saturday.

Preliminary rounds continue today in badminton, basketball, boxing and curling.

Ontario Teens Dominate Games Figures

SASKATOON (CP) — Ontario skaters won eight figure-skating medals at the Canada Winter Games, led by Toronto teen-agers Robert Rubens and Daria Prychyn.

Rubens, 19, took the men's singles and Miss Prychyn, 16, the women's A singles.

At the close of the eight-event meet Sunday night, the Toronto skaters repeated their gold-medal performances in an exhibition that drew rounds of applause from fans in the 3,500-seat arena.

Miss Prychun, 16, resumed her gold-medal performance after skating to the referee's bench to ask that the music be replayed from where it skipped a beat. The foul-up wasn't apparent to the 3,500 spectators at Saskatoon Arena, among them former prime minister John Diefenbaker and Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan, until Daria veered off from her performance to make the request.

Later, she admitted she may have been hasty in thinking the record needle had skipped. "But I got behind the music and I couldn't understand why. Maybe it didn't skip that much."

She said the disruption didn't upset her "and I don't think the judges counted it against me."

All of the five judges rated her first in the field of 17, although Linda Catrano, 17, of Edmonton, who placed second to win the silver medal, and third-place bronze-winner Madeleine Begg of Vancouver, were close on her heels.

Sheldon Page and Jane Clark, both of Edmonton, skated to the gold medal in the B dance, with Harold Constable and Gladys Gallant of Charlottetown winning the silver, and Vern Taylor and Dawn Thompson of Toronto the bronze.

Ontario skaters finished with three gold medals, three second-place silver, and two bronze. Their nearest rivals, British Columbia and Alberta, each had five medals. B.C. had two golds, Alberta, New Brunswick and Saskatchewan one each.

Lynda Catrano, 17, of Edmonton placed second behind Miss Prychyn, while the third-place bronze went to Madeleine Begg of Vancouver.

Rubens' victory was at the expense of his team-mate Roger Uuemae, who placed second, and Urs Steinbrecher of Edmonton, the bronze winner.

Gay Harder, 16, and Leah Currie, 19, both of Saskatoon, gave Saskatchewan its first figure-skating gold Saturday, by winning the B pairs.

They were easy winners over silver medalists Bob Dick and Wendy Berezowsky of Vancouver and bronze winners Alan Cherniak and Lynn Turk of Manitoba.

Naomi Taguchi, 14, of New Westminster, B.C., won the women's B singles. Patrice Black, 10, of Toronto was second and Zoe Lodge of Quebec City third.

Canada Returning To Hockey?

SASKATOON (CP) — Health Minister John Munro said Sunday night there is a chance Canada will enter the 1972 Olympic hockey tournament in Japan.

Munro, here for the Canada Winter Games, was commenting on a speech by Msgr. Athol Murray of Notre Dame College in Wilcox, Sask., at Friday night's opening ceremonies.

Msgr. Murray, long connected with hockey in Western Canada, said he would ask Munro to reconsider Hockey Canada's decision last year to pull out of international hockey.

The move was made when the International Ice Hockey Federation reneged on an agreement to allow Canada the use of nine pros in the world championships.

Munro said there is "a possibility" Canada will enter the Olympics.

"I think the Canadian people should be prepared to accept the fact that if we enter a team in the Olympics, they'll be amateurs," Munro said.

"We should not feel one ounce of injury to our national pride if we don't do well."

PEMBROKE (CP)—A Central Junior A Hockey League game ended abruptly after the first period Sunday when the arena roof threatened to cave in under the weight of a heavy snowstorm. An arena spokesman said Ottawa Rangers and Pembroke Lumber Kings were unanimous in deciding to call off the game when creaking timber in the roof began to collapse. A storm which began Friday had dropped 22.1 inches of snow on Pembroke and most other Ottawa Valley areas. The spokesman said city building inspectors were called in to look at the arena and they, too, insisted the game be halted. At least two beams in the roof had collapsed. Ottawa was leading 1-0 at the end of the first period. Asked whether the entire game would be replayed, the spokesman answered quietly: "We didn't stand around arguing that out."

OTTAWA ((CP) — Billy Joe Booth, veteran defensive end with Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League, said Sunday he has left the team and will go into private business in New Orleans. Booth, 30, said in an interview his decision was prompted by problems with the Rough Rider coashing staff and "a very good offer from an electrical supply company in New Orleans where I worked four or five years ago." He said he felt "the time had come" to find a new career. Booth, a 230-pound six-footer, had completed nine seasons with the Rough Riders.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard Petty humped his blue Plymouth past fading teammate Buddy Baker just 45 miles from home Sunday and won his third Daytona 500 stock car victory. Winner of 120 races and $900,000 in his career, 33-year-old North Carolinian averaged 144.456 miles an hour. One serious crash marred the event. Rookie driver Maynard Troyer of Spencerport, N.Y., flipped four times, blowing an engine after only 22 laps. The smoking wreck of the 1969 Ford scattered the asphalt roadway with debris. Troyer suffered a skull fracture and a broken hand. He was reported in serious condition. Petty earned $48,000 for his triumph.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Newcombe won the $62,500 Philadelphia International indoor tennis title Sunday as he snapped fellow Australian Rod Laver's 17-match winning streak, 7-6, 7-6, 6-4. Newcombe, who battled his way into the final by coming back Saturday from a two-set deficit to defeat South African Cliff Drysdale, won the first two sets in a 12-point tie-breaking game.

KITCHENER (CP) — An Orillia rink skipped by Vince Lebano won the Ontario mixed curling championship Sunday, defeating Stan Jones' Humber Highland Toronto rink 6-5 in an extra-end, final match. Lebano, with his wife Claudia as vice-skip and Jack and Barb Tyrell at lead and second respectively, will play in the Canadian mixed final in Saint John, N.B., next month.

PARIS (Reuter) — French driver Jean Pierre Beltoise has been asked by the French Motor Racing Federation to surrender his racing licence, the federation said in a statement Saturday. Beltoise has been charged with negligent homicide in Argentina after an accident during last month's Buenos Aires Grand Prix in which Italian driver Ignazio Giunti was killed.

'No Competition Here'; Prior Best of Meet

SASKATOON (CP) — Superb performances by seasoned veterans and relative unknowns highlighted weekend weightlifting competition at the Canada Winter Games.

Ontario was the big winner with four gold medals, three silver and two bronze. British Columbia was 2-1-0, Quebec 1-4-1, Alberta 1-0-1, New Brunswick 1-0-0, Manitoba 0-1-1, Nova Scotia 0-0-3 and Newfoundland 0-0-1.

Heavyweight Russ Prior of Hamilton won the two-day tournament's outstanding lifter trophy for performance based on body weight.

Prior's victory, however, wasn't especially challenging because his total lift of 1,015 pounds Sunday night was 175 pounds more than his nearest rival.

"There was no competition here for me today," the 228-pound Commonwealth Games record-holder said.

There also was middleweight competition Sunday, as well as the three other heavyweight divisions—light, middle and super.

In super heavyweight, for lifters weighing more than 242 pounds, Chris Darby, 16, of Lambeth, Ont., set three Canadian teen-age records despite only picking up a silver. The gold winner was team-mate Albert Yanko of Ottawa who lifted a total of 710 pounds, five more than Prior. The bronze went to William Pearce of Waverley, N.S., at 675 pounds.

Darby, after pressing 205, snatched 216 pounds to smash a record he set at the Ontario Winter Games in Toronto seven weeks ago by 16 pounds. In the clean and jerk, he lifted 285¼, easily surpassing his Toronto mark of 270. His total lift of 705¼ pounds was 35¼ pounds more than his Toronto record.

Wayne Wilson, 21, of Vancouver, was the middle-heavyweight gold winner with 920 pounds, 15 more than silver medallist Claude April of Montreal. Robert Walt of Belleville, Ont., won the bronze.

In light heavyweight, Walt's brother, Arthur, lifted 825 pounds for the gold. Second-place Gabriel Voisard of Quebec City lifted 795. A surprising third was Adam Nowak of Winnipeg. He pressed 265, but when a wrist injury first started bothering him, he snatched a poor 205, well below his capabilities. His clean and jerk ended at 280 pounds after the first attempt becausee f the injury, giving him a total of 750.

"I hurt it a coupl of weeks ago," he said, explaining he had been lifting with tight straps on his wrist. Asked why he didn't have a pain-killing injection, he said: "I had a shot just before I lifted (in the clean and jerk) but. . . ."

Paul Barrett, 21, of Belleville lifted a total of 800 pounds for the middleweight gold despite suffering hand and leg cramps.

Saturday, Pierre Charbonneau of Montreal set three senior lightweight marks en route to a gold.

"It wasn't that much," he said later. "I set 11 records at one meet."

Leeds Humbled 3-2

Colchester Pulls Upset of Century

LONDON (CP) — Colchester United, a lowly Division IV soccer team, pulled off one of the greatest shocks in the 100-year history of the English Football Association Cup when it humbled favored Leeds United 3-2 Saturday in the fifth round.

Leeds, at the top of the First Division, scored two late goals to ease some of the humiliation.

Ray Crawford shocked Leeds with two goals in six minutes in the first half and Dave Simmons put the 500-to-1 outsiders ahead 3-0 in the 53rd minute.

The capacity 16,000 crowd at Colchester spent the last half-hour biting its nails as Norman Hunter and Johnny Giles netted face-saving goals for Leeds, an effort that was too little and too late.

Colchester's feat overshadowed the six other fifth-round matches, but Fourth-Division Brentford came within 10 minutes of scoring a similar upset over the Second-Division leaders, Hull City.

An early goal by Bobby Ross looked to be Brentford's passport into the sixth round, particularly when Hull goalkeeper Ian McKechnie was carried off at half time. But Hull's non-stop pressure was rewarded in the last 10 minutes when Chris Chilton and Ken Houghton netted for a 2-1 Hull victory.

All the other major cup contenders won.

Nineteen-year-old Dave Johnson scored in his cup debut to give Everton a 1-0 win over Derby County while a goal by Chris Lawler allowed Liverpool to beat Southampton by the same score.

Tottenham Hotspur, cup winner three times in the last decade, won 2-1 over Nottingham Forest with first-half goals by Martin Chivers and Alan Gilzean.

The clash between Leicester City and Oxford United ended in a 1-1 draw, Dick Lucas netting Oxford's equalizer after Malcolm Partridge had given Leicester the lead.

Stoke City and Ipswich Town played a scoreless draw. Stoke forward Jimmy Greenhoff was carried off in the first half after being injured in a heavy tackle.

The two replays and the postponed FA Cup match between Manchester City and Arsenal will be played in midweek.

In a reduced First-Division program, Wolverhampton Wanderers [illegible] Chelsea into [illegible]g the London team 1-0 with a second half goal by Ken Hibbitt. Wolves have 36 points, seven behind Leeds and four behind second-place Arsenal.

Blackpool sank deeper in the First-Division relegation mire when it lost 2-0 to Coventry City. Blackpool and Burnley each has 14 points with Blackpool having played one more game.

Sheffield United jumped to the top of the English Second Division with a 2-0 victory over Charlton Athletic.

Aston Villa stayed at the top of the Third Division with a 1-0 victory over Rotherham United. Notts County widened its Fourth-Division lead to four points with a 2-1 win over Chester.

The fourth round of Scottish Cup play saw favored Celtic and Aberdeen both held to 1-1 draws. Celtic, reigning league champion, was tied on its own ground by Dunfermline. Cup-holder Aberdeen drew away to Dundee United.

Hibernian won an all-Edinburgh battle 2-1 over Hearts while Rangers moved easily into the last eight with a 3-1 triumph over St. Mirren.

Drew Jarvie of Airdrieonian stole the Scottish Cup scoring honors by netting all four goals in his team's 4-0 triumph over Cowdenbeath.

Hull Up to 546

Jet Passes Rocket In Career Goal Race

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull, Chicago Black Hawks' Golden Jet, has replaced Maurice (Rocket) Richard as the second most prolific goal-scorer in National Hockey League history.

Hull passed Richard Sunday night when he scored two goals in his team's 3-1 win over Vancouver Canucks and increased his goal output in the NHL to 546.

Richard, who retired from Montreal Canadiens in 1960 after scoring 544 goals in 18 seasons, had been listed second to all-time great Gordie Howe, the leading scorer with 782 goals and still playing for Detroit Red Wings.

Hull, 32-year-old left winger, exceeded Richard's total in his 14th season after joining Chicago as a junior from St. Catharines Black Hawks.

"It's always been Howe and Richard or Richard and Howe," Hull said in the Chicago dressing room. "Just to be mentioned in the same breath with them is a great thrill."

Hull, given a two-minute standing ovation by the Chicago fans, said:

"I don't know how many goals I had when Richard retired but it wasn't very many and I never gave a thought as to my ever scoring as many goals as Richard."

In other games Sunday, Buffalo Sabres defeated Philadelphia Flyers 3-2, Detroit blanked Los Angeles Kings 4-0, New York Rangers beat St. Louis Blues 2-1, Minnesota North Stars stopped Pittsburgh Penguins 5-4 and Boston Bruins dumped Toronto Maple Leafs 5-1.

Saturday the Leafs walloped the Kings 8-1, Montreal Canadiens downed California Golden Seals 5-2, Pittsburgh edged Chicago 5-4, St. Louis nipped New York 2-1 and Philadelphia and Minnesota played to a 2-2 tie.

Hull's two goals give him 36 for the season and with 21 games remaining for the Black Hawks in the 78-game schedule, it is possible he could reach the 50-goal mark—a milestone not unusual for him.

Hull already has scored 50 or more goals in a season four times, the last occasion in the 1968-69 season when he set an NHL record of 58 goals. Only two other players, Bernie Geoffrion, a Richard team-mate, and Richard, ever scored as many as 50 goals in one season. Each did it once.

Hull's first goal Sunday night came at 15:43 of the first period after Jim Pappin had given the Black Hawks a 1-0 lead. The Golden Jet scored again in the third period when he moved unmolested through the Vancouver defence and fired the puck past goalie Charlie Hodge, who had already committed himself when Hull moved in.

PHIL ESPOSITO

Ted Taylor scored for the Canucks, who now drop into the East Division cellar, three points behind the fifth-place Sabres. Detroit is in sixth place with 40 points.

Buffalo, the other new entry this season in the NHL with Vancouver, got a goal from Gil Perreault, their high-scoring rookie, in its win against the Flyers. Perreault's goal was his 29th of the season, only five goals away from the rookie season record of 34.

Perreault also assisted on a goal by Eddie Shack and the two points earned give him a total of 53, 12 short of the record for a rookie.

The Red Wings, with Jim Rutherford in goal, registered their first shutout of the season and also their first victory over the Kings in five games this season.

Rookie Tom Webster paced the Wings with two goals, his 21st and 22nd while the veteran Howe assisted on both and also on one by Ronald LeClerc.

Defenceman Brad Park scored his first goal in 16 games midway in the first period with St. Louis two men short and Dave Balon tallied his 33rd early in the second to give the Rangers their victory over the Blues.

Goalie Gilles Villemure had shut out the Blues until the final minutes when Jim Lorentz scored on a long shot.

Bill Goldsworthy continued his hot streak, scoring his 13th goal in the last 13 games in helping to lead the North Stars to their victory over the Penguins.

The win snapped a six-game winless streak for the North Stars, who scored three unanswered goals in the first 10½ minutes of play. J.-P. Parise got two of the goals in that outburst, one of them coming while Pittsburgh was shorthanded.

Brian Hextall, Andy Bathgate and Val Fonteyne each scored in the second period to narrow Minnesota leads but the North Stars held them scoreless in the third period.

The Bruins overpowered a Toronto team that the night earlier had coasted to an easy victory over the Kings. Centre Derek Sanderson scored before two minutes of play to give Boston a 1-0 lead and Dave Keon tied it for Toronto seven minutes later but that was all the scoring the Leafs managed.

Scoring leader Phil Esposito of Boston opened the scoring in the second period with his 48th goal of the season and the lanky centre now is two goals away from becoming the fourth player in NHL history to score 50 goals in a season. Esposito also assisted on John Bucyk's 35th goal of the season.

The Leafs could do nothing wrong Saturday night, scoring three goals in the first period and five unanswered goals in the second. There was no scoring in the third. Paul Henderson led the Leafs with two goals.

The Golden Seals scored on their first shot of the game against the Canadiens as Norm Ferguson registered his 10th goal of the season, but the Canadiens came back with five successive goals before the Seals could score again late in the third period.

Pete Mahovlich, who scored Montreal's fifth goal and his 24th of the season, also assisted on a goal by John Ferguson.

Phil's Pace Sizzles

Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr continued to set a sizzling pace in the National Hockey League's scoring race by collecting two points apiece in Boston Bruins' 5-1 win over Toronto Maple Leafs Sunday.

Esposito scored his 48th goal of the season and added an assist, his 61st, to left his season total points to 109.

Orr, who trails his team-mate by 18 points, picked up two assists in Sunday's game. Orr has 26 goals and a league-leading 65 assists.

The nearest rival to Esposito and Orr is fellow Bruin, Ken Hodge, with 33 goals and 48 assists for 81 points.

Hornets Clinch Pennant Despite Oakville Setback

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Galt Hornets clinched first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league despite a 5-2 loss to Oakville Oaks Sunday.

The Oaks victory, on home ice, came on the rebound from a 13-4 loss they absorbed on Galt ice Saturday.

In other Sunday action, Kingston Aces edged Belleville Mohawks 4-3, Barrie Flyers clipped Orillia Terriers 7-3 and Owen Sound won a four-point game against Woodstock Athletics 16-4.

The win left Galt eight points ahead of Orillia with Barrie third at 46 points. Kingston trails the Flyers by nine points with Oakville two points back, at 35, and Belleville holding down the sixth and final playoff berth with 32 points.

Jack Price sparked Oakville Sunday with a pair of goals to which Duncan MacDonald, Cal Russell and Ron Robinson added singles.

John Beechey scored two for Galt.

The Hornets got two-goal performances from five players Saturday as they took advantage of numerous power-play situations. The double goal men were Vance Millar, Ron Hergott, Howie Dietrich, Ron Smith and Fern Belanger. Bruce Reier, Cec Hoekstra and Billy Hway scored one each.

Fraser Rice, with two goals, Chuck Kelly and Russell were he Oakville scorers.

The Aces fired two third-period goals and got a penalty-shot goal in the second to present their coach with a wedding present. Danny McLeod was married earlier in the day.

Kingston forward Bob Clayton made good on the penalty shot after he was tripped on a breakaway by Belleville defenceman Greg Marchen.

JACK PRICE

Rod Graham, Pat Driscoll and Charlie Convery scored the others for Kingston. Les Colligan, with two, and Lorne O'Donnell replied for Belleville.

The Barrie win, on home ice, shot down any chance Orillia had to catch Galt.

Mike Dubeau scored twice for the Flyers and Pat Monohan, John McMillan, Pete Stoutenburg, Dave Luciuk and Fern St. Onge added singles. Tom McCarthy, Gary Milroy and Bob Cunningham scored for Orillia.

The four-pointer at Owen Sound resulted from earlier game postponements and gave the Crescents a slim chance to pick off the final playoff berth.

Dave McComb and Mayo Paquette scored four goals each, Steve Gavaris added three, Bill Abbott and Garry Vaughan two each and Dale Watson one. Gary Mitchell, Gerry Stringle, Mac Westgate and Gerry Harrigan filed the Woodstock replies.

Arnie Ends Win Famine

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, referred to by his fellow pros as The Man or The King, had just won the Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic, writing an end to the most frustrating period of his incredible career.

It was the 56th tour triumph for the most popular player the game has ever known, but the first in 14 months, the longest drought he has suffered in 16 years.

The 41-year-old Palmer won the tournament in dramatic fashion, rolling in an 18-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff with Ray Floyd after squandering a three-stroke lead in the 90-degree temperature.

Floyd shot a final-round 67, five under par, to catch him.

Palmer managed only a 70 and blew a chance to win i outright when a poor chip shot killed his opportunity for a birdie four on the 90th hole of the five-day tournament.

They went to the first sudden-death hole tied at 342.

Both drove into the left rough. Floyd came out about 15 feet from the pin. Palmer was short, about 18 feet. He stalked the putt carefully—and knocked it in.

ARNOLD PALMER

"It's all a question of confidence," he said. "I just gave it everything I had."

Palmer picked up $28,000 for the victory, putting his all-time money winnings over $1.3 million. Floyd collected $16,000 for second place.

Bert Yancey finished third, four strokes back at 346. He had a final-round 71. Billy Casper had a 70 for 348 and fourth place. Jim Weichers and Bob Rosburg, each with a 72, followed at 349.

Ken Fulton of Montreal pocketed $254 after finishing near the bottom of the field. He shot a 70 Sunday for a 361 total.

Which Day
Is Best?

☐ MONDAY ☐ THURSDAY
☐ TUESDAY ☐ FRIDAY
☐ WEDNES. ☐ SATURDAY

Advertisers frequently ask this question. Fortunately, there is no best day to advertise. Each day new wants arise, bringing new readers as old ones satisfy their wants. We recommend that you start your ad tomorrow and cancel it when you get results. After many years of experience with millions of want ads, we know tomorrow is the best day to start your ad and every day is the best day to advertise in Northern California's want ad leader.

Russia Lets Six Jews Go

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government is letting six dissident Jews emigrate to Israel and also is allowing Leonid Rigerman and his mother to go to the United States.

The Jews being let out include Yosif Kazakov, one of 40 signers last March of the first widely publicized protest by Soviet Jews trying to go to Israel, and Krayna Shur, sister of Gilel Shur, an engineer awaiting trial in connection with the Leningrad hijacking case.

Observers believe that the Soviet government is letting militant members of the Jewish community emigrate to Israel to render the leadership of the community less troublesome.

Jewish sources said Kazakov, an electrical engineer, is being allowed to take his wife, two children and his mother with him. Another son staged a hunger strike outside UN headquarters in New York, protesting the Soviet government's refusal to let his family go to Israel.

The sources said exit visas also were issued last week to Rachel Fedoseyev and her gentile husband Viktor; David Drabkin, an engineer, his wife and daughter; Edward Gurevich, a master plumber, and his wife Sara, an engineer; and Vadum Barshavsky, a radio engineer, with his wife and child.

The Rigermans were given permission to leave two months after the U.S. state department ruled that both Rigerman, 30, and his mother Esther, 61, were American citizens.

Mrs. Rigerman was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and married a native of Russia who had emigrated to America and become a U.S. citizen but said she did so under duress.

Rigerman, who has been working as a computer programmer, said he and his mother expect to leave for New York this week.

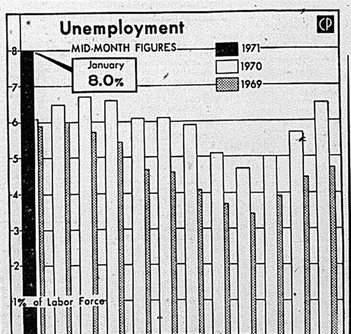
Rawdon

RAWDON — Several Rawdon men attended the machinery show at the Coliseum at the CNE in Toronto last week.

On Wednesday evening, February 3, the first meeting of the Mount Pleasant UCW 4-H club was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Hoard who was assisted by Mrs. George Grills. The new project of the club is "The cereal shelf".

On Saturday evening the February group of the UCW catered for the annual banquet of the West Huntingdon Presbyterian club. The buffet supper was served in the church hall with approximately 40 people in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy White and family of Granton are now safe at home after being stranded in London, Ont. due to bad driving conditions in that area. On Tuesday evening, January 26 their son Neal was snowed in at an isolated schoolhouse along with hundreds of students and teachers. He returned home by snowmobile on Wednesday.



Jobless Number Higher

The number of unemployed in Canada rose sharply in January to an estimated 668,000 or eight per cent of the labor force of 8,336,000, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the federal manpower department said Thursday. It was an increase of 130,000 from mid-December.

Your Car

Prompt Attention Necessary When Suspension Is Faulty

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"Can you settle an argument? Our car is five years old and the mileage is 45,000 miles. The body is sagging too close to the road. My son says this is caused by worn-out shock-absorbers. I claim it's the springs. What is your opinion?" — W. B., Rexdale, Ont.

When the car sits too close to the road it is due to one of several causes — overloading, weak or broken springs, or some other defective part in your suspension system. However, the most common cause is the springs. I assume you have standard shock-absorbers in your car, as you have not mentioned otherwise. There is a common misconception about this, but standard shock-absorbers do not suspend the body of the car in any position. This is not their function. Let me explain.

The body of the car which holds the passengers is suspended and insulated from the part of the car that contacts the road. This is done by a series of springs and rubber bushings. Without the resilient barrier, the [illegible] would dip forward and backward with every depression and bump.

However, to overcome this the body is resting on powerful suspension springs which force the wheels down to maintain contact with the road surface, while the body (in response to its forward momentum) remains at about the same level.

This creates a floating action that minimizes up-and-down bounce and makes for smooth steering and stopping. When the wheel hits a bump, the spring action is reversed. The spring absorbs the upward thrust, while the body remains relatively stable.

Now, we all know when a spring is stretched or contracted it will bounce up and down several times before coming to rest. The same applies to the strong suspension springs — so something is required to block this rebound action, which could, if severe, overturn a car.

To control this continuous spring action, it is necessary to use a shock-absorber on each wheel. This is a unit somewhat similar to the cylindrical silent closing unit attached to storm and screen doors. They are filled with fluid and by use of a series of valves hydraulic pressure is used to counteract the powerful rebound in the springs.

When you understand the function of springs and shock-absorbers, one can readily see the reader's problem can lie in the shock system.

I would advise a thorough inspection of your whole suspension system by a qualified service man. Since your car has driven 45,000 miles, and now probably has faulty springs, they in turn can damage the shock-absorbers which are buried in the undercarriage of the car.

Faulty suspension can damage other parts of your car, cause loss of control and serious accidents. It requires immediate attention.

Quebec Teachers Continue Series of Rotating Strikes

MONTREAL (CP) — The series of rotating strikes by Montreal's French-language Catholic school teachers moved into its fourth week today as their 9,500-member alliance announced it would hold study sessions.

The alliance said that a total of 42 of the city's 312 French-language schools and about 25,000 students would be affected. It added it would also continue its sit-in at the headquarters of the Montreal Catholic school commission and the regional office of the Quebec education department.

The presidents of Greater Montreal locals of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers were to hold an emergency session today to study what one negotiator termed "the government's totally unacceptable solution" to the problem of reclassification.

The alliance is disputing a decision by the MCSC to reclassify teachers at a lower level and to seek a retroactive refund of part of the teachers' salaries.

The announcement came following a meeting in Quebec City between Yvon Charbonneau, president of the 67,000-member Quebec Teachers Corporation and the department of education. The meeting was adjourned until Tuesday.

Mr. Carbonneau said talks broke off Saturday when government negotiators said they needed time to study the union demands on behalf of the Montreal teachers.

An official of the Protestant teachers said Sunday night his organization would join the QTC in a "well co-ordinated province-wide action" if, by Wednesday, the government's response was still unacceptable. Such action, he said, "would be regrettable, but necessary."

Schools under the Protestant school board of Greater Montreal are closed today, a school holiday. The board's teachers are scheduled to resume their walkouts Wednesday if there are no significant proposals from the government.

The QTC president said the only point the teachers and government agreed on was to stop all retroactive salary deductions.

Still to be settled was the matter of classification, which originally sparked the rotating walkouts last Jan. 25.

Newfoundland Teachers Are Working to Rule

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Teachers on Newfoundland's south coast Burin Peninsula began working to rule today while teachers in four St. John's schools remained off the job in a wage dispute with the government.

Walter Cull, president of the 6,500-member Newfoundland Teachers Association, said parents would be notified a day in advance of any further walkouts.

Other NTA sources said notices of withdrawal of services could be served today or Tuesday at schools in several centres across the province.

Classrooms were abandoned in the four St. John's schools Thursday when 115 teachers announced they would stay off the job indefinitely.

Other city schools were not affected.

Mr. Cull said today there had been no attempt by either side to resume negotiations which broke down Feb. 5.

The NTA is seeking an across-the-board increase of 19 per cent in annual salaries that now range from $1,600 to $11,000 in a variety of categories. The government offered increases of 36 per cent to the lowest-paid teachers and 12 per cent for those in the top bracket.

Mr. Cull said higher increases for low-paid teachers would destroy an incentive to improve their qualifications.

Earlier this year teachers voted 86 per cent in favor of a walkout if a wage settlement was not reached in a reasonable time. Negotiations began last May.

Teachers in 13 Burin Peninsula schools decided over the weekend to work to rule.

They cancelled all extracurricular activity and said only minimum classroom instruction would be given.

Steel Eaters Have Their Way; Red Heavy Industry Stressed

MOSCOW (AP) — The men Nikita Khrushchev called the "steel eaters" have had the decisive voice in preparing the Soviet Union's new five-year plan, the economic blueprint for 1971-75.

As in every plan since the first one in 1928, heavy industry gets priority in the ninth five-year plan, whose outlines were published Sunday.

Guns still have precedence over butter, and the Soviet standard of living seems as far as ever from the life of the average West European and North American.

The goals Khrushchev's successors have set appear "generally realistic" to Western experts, but they cannot be of much solace to the Soviet consumer.

The plan calls for the production of heavy industry to expand by 41 to 45 per cent with a slightly larger rate of growth—44 to 48 per cent—for consumer goods. But one Western economist judges that the spread between the two growth rates would have to be far greater to signal a shift in priorities.

The experts calculate that heavy industry now accounts for 60 per cent of the national income, consumer goods 20 per cent. If the upper limits of the planned growth for both are attained, heavy industry will account for 62.1 per cent at the end of 1975, while the consumer goods sector will represent 21.1 per cent.

While the general goals were considered to be "realistic," targets in some of the individual sectors appear to be optimistic.

The plan calls for a 20- to 22-per-cent increase in agricultural production in the next planning period. This seems to be based on the expectation that the grain harvest will average 195 million tons a year. But a record harvest in 1970 was unofficially estimated at 185 million tons, and it was largely the result of unusually good weather.

Another sector that seems to have been somewhat over-optimistically targeted is that of motor vehicles.

The Soviet Union produced less than one million cars, trucks and buses last year, half a million less than the goal.

The new plan calls for production of up to 2.1 million vehicles a year, more than double the present output, by the end of 1975. It is conceded that Soviet plants could be turning out a million automobiles a year by then. Trucks are the question mark.

Soviet officials have been negotiating with several West European firms for construction of a plant on the Kama river to turn out 150,000 trucks a year. It is not known whether the plan includes this production, but no contract has been signed.

Steel was assigned a target of 142 to 150 million tons a year by 1975, even though the 116 million tons produced last year fell short of the 124-129 million tons targeted.

While no allocations for defence were published, the continued stress on heavy industry reflected a steadily developing defence sector. All that the published directives said about arms spending was that "the defence potential of the Soviet Union will be increased."

Solution Proposed

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States, Britain and France have proposed to the Soviet Union that West Berlin drop its claim to be an integral part of the West German Republic, The New York Times says.

For this, the newspaper reports, the Russians would have to accept that West Berlin would retain "accumulated" political, cultural and economic ties to West Germany and be required to guarantee "fairly free access" to West Berlin.

The Times quotes sources in Bonn and Washington that the proposal had been submitted by the allies to the Russians at a meeting Friday in Berlin and that the West German government was willing to make the exchange.

The offer, it was reported, represented a compilation of a number of proposals that have been offered previously in private by the Western powers

Although a provision of the West German constitution states that Berlin is one of 11 states in the Federal Republic, the provision was not accepted by the Western allies when the constitution was promulgated.

The proposal, the newspaper's sources say, does not contemplate a change in the legal status of the divided city, which the Western allies regard as a "special area" as spelled out in the post-war agreements with the Soviet Union.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Laxative Habit Creates Problem

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I sure need some help. My problem is my bowels. It began 10 years ago when I decided to start taking laxatives. I am 49 years old.

At first an ordinary dose of laxative would be effective. But as time went on I had to take more and more, larger and larger doses. Finally I became completely immune to them.

I am now taking milk of magnesia tablets which are also beginning to lose their potency. I started taking 10 tablets three times a week. Now I take 14 tablets three times weekly. It used to require 14 hours for the laxative to work. Now it takes 20 hours.

I haven't had a natural bowel movement in 10 years. Eenmas don't work satisfactorily. When I try to go a whole week without laxatives I become terribly impacted. I had X-rays taken about six years ago. They were negative.

I am awfully worried. If these milk of magnesia tablets stop working I won't have another laxative to turn to as I've become immune to all other laxatives. I've used at least 20 different kinds through the years. I desperately need some help. I am writing to you as a last resort. — Mrs. G.

• • •

COMMENT: It's evident I can't formulate a general rule which will help everyone who has a constipation problem. I wish there were such a secret formula. I realize that constipation bothers thousands of people. Sometimes it is due to a spastic condition of the lower bowel. Or diet may be a factor — insufficient bulk. Some people take very little fluid. Drinking from six to eight glasses of water daily is often helpful.

But if you were to ask me the most important procedure to get the bowls back to normal movement again, I would say habit. By this I mean going to stool at the same time daily — unhurriedly.

In your case Mrs. G., constipation is so severe that I presume it will take many weeks or months to get back the normal bowel evacuation. What I mean is this. Choose a time when you are not likely to be interrupted by phone calls, or rushing to a business appointment, or catching a bus or taking your car to work. You must be able to "give your bowels a chance." At the same time every day.

You may not notice improvement early. Nevertheless, I consider this the number one tip I can offer. Going to stool regularly. Retrain your lower bowel to do what is expected of it. As for specific suggestions about medication and diet, better rely on your own doctor.

At times I am amazed at how many youngsters read this column. Grown-ups often have their problems, but too often keep them to themselves and suffer silently.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 11 years old. I weigh much over 175 pounds. My mother asked my doctor what to do He said nothing. I am very desperate. Please give me a diet. I really want advice because more than 175 pounds is too much for a 5-foot, 11-year-old girl. Don't you think so? Please, please publish an answer in the paper. I am desperate. — Miss P.

Comment: Tell your folks that if your doctor won't give you any advice, and passes off your extra pounds as unimportant, that you are very worried — and would like another doctor's opinion.

I'm sure they can find a doctor who realizes how desperate you are — and will give you a diet and any other advice to help you lose weight. Now is the time of life to begin losing excess weight.

ITU Strike Continues At Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Members of Local 91, International Typographical Union, on strike against Toronto's three daily newspapers for 6½ years, said Sunday they have made no plans to end the strike despite an announcement that union strike pay will be cut off.

More than 900 members of the union walked out of The Globe and Mail, The Star and The Telegram July 9, 1964, in a dispute about who was to control multi-purpose computers used for some composing-room operations.

About 250 of the men still serve on picket lines and receive strike pay of $117.90 a week. The union estimates it has paid $11.5 million since the strike began.

At a meeting Sunday, international union officials told the members they will no longer be paid strike benefits after May 1. The officials said, however, they will make arrangements to continue benefits for specific hardship cases.

Your birthday today: Intellectual insight and spiritual development are open frontiers in your life this coming year. Socially, your success depends on your tact and self-restraint. Today's natives frequently select rather narrow or special goals, then drive very hard to achieve them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be open for the unexpected in personalities and opportunities. A bright idea pays off. If you have a white elephant on hand, be alert for a buyer.

TAURUS (Apr. 20—May 20): People listen to you today — be positive in your comments. There is a better way of getting your work done, perhaps a short cut; find it.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You attract and involve others in all sorts of enterprises now, if you put forth the needed effort. Look ahead, see where you are going.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Unorthodox approaches to your work turn out better than expected. People are off-schedule wel-intentioned, full of surprises. Simplify home arrangements.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): A momentary crisis is in the offing this morning. Keep an open mind about whatever leisure time you have left over. Later hours bring good news.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Communication is the key to your progress. Windfalls, returns of money, resources, property are quite possible, or belated payments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Experiments are natural today. Distant goals are the most important factor. Routines and personal habits must change a bit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Follow intuition away from conventional approaches. Other people start in new directions — let them go. Be ready for a shift in your own tastes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Conservative reactionary talk from somebody is startling — avoid comment until you've thought about it. A career opportunity opens.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Credit for initiative is par for your course today. Family, close associates seem restless. Check on their spendthrift attitude.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Distant news brought to your attention from strangers pushes you into some decision. Be consistent with your previous theories.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Close deals, make agreements, clear your schedule of unfinished business. Collect or recover whatever is yours.

'Temporary Problem of Unemployment' Being Solved -- Trudeau

REGINA (CP) — The government's attack on "this temporary problem of unemployment" is working, Prime Minister Trudeau said Saturday night.

In a stout defence of his policy, Mr. Trudeau told 1,100 persons at a $25-a-plate Liberal dinner that some basic facts of life have to be faced squarely.

"None of them should be forgotten by those persons who race from coast to coast leaving behind the ma trail of inconsistent, unworkable and irresponsible theories as to how they would turn off unemployment forever, and create within Canada a society of low taxes and high welfare, low imports and high exports, low-cost housing and high-price incomes

"At the moment the chief contribution of these persons is low credibility and high volume."

The prime minister's speech came two days after figures showed 668,000 persons unemployed in January, an increase of 130,000 over a month

But, Mr. Trudeau repeated that the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate, calculated to take out the dips and peaks over the year, had declined to 6.2 per cent of the labor force from 6.6.

The speech climaxes a bustling two-day visit to Saskatchewan with 20 cabinet ministers who sped about the province, and joined the prime minister periodically to hear two farm group annual submissions.

On a previous visit to Saskatchewan, in the summer of 1969, Mr. Trudeau met a hostile reception from farmers protesting federal policies and heavy stocks of wheat badly damaged by moisture.

This time, on the whole, the reception was warmer and more polite. About 150 young people, mostly students, laid siege Saturday at the hotel where the federal team was hearing the annual submission of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

They camped for more than 1½ hours in the lobby.

Between farm organization talks and meetings with the provincial cabinet Saturday Mr. Trudeau made a one hour television appearance during which he debated the Bank of Canada and his job policies with Saskatchewan residents calling in by telephone.

His dinner speech, while ticking off unspecified critics, also emphasized that the Trudeau government does care about the unemployed.

"I cannot promise magical results anymore than I can promise jobs to all unemployed persons, to do so would be dishonest."

He added later: "The federal government is determined that we shall get over this temporary problem and will do so in a way which will not cause difficulties."

The government last March began to ease its anti-inflation austerity, he said. And the proof the government does care about the unemployed lay in measures to feed expansion in outlays to provinces, to Prairie farmers in housing starts and in increases for benefits to unemployed.

The results are "impressive and give every reason for optimism," Mr. Trudeau said.

Unemployment Costs $100 Million A Week -- Douglas

BRANDON (CP) — T. C. Douglas, national New Democratic Party leader, said Saturday unemployment is costing Canadians $100 million a week in lost production.

Mr. Douglas told about 300 party supporters attending a banquet in his honor that there is no reason for unemployment because there is plenty of work to be done.

"We could put people to work on much needed projects across the country and save money in the long run on welfare costs."

The government claims not to have money to spend on creating jobs, he said, but when Canada declared war in 1939 the government found ways to finance the war.

Belfast Is City of Fear, Anxiety, Intrigue

BELFAST (CP) — "Don't mention names over the telephone," said the caller as arrangements were made to meet underground leaders in the wave of violence that has hit the capital of Northern Ireland.

Large sections of this industrial and sea-faring community have never seen a bomb explode or a man slaughtered in the streets in peacetime. It is a city like any other city—until you reach the Roman Catholic slums.

The ugly, terraced housing, with interiors of peeling wallpaper and inadequate plumbing, seem to stretch for miles on Belfast's west side. In the ghettos, burned-out buses and trucks stand like tombstones in memory of endless, and some say senseless, struggles that seem only to add to Ulster's torment.

Armored and scout cars patrol the streets. In key Roman Catholic districts, the British army has posted lookouts to see who enters and leaves certain homes. Roman Catholics involved know they are under watch. They merely sneer and turn their backs.

By day and by night the plotting and counter-plotting goes on. Some residents say telephone lines are tapped by police. Names of certain persons are not to be mentioned in phone calls. Key "volunteers" of rival Irish Republican Army factions hold hour-to-hour meetings with their staffs.

Messages are conveyed mainly by word of mouth—whispers in a sleazy bar or a derelict house or a tiny back parlor in an anthill of workers' tenements. The head men of the IRA, officially outlawed but still functioning vigorously, seem to know the moment British troops start searching for arms in a Roman Catholic district.

The IRA goal is union of predominantly-Protestant Northern Ireland with the predominantly-Roman Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

To an outsider the atmosphere has the smell of Victorian theatre—until the dying and the dead are counted. Large parts of Belfast are unmolested. If you live in "a nice part" of town, you may only hear of violence and never see it.

But then darkness falls and anxiety increases. In some ghetto roads, armored cars block off traffic. Street lights have been shot out, adding to the feeling of isolation, concern and fear.

In the first 10 days of February at least nine persons, including one soldier, were killed. Scores of others were injured.

Floods Follow Rain Storm in Nova Scotia

HALIFAX (CP) — An icebreaker was scheduled to tackle an ice jam at the mouth of the LaHave River early today in an attempt to relieve flooding in the town of Bridgewater, one of several areas affected by a weekend rain storm.

A 100-foot span of the main bridge across the river in the town was swept away by rising water and ice floes Sunday, disrupting transportation and cutting long-distance telephone cables.

Amateur radio operators set up a communications system and traffic was re-routed to another bridge.

Officials hope much of the flood water will recede after the ice jam has been cleared by the department of transport icebreaker Narwhal.

Heavy rain, high temperatures, melting snow and overflowing rivers combined to bring on the flooding in low-lying areas, including sections of Truro, the Stellarton-Westville area and the Bedford-Lower Sackville area.

Bulldozers, front-end loaders and power-utility "bucket trucks" evacuated 75 persons from a trailer court in Stellarton Sunday after the East River overflowed.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Paperwork Swamps Police

For this new year, the New York City Police Dept. has requested a budget for operating expenses of a half-billion dollars. This is about four times as large as the gross budget of the whole United Nations.

And what is done with most of the money? About a month before the request, Mayor John Lindsay had an article in "The Progressive" magazine, in which he pointed out these salient facts:

"A policeman's place is in the streets, not in the station-house. But today policemen spend too little time as police officers and too much time on petty bureaucratic tasks."

Lindsay went on to cite a recent study in a medium-sized city, which showed that the local police allocated less than 17 per cent of their working hours to crimes against persons and property. More than half their time was taken up by "administrative assignments."

The result, Lindsay said, is that "even in the best police departments only one-tenth of the men are on the streets at any hour, day or night. The rest are often locked behind typewriters, turning out the 15th copy of a report that may become just another testament to another unsolved crime."

The medical profession is now, as a last resort, turning to the "para-medical" worker to help ease the load of too many patients per doctor; and is finding that trained technicians can perform many tasks that used to consume the valuable working-hours of doctors themselves.

But most police departments have not yet adopted this procedure. They have turned into huge bureaucratic bee-hives, where the paperwork too often takes precedence over the police work; where able-bodied men are performing duties that ought to be done by secretaries, by typists, or by apprentices.

When any system gets large, it begins to operate for the system itself, rather than for the purpose it was originally devised for. Hospitals tend to be run for the benefit of administrators and chief nurses more than for patients; schools for superintendents and principals more than for pupils; and police departments more for bureaucratic and political purposes than for preventing and detecting crime.

This is the nature of the institutional beast — especially in non-profit areas — and is no particular fault of the police themselves, who are trapped in this mountain of procedure and paperwork, so that human and social values become secondary to a tumorous mass of "departmental regulations" that proliferate much for their own sake.

Britons Use Decimal Coins

LONDON (AP) — Britain reluctantly yielded one of its most treasured traditions today, abandoning part of its 1,200-year-old money system for a streamlined decimal coinage that baffled many citizens.

Sales slowed down in many stores as wary shoppers paused to convert the prices in new pence back to the familiar shilling. Banks, reopening after a two-day shutdown to get ready for decimilization, asked customers who could wait to stay away.

Long lines of commuters got their first taste of decimal currency at ticket windows. A man in a London subway station handed back a two-new-penny piece, saying: "I don't believe it is real money."

The new currency is part of plans to put British weights, measures and amounts by 1975 on the decimal or metric systems used by the rest of Europe.

The pound is still worth $2.50, but it now is divided into 100 new pence, each one worth 2.5 old pence. Three new copper-colored coins—the halfpenny, penny and two pence piece—came into use, joining three silver-colored decimal coins—the fivepenny, 10-penny and 50-penny pieces—that have been circulating for some time. No decimal coins will be withdrawn during the next 18 months.

Although today was officially D Day, for Decimal Day, the railways and the London subway changed over Sunday. Crowds were small, and the switch went smoothly.

Some pubs also began giving decimal change, along with coaster mats printed with a money conversion chart for customers to pocket.

Alaska Tankers Would Not Enter Canadian Waters

VANCOUVER (CP) — American co-operation is Canada's only way of preventing supertanker shipments of Alaska oil down the coast of British Columbia, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Saturday.

Mr. Sharp said tankers carrying oil from Alaska to the refinery being built at Cherry Point, Wash., would move down the coast outside the 12-mile territorial limit and would enter Washington waters only. Cherry Point is about 12 miles from the Canadian border.

"I would hope the people of Washington would object, because if a ship broke up and spilled oil it could pollute the coast for a long time," Mr. Sharp said.

India Moves to Convene Laos Neutrality Board

Beefing About the Common Market

French permanent delegate Albert Thomasin moved a little to the right as he watched a cow "attend" the European Common Market agriculture ministers' meeting in Brussels Monday. Three live cows were brought into the meeting by angry Belgian farmers. (AP Photo)

Canada Wants Body Revived

VIENTIANE (Reuter) — Further moves will be made today to arrange a formal meeting of the International Control Commission on Laos — a three-nation group comprising Canada, India and Poland set up by the 1962 Geneva conference to guarantee the neutrality of the kingdom.

The head of India's delegation, who arrived Monday, said he planned to have discussions today with the Canadian and Polish representatives of the ICC. India is chairman of the ICC.

Canada requested that the ICC be reactivated following the South Vietnamese thrust into southern Laos last week to strike at the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Meanwhile, Laotian government reinforcements moved today into the northern base of Long Cheng, identified as a U.S. Central Intelligence Agency centre of operations, where a U.S. plane mistakenly bombed and killed up to 30 pro-government troops during a raid by North Vietnamese forces.

Laotian defence Minister Sisouk Na Champassak has said the government intends to hold on to the embattled valley base occupied by Gen. Vang Pao's American-trained army of Meo hill tribesmen.

Long Cheng, reported to be a focal point for CIA co-ordination of Vang Pao's operations against Communist insurgents in Laos, is about 50 miles north of Vientiane on the much fought-over Plain of Jars.

About 5,000 to 8,000 Meo tribesmen and about 20 Americans are at Long Cheng. Thousands of refugees have left in the last three weeks.

Fewer than 20 Americans were at the base when the North Vietnamese attack started with an artillery barrage at 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

Inside the CIA compound, a mess hall used by pilots and ground crew of Air American, a U.S. government-backed civilian airline, sleeping quarters and a club built out of concrete and wood were destroyed in the shelling.

Lao air force planes took off from the airstrip to attack the Communists, while a counter-attack was launched against the commandos on the ground.

About this time two or three American F-4 phantom jet fighter-bombers arrived from an air base in Thailand to provide added support.

A cluster of anti-personnel bombs from one jet fell short and exploded on the base.

CN Train Plunges Into River

BOSTON BAR, B.C. (CP) — Divers are to resume their search today for the bodies of three crew members missing after two locomotives and four cars of a westbound Canadian National Railways freight hit a rockslide Monday and plunged over a 200-foot cliff into the Fraser River.

A six-man diving crew from the Canadian Armed Forces base at Chilliwack searched the swirling, murky water without success Monday for engineer Victor Roy Penner, 42, fireman Donald Albert Dougan, 35, and trainman Donald Francis Barry, 33, all of Kamloops.

About 70 feet of track was ripped out by the slide and derailment, but the line was back in service early today.

The lead locomotive carrying the three men was submerged in the river! The other locomotive and the four cars were a twisted mass of steel on the jagged shore at the base of the cliff.

Two other cars of the 90-car freight were derailed, but remained upright beside the tracks.

A CN spokesman said the derailment was caused by a rock slide that covered 40 feet of track to a depth of six feet.

Yaremko Says Work Program Fails to Fill Need for Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's make-work program to ease unemployment is not doing the job, John Yaremko, Ontario's minister of social and family services, said Monday.

He said Ottawa must take the blame for the current unemployment crisis and therefore must mount an all-out attack on the problem.

Mr. Yaremko was speaking at a special conference on unemployment called by Toronto Mayor William Dennison. It was attended by members of Parliament and of the Ontario legislature as well as Metro-area civic politicians.

Mr. Yaremko said federal loan assistance to Ontario of $17 million for make-work programs was "really small comfort."

Such programs usually involve government construction projects created or timed solely to provide new jobs in time of unemployment.

Mr. Yaremko urged Ottawa to restore the winter works program which he described as "tried and proved to be first rate during the time it was in effect."

The winter works program was introduced by former prime minister John Diefenbaker but was discontinued by his Liberal successors.

Mr. Yaremko said that under the present federal - provincial social assistance program, a municipality has to pay for only 20 per cent of aid to those needing assistance because of unemployment. But, he protested, a municipality which wishes to create employment must pay the full 100 per cent of any such projects.

He said he has heard a great number of complaints recently about the number of people on welfare who should not be there.

"I've been telling them that the vast numbers ar there not because they don't want to work but because they have to be there," he said.

Mayor Dennison opened the conference by saying that unemployment in Metro should be treated as a "national emergency."

Calley Trial Resumes Today

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — The My Lai trial of Lieut. William Calley resumes today where it left off four weeks ago —with arguments over whether psychiatric testimony should be heard by the six-officer jury.

The 27-year-old Calley, a platoon leader in the March 16, 1968 raid on the South Vietnamese village of My Lai, is charged with murder of 102 Vietnamese men, women and children.

He is expected to take the stand in his own defence sometime this week.

Indian Chief Tries To Upset Indian Act

TORONTO (CP) — A hereditary Indian chief was unable Monday to get an Ontario Supreme Court ruling on the validity of the Indian Act.

Chief Joseph Logan of the Six Nations reserve near Brantford says the act is illegal because it is discriminatory and therefore against the Canadian Bill of Rights.

His lawyer, Malcolm Montgomery of Toronto, tried to challenge the act Monday but Mr. Justice G. A. Addy reserved the motion to a later date when Chief Logan and eight others face a related legal action.

The nine supporters of the 700-year-old Six Nations Confederacy Council, often called the hereditary chiefs, are engaged in a jurisdictional dispute with the reserve's elected band council.

Mr. Montgomery said in an interview Chief Logan's arguments are to be the first heard when the trial opens at Brantford in the spring or earlier in Toronto if it can be arranged.

Chief Logan argues that if the act is illegal anything done under it, including the 1924 establishment of the elected band council, also is illegal.

John Sopinka of Toronto, lawyer for the other eight, also argues that the elected council was set up illegally. However, he bases his attack on the anti-demonstration injunction on the contention that the Simcoe Deed of 1793 established the Six Nations as a sovereign and independent state.

Lemieux Will Act For Rose

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Robert Lemieux, granted bail Monday on a terrorist charge, received permission today to act as defence counsel at the kidnap-murder trial of Paul Rose.

Lemieux, 29, appeared in his lawyer's robes before Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols in Court of Queen's Bench.

Lemieux, who will face trial later on a charge of membership in the Front de Liberation du Quebec, formally asked permission to defend Rose and Prosecutor Jacques Ducros said the Crown had no objection.

Mr. Justice Nichols noted that Lemieux was in possession of a written mandate from Rose to defend the 27-year-old former school thecher, one of four men charged in the slaying of Pierre Laporte.

Liner Adrift Without Power

MIAMI (AP) — A tug was en route today to aid the former luxury liner Queen Elizabeth reported adrift without power in the passage between Cuba and Haiti.

The liner, rechristened SS Seawise University, radioed her agents Monday there had been a breakdown in her boiler system.

A coast guard spokesman said the liner was in no immediate danger and the tug had been dispatched from Miami.

The Queen left Port Everglades last week and was to take on fuel and supplies in Curacao, Netherlands West Indies. Her eventual destination is Hong Kong.

Britain and Russia Asked to Aid Laos

JAKARTA (Reuter) — Japan, Malaysia and Indonesia will make a joint appeal to Britain and the Soviet Union, as co-chairmen of the 1962 Geneva conference on Laos, to take immediate steps to restore peace there, foreign ministry sources said today.

Consulations are under way among the three countries to formulate the appeal, the sources said.

The sources said the three countries will ask Britain and the Soviet Union to take appropriate and effective measures to ensure the independence, neutrality and territorial integrity of Laos under the Geneva agreement of 1962.

They also will call for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Laos under the supervision of the International Control Commission, with members from India, Canada and Poland.

Hearings Open Today on Pipeline to Alaska's North Slope

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government opens hearings today on plans for an 800-mile pipeline to tap the rich oilfields on Alaska's North Slope, a project fought by natives and environmentalists.

The interior department scheduled hearings on an application by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. to construct the 48-inch-diameter tube from the North Slope to the warm-water port of Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska.

A related hearing will be held Wednesday by the Senate interior committee on claims by 55,000 Eskimos, Aleuts and Indians to ancestral rights to much of Alaska's land.

Alyeska officials say the native land claims must be settled before construction can start.

The pieline is blocked by two temporary federal court injunctions, one obtained by conservationists and the other by an Alaska native village in the pipeline's path.

The conservation group claims the pipeline, across federal land, would violate the government's environmental protection law. They claim friction of the rushing oil could melt the frozen ground, buckle the pipeline and flood the land with oil.

In addition, the group contends, the proposed pipeline would disrupt migration of Alaskan animals and destroy the native life style.

The injunction granted the native village is tied in with claims before the interior committee.

Official subject of the committee hearing is a bill by Chairman Henry M. Jackson (Dem.-Wash.), and other senators.

It calls for federal payment of $500 million to Alaska natives for land they claim. In addition, the bill would provide up to $500 million in royalties for minerals and oil found on the land and give the natives clear title to 10 million acres of land.

New Police Salaries Boost Budget

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Law enforcement costs in Belleville will take a jump of more than $150,000 this year mainly as a result of a new two-year salary contract approved by the police commission and the city police association.

Salary costs under the new agreement will amount to $639,852, up just over $100,000 from the $538,471 in 1970.

The balance of the increased police costs will be made up in increased clothing costs, vehicle supplies and repairs, staff benefits, workmen's compensation and pensions, all items over which the commission has little or no control.

An item of $15,000 has been provided in the police budget to take care of possible costs involving transportation of prisoners to the new central jail at Napanee.

The total police budget for this year is $845,696, as compared with $689,839 last year.

The report of the board of police commissioners was approved by council.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the increased police budget reflected the cost of two additional staff members and also of refitting the force with new approved revolvers or side-arms.

The salary increase for police this year amounted to between nine and 10 per cent, with something less than the above percentage increase again next year.

The new agreement will bring the salary of a four-year constable to $10,200, according to Mayor Scott.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said later that city police salaries were now on par with those of the Ontario Provincial Police.

The mayor said the police commission had bargained with the police in good faith, with the commission also making requests.

One of the items of contention had been the problem of police officers living outside the community.

Mayor Scott said there was a growing feeling across the province that police officers should reside within the municipality for which they work. Up to six members of the Belleville force live as far away as Ivanhoe or Trenton and could have difficulty in reaching the city in case of emergency.

He felt also that the police public image was improved if force members lived in the municipality.

Mayor Scott said the residence matter had been left out of the police agreement but suggested there was a possibility it might be included in police regulations.

With the new agreement, police salaries in Belleville are settled for the next two years but city negotiations with the fire department have not kept pace.

The city's 1970 contract with firefighters has still not been settled, and although the matter is to go to arbitration, the third member of the arbitration board is still to be named.

With settlement of the 1970 contract, the principals can go right back to the negotiation table to hammer a new year.

Grant Requests Heard by Council

It's grant request time again at city council.

Yesterday, council members heard two such requests — one from the United Community services, and the other from the Quinte Santa Claus parade Committee.

The United Community Services request, presented by president Robert J. Ord, asked city council for an allocation of $15,000 each year for 1971 and 1972.

Mr. Ord noted that each year social planning is being subsidized by more municipalities throughout the province, with nine communities either giving grants or planning to do so.

The request of the Santa Claus Parade Committee was for $500 to assist in staging the annual parade.

Both requests were referred to the city council budget committee.

Council to View CN Garbage Dump

Garbage and dumps and pollution were topics of discussion at yesterday's regular meeting of city council.

Mayor J. Russell Scott named a seven-member pollution committee with Alderman Mrs. Jean Smith as chairman and then promptly referred to its attention the matter of the CN garbage dump in the former Hillcrest area, and a letter on pollution from Wellington Crescent resident Kenneth Peoples.

Other members of the special pollution committee are Don Pyaklywec, Lyle Langabeer, Richard Bird, G. W. Keast, Alderman Donald Soutter and Arthur Keegan.

The Canadian National Railways waste disposal area north of Byron Street and east of the CN Campbellford line came up for discussion with the receipt of a communication from the railway asking for city approval of its dump by the city.

But as it turns out, not all city council members were aware there was a CN garbage dump in the Hillcrest area and they want to have a look before any decision is made.

It was noted that the city is being directed to discontinue use of its present land fill garbage disposal site at East Zwick's Island and, in view of this, no approval for the CN dump should be given without investigation.

Alderman Enos David said the CN dump apparently contravened provincial regulations with conditions existing which the city has been directed to discontinue.

Several aldermen said they hadn't known of the CN dump but Alderman E.A. Orr said that as a result of many complaints, he was well aware of the site.

And after investigation he said he was far from being satisfied.

The communication from CN indicated the dump was used for disposal of materials from car cleaning operations. No wet garbage is permitted and no burning is allowed. The disposed of material is covered periodically with earth fill.

Street Widening Plan Still Not Settled

Current scheduling calls for opening of the new Quinte Mall in North Belleville in early August, but planning delays and acquisition of necessary property for rights-of-way could cause difficulty in meeting the deadline.

This was indicated at city council yesterday when it was learned that the city still had to purchase the right-of-way for Bell Blvd. east from Sidney Street and that it still hasn't definitely been decided whether the street should be four or five lanes west of North Front Street.

Acquisition of road right-of-way is necessary before a 16-inch watermain to service Quinte Mall can be extended from Sidney Street.

Earlier planning by city staff called for Bell Blvd. to be four lanes, but consultants Damas and Smith now feel that five lanes are necessary — at an additional cost of approximately $29,000.

And as far as Mayor J. Russell Scott is concerned, the question is who is going to pay the $29,000.

He doesn't feel that it should be a cost to the general taxpayer when the work is for the benefit of the developer — in this case Cambridge Leaseholds.

However, he said Cambridge was already committed to an expenditure of more than $60,000 to assist in the provision of services to its shopping mall, this amount being in addition to local improvement charges to be assessed.

He suggested Damas and Smith and also representatives from Cambridge Leaseholds be asked to attend the next council meeting to explain why they now felt Bell Blvd. should be constructed as a five-lane roadway. Council agreed with the suggestion.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell said Damas and Smith had convinced him that the widening of Bell Blvd. was essential.

He felt that the Aug. 11 mall opening date deadline could still be met insofar as provision of water services and roadways were concerned.

Construction of the watermain from Sidney Street would be the first requirement and, if the roadway from North Front Street could be commenced by June 1, completion could be expected by Aug. 11.

Alderman Donald Soutter felt, however, that somewhere there must have been lack of liaison between the various parties concerned.

He said it was only reasonable to expect there would be some definite timing for each phase of the work requirement.

Otherwise he foresaw some difficulty in getting asphalt down by Aug. 11.

Student 'Mayor' Addresses Council

Student parliamenta have been common in secondary schools throughout the Quinte district for many years but it isn't often that elementary school children take an interest in parliamentary affairs.

But that is not the case at Prince Charles school in West Belleville, where the pupils have set up their own community organization complete with mayor and council.

And just to show that the council is aware of what is going on, the school mayor and his aldermen, together with their principal, turned up at Belleville city council yesterday to request Mayor J. Russell Scott to proclaim March 7 - 13 as Education Week.

The request was made by "Mayor" Robert Bunton, grade 6 student at the school.

Thanking the students for their presence at council, Mayor Scott said their approach to Education week was something new and refreshing.

He assured that the request would be considered and later in the meeting a recommendation was passed to proclaim Education Week.

Developer Gets Council Approval

A city developer has finally received an OK for the construction of apartments in the West Park Village area south of Progress Ave.

City council yesterday approved a Belleville and Suburban Planning Board recommendation that the area between Progress Ave. and the CN double tracks, which at one time was zoned for light manufacturing, be rezoned to permit apartments with a maximum density of 17.2 units per acre.

The request for rezoning was from Charles Lambert Ltd. and Almo Developments. Under the terms of the resolution, the developer is to pay a cash contribution for park purposes to the city.

Parks director Lloyd Syer said that a tot playground was planned for the area.

Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffrey questioned the advisability of allowing more apartments in an area which at the present had only one exit to Sidney Street and also whether it was safe to have a playground for small children so close to the tracks.

Mr. Syers said the playground would be surrounded by a four-foot-high chain link fence.

To the alderman's other question, regarding lack of exits to West Park Village, Mayor J. Russell Scott said this wasn't necessarily true.

He said another access further north (Cascade Blvd.) was being developed and that future planning called for a third exit to Wallbridge Road.

The request of Thomas Landers for a land split on property at the corner of Haig Road and Janlyn Crescent to allow construction of a tri-plex was referred back to the Planning Board.

March 10 Big Day For City

March 10 has now been set as the date on which Belleville city council will learn what recommendations have come out of the city's long-awaited downtown urban renewal study report.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said yesterday that the report would be given to members of city council in the afternoon at city hall, while the same evening it would be outlined to a public committee of 50 to 60 people at Corby Public Library.

Allen Brass, consultant for town planners Procter, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon, who did the city's urban renewal study, will present the report.

On Wednesday of this week council will meet in special session to consider the city's five-year capital works budget.

The city manager said he had already met with the Ontario Municipal Board with respect to the city's capital works program and expected no problems in getting the OMB OK following council approval.

Ad Policy Criticized

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Gazette managing editor Lindley Calnan yesterday criticized members of the chamber of commerce for extensive out - of - town radio advertising for Prince Edward's recent winter carnival.

"A different attitude for advertising is needed," commented Mr. Calnan. He said that, in his opinion, radio advertisements cannot bring results equal to the same amount of advertising in the local press. "Radio stations have a limited number of listeners," he remarked. "I say outside money should have been spent in the Kingston, Belleville, Napanee and Trenton newspapers."

Winter carnival chairman Archie Kingma replied that free publicity in the Intelligencer and the Kingston Whig-Standard was "fantastic." He added that radio publicity cost approximately $20.

Former chamber president Jay Hepburn pointed out that advertising in the local paper does not promote Prince Edward among outsiders

Chamber president Bernard Hepburn noted, "I feel that we shall try to use every merchant in this county number one and that includes your newspaper. Advertising will be split to the best of everyone's ability. I assure you any ads going for the good of the chamber will go to the Picton Gazette."

Ice-control Dam To Be Studied

Executive members of the Moira River Conservation Authority, along with members of city council, will go to Kingston Wednesday to view a scale model of the proposed Moira River flood control dam.

After viewing the scale model the party will return to Belleville and inspect the proposed Reid St. dam site just upstream from the Belleville Creameries.

Construction of an ice control dam to help alleviate spring break-up floods in downtown Belleville has been in the talk stage for at least two decades.

The dam was first proposed prior to 1950 by the conservation branch of the Ontario department of energy and resources with construction recommended at a site just north of the College Street bridge.

However, the heavy cost to the municipality under then available grants led to the project being shelved and only in recent years has it been revived.

Two years ago, a new survey of the river was conducted by engineering consultants Crysler, Davis and Jorgensen, who reccommended construction of an inflatable type dam structure at a site downstream from the College Street bridge.

The engineering firm claims the downstream site would provide a larger ice storage area and, being closer to the river mouth, would eliminate much of the frail ice conditions which contribute to the threat of spring flooding in Belleville.

The scale model of the proposed dam has been built by the engineering department at Queen's University where its operation is being tested.

New Jail's First Problem Could Be Lack of Capacity

The new four-county regional detention centre at Napanee may not be large enough to accommodate all jail inmates from the Quinte district.

This was the doubt expressed yesterday in city council by Mayor J. Russell Scott, who said there was concern over the limited capacity of the new central jail scheduled for opening some time in the spring.

He said the jail had capacity for prisoners from Belleville and Hastings county and possibly for inmates from Kingston but definitely not for the four counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac.

Construction of the new regional detention centre was a provincial responsibility, although advisory committees were appointed from each of the counties involved.

Belleville Alderman Gerald Joyce was a member of one of the committees but he told council he had no idea how the size of the jail had been determined.

He said no meetings for his committee had been called and he had not attended any.

"I don't know how they arrived at the size of the jail," he said.

'Belleville-only' Clinic Discussed by Council

The city's request for establishment of a family planning clinic by the Hastings and Prince Edward Health Unit has been turned down, but council could renew its request for a "Belleville - only" clinic.

Alderman Enos David, council member on the county health board, yesterday brought in a notice of motion to this effect, suggesting that the 25 per cent municipal portion of the cost be a charge against the city.

Earlier in the meeting, a letter from the health unit was read in which it was said the city's request for a family planning unit had been discussed, the decision being against establishment of the program and consequently it would not be included in the 1971 budget.

Mayor J. Russell Scott, said, however, that the decision of the health unit had been made mainly because of lack of information, not because of actual opposition to the idea.

Alderman Donald Soutter, however, said he found this difficult to understand.

He maintained that it was the health unit and not city council which could be expected to provide the leadership in such matters.

With seven such clinics now in operation by health units across the province, Ald. Soutter felt that all necessary information would not have been difficult to obtain.

He said the health unit should give council its reasons for turning down the city request.

City Council Plans Ahead

With five - foot snow banks piled everywhere about the city, summer would seem to be still a long way off.

But apparently it is still an appropriate time to think of Daylight Saving Time and yesterday Belleville city council did just that.

Accordingly, council passed the necessary by-law to establish Daylight Saving Time for the period April 25 to October 31.

Points For Pondering

The state of the media in Canada was a matter for thought on the part of Senator Keith Davey, left, and Moira Secondary School teacher William Hunt. The Senator, chairman of the committee that investigated the news media last year, was guest speaker at the annual Moira Grade 13 Day at Albert College yesterday. Mr. Hunt organized the day-long session of speeches and discussions for the 99 students participating.

'Apathy Is Enemy'

Senator Keith Davey Tells Students To Police What They Read, See, Hear

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The press in Canada — newspapers, radio and television — is threatened by the so-called "silent majority", by the people whom Senator Keith Davey calls the "soggy centre" of national life.

"The majority of Canadians favor some censorship of the press," the senator told an audience of 99 secondary school students at Albert College yesterday.

"These are the people who are unable to sort out events from those who report them — they would have us believe the media were responsible for the mass horror that gripped the country during the FLQ crisis last fall," he said.

Senator Davey, who headed the Senate committee that investigated the press and brought in the Davey Report on the Media in Canada, was a guest speaker at Grade 13 Day, an annual event for Moira Secondary School students held at Albert College.

"Public apathy is public enemy number one," he told the students. "Criticism of the report comes from the new left, the old right, but not from the soggy centre of Canadian life."

Recommendations in the report rank third in the list of its values, the senator indicated.

"The report's first value is its definite assessment of the state of the media in Canada in 1970 — its patterns and trends," he said.

Its second value was its role in beginning a national discussion of the media.

"We hope it has interested you in becoming concerned about television, radio and newspapers," Senator Davey told the students.

He called upon the students to become more intelligent consumers of the product the media sells them every day.

When the committee on the mass media began its work, is set as a goal determining whether Canadians have the press they need, or the press they deserve.

The committee concluded that because of the general apathy toward the media, Canadians get the press they deserve.

"Escalation of the quality of all messages of all media voices" will be the long-term result of his report, the senator said.

He offered the students a yardstick for judging the worth of the product they watch, listen to and read.

"The test of a good newspaper is whether it prepares its readers for the onslaught of social change," said Senator Davey.

The minimum requirement of a good newspaper is to inform, to entertain and to print the news, he said.

As an example he cited the FLQ crisis in Quebec. The press, in his opinion, did an excellent job of reporting all the events of last October's kidnapings and murder, but "it did nothing beforehand to prepare the people of Canada for those horrendous events that burst like a bomb on our national life."

Similarly, he said, the American press did a good job of reporting the events of the Black protest movement in the United States, but did nothing about reporting the way of life of the American Negro that led to those events.

"The press has ignored causes and effects and trends," he declared. "It has done nothing to prepare Canadians for events of the magnitude of the FLQ situation."

Because of the profits it makes, the press could do a better job for Canadians, the senator asserted.

"Lord Thomson of Fleet has said that ownership of Scottish television amounted to a licence to print money", related the senator. "Owning a Canadian newspaper amounts to the same thing, and you don't even need a licence".

Owning a newspaper is almost twice as profitable as owning a box factory or a department store, he said.

"I don't quarrel with the profitability of the press", he told the students. "But a majority of newspaper owners are taking a maximum out of their community and putting a minimum back in".

He called for an increasing pro-Canadian attitude in the media.

"I'm not anti-American, but I am pro-Canadian, and the Canadian media, especially broadcasting, must promote our apartness if we are to survive culturally", he said.

"Our purpose, according to the British North America Act is peace, order and good government. Theirs is the pursuit of happiness — a happiness—a psychic steeplechase that frequently leads to insanity".

The press has a responsibility to narrow the so-called generation gap and tune alienated young people back into society, Senator Davey said.

"The press is under attack, but so are politicians, the established church, women and young people themselves. Society turns them off — because people are better educated today, more affluent, because of the influence of television, the cold war and the decline of the established church. Young people cannot understand why social change lags so far behind technology."

The solution, indicated the senator, is the press taking the responsibility to interpret and explain the attitudes of the two groups, youth and the middle-aged.

The prime purpose of the report on the media is to rouse the public to action, he said.

"What are the owners going to do about the report?" Senator Davey asked his listeners. "What is the working press going to do about the report? What are your parents going to do about the report? Most important, what are you going to do about the report?"

Nothing very much, apparently.

Although he indicated that he was prepared to answer questions about the Senate, the underground press and especially questions from women in the audience, the senator had to repeatedly call for such questions before the students responded.

"OK, what about the underground press?" a student finally obliged after repeated prompting.

The senator responded that the committee deplored some of the language in the underground press, but admired its fresh approach to news dissemination.

Women's lib emerged as hardly a burning issue at Moira. After repeated urging from the senator, one female student finally asked a question.

A student told the senator that he wanted the facts when he read a newspaper, not editorializing in every story.

"I will read many papers with different slants, and make up my own mind," he said.

But his argument was quickly demolished by the senator, who asked him what he would do if he lived in a town, where the news was tightly controlled by the K. C. Irving interests. "Would you fly in the New York Times every day?" asked the senator.

Nor did the media feature as a topic in the post-speech discussion groups.

"What is there left to say?" responded one student when queried about the dearth of interest in mulling over the topic.

Another student said his classmates probably didn't want to be "centred out" by talking about the subject.

Davey Digresses

Senator Keith Davey, brought to Belleville to tell high school students about the state of the press in Canada, digressed over a wide variety to topics while he had the opportunity.

Quebec, the Liberal party, of which he is a former national president, the Senate and the Conservatives, all came up during his speech and discussion with Moira Secondary School's grade 13 students.

"We don't really know where it's at in Quebec," he commented. "Was the media used by the FLQ, or was it used by the government, or was it used by neither? Circumstances surrounding the events in Quebec during the FLQ crisis are still secret, so we don't know. But we will know eventually, when the top secret classification is lifted."

Although he disagreed with certain provisions of the War Measures Act, especially its making membership in the FLQ illegal retroactively, the Senator said he trusted Prime Minister Trudeau, "who knows more than we do about the situation" to do "the right thing".

"Until we move to redress the economic grievances of Quebec, we will continue to be in hot water," the senator said.

Quebec is "special" and will need special consideration for some time, he indicated.

"I'm a Torontonian, and I'm delighted Toronto doesn't need the help Montreal needs and must have," he said.

He gave the students his opinion of the reasons for the economic differences between English-speaking people and French Canadians in Quebec.

"Until the late 1950s, Quebec was a federal state," the senator said. "Business, commerce and Upper Canada were delighted to keep it so, because it was to their advantage."

The senator was pleased with the outcome of the Progressive Conservative convention.

"Al Lawrence is a personal friend of mine and would have made a good leader, but I was troubled by some of his statements toward the end of his campaign."

One, the senator said, was the Lawrence declaration cutting educational costs. The senator appeared to have no quarrel with William Davis's spending on Ontario education.

The other was the Lawrence attitude toward Quebec.

"Roberts understood Quebec ,and I hope and believe William Davis does too," Senator Davey told the students. "But I will vote for Robert Nixon in the next election."

provincial Liberals have formed fewer governments over the years than have Conservatives.

"Ontario Liberals engender great heads of steam for federal elections — more so than for provincial elections".

The Conservatives, he indicated, have concentrated on provincial affairs, "more Ontario Liberals gravitate toward federal politics".

After repeated urging, he finally goaded students into asking him about the Senate, and provided some statitstics that came as a surprise to them.

"The Canadian Senate initials 40 per cent of the legislation", he said. "It has a higher attendance record than the Commons and a higher calibre of speeches. A Senate committee (like his on the state of the media) can complete its work in 20 per cent of the time a Royal Commission would take, and do it for 10 per cent of the cost of a Royal Commission.

Much of the criticism of the Senate is generated because its members are appointed, not elected, the senator said.

"But people forget that senators are appointed by a government that has a mandate from the people".

The Senator deplored the way in which society now seems to be splitting into two different camps.

"I resent being asked to choose between Spiro Agnew and Jerry Rubin," he declared. "Social change is too important to be left in the hands of revolutionaries."

Summer Plans Prepared

Reports from Ottawa state that as much as $50 million will be spent this year in the handling of the student unemployment problem. This would be a considerable increase to the previous year's allotment of approximately $28 million.

The reason for the boost lies in the increase of students needing summer jobs. As many as a ¼ million students are predicted to be unemployed this summer.

The federal government realizes the problem and has begun measures to ensure as many jobs as possible for the students this summer. Programs are being set up that will accommodate all the needs of the youth of the country. Included in these programs are the erection of a youth village, perhaps in the Ottawa area, that would be along the lines of those pioneered in Europe. Also on the list there is a possible fleet of 25 buses that would carry transient youths across Canada, enabling them to see their country.

Isidore Cooperman, executive director, of the Belleville United Community Services stated that this summer everything possible will be done to aid the students of the area.

The Canadian Council on Youth Development described the unemployment situation as "explosive".

Because of this, the council is convening a three-day conference that will include agencies across the country in an effort to aid the students this summer.

Mr. Cooperman has been invited to attend and his comment was, "I will get as much for Bellevile and area as I possibly can".

The meeting will include government officials and agency representatives from all across Canada. They are going to discuss what can be done with transient and unemployed youth.

Surveys taken by the government will be discussed and the hostel system for youths will be one of the main areas of consideration.

Return Fund Kits, Chairman Urges

Harsh weather is believed to have stalled one of Belleville's annual fund - raising campaigns.

The campaign is the Ability Fund — once familiar as the March of Dimes — which raises money each year to aid the handicapped.

For the 1971 drive, provincial fund organizers detailed Belleville as a test area for a new campaign approach—and this, indirectly, has contributed to the problem of slow returns.

Until this year, funds were collected door-to-door in a one-night blitz by volunteer canvassers.

This year the canvassers have been replaced by the subscribers themselves. Donor kits were distributed among selected householders who were then asked to pass them along to their neighbors.

Indications are the new system is working — Mrs. Vera Morphy, Belleville campaign chairman, says many of the subscription kits already returned have shown "exceptional" results. In one street, where door - to - door canvassers raised $32 last year, the neighbor - to - neighbor campaign raised $78.

Problem is not enough of the kits have been returned—although most of them were distributed one month ago.

The campaign, however, has run parallel to some of the bitterest winter weather in years.

This, believes Mrs. Morphy has discouraged many householders from venturing out unless necessary.

Hence, distribution of the kits has been drastically slowed.

A main reason why local fund organizers are anxious for speedier returns is that the campaign is close to the starting date set for another community drive — this time the Heart Fund.

Mrs. Morphy says it's now urgent that the Ability Fund kits be completed and returned as soon as possible.

Drivers May Get First Aid Course

PICTON (Staff) — A compulsory program of first aid training for all Prince Edward bus drivers is under consideration by Prince Edward County Board of Education's Transportation Committee.

Trustes last night discussed a letter from the regional manager of the Eastern Ontario Region of St. John's Ambulance outlining two instruction courses. The first program offers a 14-hour course at a cost of approximately $11. per candidate. It was added that, if a group of drivers study this course under an agreement between the Workmen's Compensation Board and St. John's Ambulance, probably no payment would be required.

A second course in emergency first aid only is offered in a 7-hour program costing $5. per candidate with no Workmen's Compensation Board involvement to alleviate costs.

Business administrator for the county board of education, E. A. Shortt, told trustees that the Workmen's Compensation Board reecntly passed an act requiring first aid equipment in each school and one person trained in first aid. It was suggested that a maintenance worker could be trained for this job which supplies first aid treatment for members of the teaching staff.

Although trustees made no decision last night concerning the first aid program proposed for bus drivers, it was agreed to allow maintenance workers to study it.

Maintenance supervisor Frank Dulmage was instructed to investigate the time schedule of the course for maintenance workers. A specified number of these employees will study it at the board's expense in respect to time and mileage.

Touring Arts Program May Include Belleville

The possibility of Belleville becoming a part of the touring program of the Ontario Council for the Arts, enjoying shows on a regular basis similar to the Grand theatre shows in Kingston, was raised by Miss Anne Barr, consultant for the touring program, in an address to the Rotary Club yesterday.

Miss Barr praised the work of the Quinte Arts Council but noted that there was not too much local sponsoring of visiting groups. An exception had been the Rotary Club's sponsoring of the Canadian Opera Company and she said its director, Dr. Herman Geiger Torel, had spoken glowingly of the response here.

The Arts, said Miss Barr, do not pay for themselves in Canada, and consequently government subsidies were necessary. She said her organization was able to assist communities on a consultative basis as well as with subsidies.

Next month, she noted, Belleville would be host to groups from Ottawa, Cornwall and Peterborough for the Eastern Ontario Drama League's three-act play festival.

A native of Windsor who was educated in England and has had extensive administrative experience in London theatres, as well as in the United States and Canada, Miss Barr also expressed interest in the Rotary Club's coming Music Festival.

Festival chairman Joe Demeza said the adjudicators would hold workshops for piano and vocal music at Belleville Collegiate and St. Andrew's church respectively on February 26 at 9.30 a.m. These will be open to senior students and anyone else interested.

Dissent Via the Media

So Bernadette Devlin was unable to make it to Dalhousie University to give the students in Halifax an earful of Irish political talk.

The Irish have the gift of the gab and the militant young member for Mid-Ulster can be counted upon to give it all she has got. But here she was facing the realities of a Canadian winter. Miss Devlin, however, did not lack for a wide audience, for who should come to the rescue but the good old CBC, friend and handmaiden of many a dissenting voice around the world. It was Sunday morning and here was the CBC giving a lengthy slice of radio time to Miss Devlin and her plans for the establishment of a socialist republic of all Ireland. One of her objectives, incidentally, on this tour, is to raise funds for a socialist research centre she hopes to found in Belfast.

On the same program Canadians were treated to another five minutes or so of revolutionary talk by one Thomas Magill (or McGill), who was described as president of the Irish Republican Army. Now the IRA is an outlawed organization in both parts of Ireland, but here was the CBC giving it time anyway. And not only the CBC, but U.S. networks also have conducted interviews in recent days with spokesmen (backs to the camera) claiming to be members of the outlawed organization.

During the time we listened, we heard only one person allotted time to give any other viewpoint — a citizen who said the Government and military were right in acting to curb the fresh outbreak of IRA activties.

It came as no surprise to learn, from the CBC 9 a.m. news Monday, that Miss Devlin had been interviewed the previous night on CBC Weekend, a program we no longer watch because of its flagrant lack of balance, its similar bent for giving time to the prophets of dissent overseas without allowing equal time to Government or peaceful citizen spokesmen of the countries concerned, or time to the many positive, creative and constructive aspects of life in those lands.

Miss Devlin, it seems, had been asked about the FLQ crisis and the killing of Pierre Laporte. She could neither condone nor condemn the latter episode, she said, but sometimes people were driven by frustration to contemplate murder for political ends. True, reforms are needed in both Quebec and Ulster but just because a minority considers itself underprivileged is no excuse for murder.

No Government, it is well to remember, can tolerate anarchy by such a minority. Nor should Canadians continue to tolerate prominence being given to spokesmen from say the IRA, on the CBC, without equal time at least being afforded those charged with government of the country concerned.

The 'Joe Jobs'

Women's Lib, so far as we are aware, were not active during the Ontario leadership campaign. But Laura Sabia, former St. Catharines alderman and federal leadership candidate, was there to speak up for her sex. She says that women still get the "joe jobs" in political campaigns — like licking stamps, looking up telephone numbers, mailing, typing, telephoning delegates and so on.

Mrs. Sabia's daughter, who is a lawyer, said she would not lick stamps, so was assigned to look up phone numbers. Maybe she will feel better in the knowledge that men also handled these very same duties at the committee rooms of Mines Minister Allan Lawrence and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

We can understand the feelings of Mrs. Sabia's daughter, but who then should perform such tasks? Perhaps another time the young women who hand out campaign literature and are there also to lend charm and beauty to an otherwise male-oriented occasion could take on some of the secretarial chores as well.

Danger Ahead

We are not sure if there is an official law against hitchhiking in Ontario. Certainly the practice is widespread, and if there is such a law the police apparently turn a blind eye.

Nevertheless the intrinsic dangers of hitchhiking remain, from both the driver's and pedestrian's standpoint: the danger, for example, that a driver may pick up a bum steer, as it were, and end up in a ditch with a cracked skull, or that an innocent young person may be abducted and assaulted by some not so obliging motorist.

Then there is the hazard posed by cars stopping suddenly on a busy road, to pick somebody up. The overpass on Highway 14 south to Prince Edward County is a favorite staging area for hitchhikers and it is there that we have seen the dangers of sudden stops. On one occasion recently there was a driver who scarcely bothered even to pull into the side, but stopped almost on the crown of the road.

Instead of Free Travel and Accommodation

George Hees Has Ideas for Jobless Youth This Summer

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Something has been happening to the lid Prime Minister Trudeau once so proudly proclaimed he had clamped on "official" federal Government news.

Now "official" news is the stuff that has been cleared on high — and you know where "high" is in these political parts — up there on the second floor of the East Block behind a leather-padded door where reigns Pierre Trudeau, monarch of all he surveys.

The "unofficial" news is that stuff which — against all the Prime Minister's iron bound rules until recently enforced as rigidly as if they were the last and ultimate word, which they just about have been — somehow, somewhere and by someone, gets "leaked" out without the required clearance.

When this kind of news that-is-not-really-news because it has not the necessary official prime ministerial blessing filters out subterraneously, the content is not the pure 100-proof stuff.

In such cases what appears to be an official government program-in-the-making can be little more than somebody's bright idea of what the administration should — and perhaps even might — do if somebody sells the proposition.

In essence, it is still only a proposal — not a decision.

So, that was just about the size of it when it was made known, not long ago, that this summer the federal Government not only again would be setting up its cozy coast-to-coast hostel service in National Defence Department armouries for itinerant youth, but would be adding the comfort and convenience of free bus tours between these "holiday drop-in centres," courtesy, of course, of the taxpayer.

The Government, or more precisely, the Secretary of State Department, wondering what to do about the 250,000 college and university students who would be looking and likely not finding jobs this summer, asked some of the bright minds in the federal think-tank to toss a few ideas into the hat.

The "proposal" — for that is all it was — for the free country-wide bus tours, was one of them.

So, too, was the idea to make the armories for the second time a home-sweet-holiday-home for the young and foot-loose.

Neither proposition, now, likely is to work out.

And it just might be that this was the very motive back of the premature "leaking" of this proposal.

The object of the game being to toss it out into the hot draft of national publicity and see if it takes off or gets shot down.

Well, few trial balloons have been so quickly punctured and grounded.

You should have seen and heard the flak.

First with the anti-aircraft fire — shooting, perhaps, in instinctive anticipation and in a sense making a pre-emptive strike — was the Defence Association, essentially an organization of World War Two officers, active and retired.

Use the armories again as crash-pads for hippies?

No way, they said, and took the word straight, face-to-face with Defence Minister Donald MacDonald.

The "word" — nothing official mind you — is that the Defence Association may have won the day.

And now the Defence Department and State Secretary's Department are thinking along what are called "other lines".

These "other lines" could — but only could — involve working out some deal with provincial education departments and perhaps municipalities for use of holiday-empty schools for summer "crashing".

And won't that be something if they negotiate a deal.

Then there was the business of the bus tours. The Defence Association at the time had not heard about it, so there was no flak there.

But it went up in a curtain of fire from a dozen other directions.

One of the sharpest marksmen was Prince Edward — Hastings Conservative MP George Hees, former World War Two brigade major of the Fifth Infantry Brigade.

Old combat veteran Hees knew better than to mount a frontal assault on the proposal, but instead executed a flank attack.

He may have buried the idea of the transcontinental bus service under a blitz of alternative, and far better alternative, suggestions.

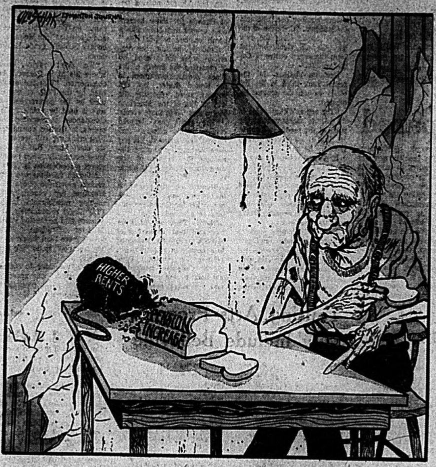
Among them:

Use the bus and hostel money to help farmers hire students. Thousands of farmers are desperate for hired help, but wages are too high, prices too low. So make it possible with federal funds.

How about spending the $50 million "proposed" for hostels, bus service and other fun things instead on park and recreation conservation: brush-clearing, tree-planting, beach and stream clean-up?

Or perhaps, in some federal-provincial-municipal co-operative tidy-up, clean-up, paint-up project?

No shortage, insists George Hees, of good, useful and productive ways to employ jobless youth this summer other than bussing them about the country, hostel to hostel.



A Chance for Ottawa To Halt Seal Slaughter

Windsor Star

The Canadian government has received an offer from a world-wide group of animal lovers which it can hardly afford to turn down. The International Fund for Animal Welfare has offered to compensate all the Canadians who engage in seal-hunting if the government makes such conduct illegal. The amount of money involved in wages for about 200 hunters, they say, is about $175,000.

The offer has two effects. It makes the Canadian government look weak and callous in its well-demonstrated lack of resolve to end the butchery of baby seals which takes place in the Gulf of St. Lawrence each spring. And it also makes the government look cheap.

If $175,000, paid out mostly to Newfoundland fishermen who don't make much money anyway, is all it takes to compensate those whose income is diminished by a seal-hunting ban, then the government should have done it long ago. Even at twice the price, the cost is worth it.

No one doubts the savagery of the hunt, the brutality of skinning the animals while they are alive and the dehumanizing effect the process has on the men who supplement meagre livelihoods by doing the killings. But if fisheries minister Jack Davis (who is soon to be running an environmental protection department) is going to be worth his salt not only as an administrator but as a symbol of environmental protection, then he must work to have this barbarism eliminated.

Canada is not the only nation in the world which has seal hunters working off the Canadian east coast. The Norwegians are particularly active and are much less sensitive to the problem than Canada. But if Canada can establish pollution protection zones unilaterally to preserve life in the water from the threat of oil spills, it can establish wildlife protection zones on the coast. It can also go through diplomatic channels to achieve worldwide recognition of the fact that the slaughter must stop. But Canada must set an example and act now.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 16, 1971 . . .

The Canadian government gave the CPR $25 million cash, 25 million acres of land and 700 miles of track worth many millions more 90 years ago today—in 1881—as an outright gift to finance the first trans-Canada railway. Sir John A. Macdonald had planned to subsidize the railway in 1872 but lost power when it was found the company president had paid his party $250,000. The line was finished in 1885, five years ahead of schedule, by financier Donald A. Smith (later Lord Strathcona) and engineer William C. Van Horne.

1959—Castro became premier of Cuba.

1949—Chaim Weizmann was elected Israel's first president.

1948—Police closed the weekly, Le Combat, in Quebec.

A Matter of Equality

French-Canadians in the Civil Service

Quebec Le Soleil—The storm which developed in the Commons over a confidential report suggesting the hiring of 250 young French-Canadian university graduates by the federal public service was raised with no valid objective.

What the report recommends, in fact, is no more than the application of the recommendations of the Laurendeau-Dunton-Gagnon report. There is no question at all of unjustified preferences for an ethnic group (French-Canadians) but rather of a desirable equilibrium of Canadians expressing themselves in our two official languages at the level of the federal public service.

Certainly it would be embarrassing to see the federal government apply itself to favoring a particular ethnic group on a racial basis. That is the bias for which the Conservatives and New Democrats criticized the Trudeau government. But in acting in that way, the Opposition sees the question from a biased angle. . . .

The royal commission report on bilingualism and biculturalism drew attention to a gap at the higher levels in noting that French-speaking officials in Ottawa made up only 22 per cent (against 26 per cent of the working population in 1961) while the proportion of English-speaking officials rose to 69 per cent.

It is necessary to ensure that French-speaking persons do not limit themselves to Quebec in a sort of ghetto or particular status, but really participate in the national life, playing the role the country may expect of them. To achieve this, it is important that special efforts be made to draw French-speaking university graduates to the national capital.

If there were any question of giving privileges to a particular ethnic group, the opposition would be right to rebel against this way of acting. All policies of a "racial" nature would be deplorable in this country.

But that is not the question. On the contrary, it is aimed at ending a privileged situation until now favoring the English-speaking group, often arising from the fault of the French-speaking people who huddled snugly in Quebec. Nothing could be worse . . . than to pit one cultural group against the other.

• • •

Ottawa Le Droit—Certain English-speaking people—and unfortunately they are numerous—will never understand anything about anything. Since Monday we have seen in Ottawa what restrained welcome they gave the "special" recruiting project for French-speaking university graduates in the public service. . . .

We did not approve of the autumn FLQ crisis, but we believed this misfortune would have opened the eyes of all English Canada. There was none of that, we can see. The narrow-minded and stubborn remain narrow-minded and stubborn. . . .

What French Canada wants is very simple. It wants nothing more than its just share. . . . If it is true that foreigners came to sow revolution among French-Canadians in Quebec it is no less true that these foreigners had no better allies than the English-speaking laggards who wield injustice like they breathe.

French-Canadians do not want unfair promotions, but is it unfair to give them 250 jobs in a public service where they held only 22 per cent of the positions at the time of the report on bilingualism?

Quinte Motion on Pollution Is Forwarded to Queen's Park

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Because it is a commitment of the Conservation and Pollution Control Committee of the Quinte District Labor Council to work for conservation and to promote an awareness of the dangers of pollution in all its forms, to the health, safety and well-being of the community, and to work for closer co-operation with other like-minded groups to mobilize public opinion to create effective pollution control legislation, I have forwarded the following draft resolution, dealing with the environment, to Jack Davis, Minister of Fisheries and Forestry, who is charged with the responsibility of the new federal Department of the Environment,

WHEREAS experts in the subject of pollution recognize that international laws are required to combat the dangers to all peoples of the world exposed to the dangers of pollution and

WHEREAS each nation of the world has to enact and advance the laws required within their own countries to correct the abuses of the environment created by industrialization, increased population and the new technology.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that we urge Canada to give strong support to the United Nations in their endeavor to establish strong world-wide agencies for the tackling of the pollution problem at the international level, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that we support the action of the Canadian government in establishing an environment department under the authority of a cabinet minister and we recommend that the government proceed with the setting up of a national environmental council. Such a council to be composed of representatives of farmers, labor, industry and other interested groups with instructions to study and report with recommendations for actions to curb pollution, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that we express our support to the number of bills presently before Parliament recommending action on the subject of pollution.

DOUGLAS R. SWORD,
Chairman, Conservation and Pollution Control Committee,
Quinte District Labor Council.

Flood Watch on Moira

Weather patterns in the next few weeks could be crucial to flood control in the Belleville area.

Focus of attention for emergency measures and conservation officials will be the banks of the Moira River.

With above-normal depths of snow still on the ground in the river's Quinte watershed, any sudden thaw or persistent rains could precipitate a runoff surge flooding into the waterway.

What's needed is a gradual tempering of cold weather, to create a tapering erosion of the drifts now blanketing the watershed.

The ideal situation, says Quinte Emergency Measures co-ordinator Angus Duffy, would be a daytime thaw matched by freezing overnight temperatures.

Compounding the problem is the fact that this winter's snow fallout has contained a high water content.

Usually, a mid-winter bout of mild weather tempers the situation, creating a brief that which helps reduce the bulk of the snow cover before spring arrives. This year, the thaw didn't show and snow remains at above-normal depths in the countryside.

However, the heavy fallout also has produced a beneficial effect, notes Mr. Duffy and J. H. McLeod, secretary-treasurer of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Early snowfalls insulated the ground against winter freezeup.

The land, not as solidly frozen as in past years, could absorb much of the runoff earlier than usual.

Most vital point being watched by Mr. Duffy in the event of a flood threat is the stretch of the Moira which bisects downtown Belleville.

Earlier this year, work crews broke down a concentration near the mouth of the river as slush and snow threatened a pileup. The operation ensured a free-flowing channel for the Moira.

However, Mr. Duffy says, some of the earlier slush could now be frozen to the river bed and, conceivably could create problems later in the event of a thaw.

ANAF News

Despite the unmentionable weather, the life of the club carried on fairly well. The big event was the opening of the big campaign in which all comrades can co-operate, when president John Browning sold the first gemstone keychain to his worship Mayor J. Russell Scott.

These beautifully crafted chains are certainly worth $2, and should sell like the proverbial hotcakes. If each member can sell one dozen to his friends and family, the unit will have done a good share in helping out both the young figure skaters bursary fund and the older disabled citizens employed gainfully by the March of Dimes.

The Valentine dance in the Tartan Lounge drew a capacity crowd on Friday to enjoy the music and entertainment supplied by the Marge Flett Trio. Several spot prizes were awarded during the evening and the lucky winners were: Ray and Vera Peets, Bob and Lil Drumm and Harry and Pat Morgan. The same trio will be playing again at the next Friday social so come early with your gang for a pleasurable evening and free admission.

Saturday noon when the club opened, the members received a pleasant surprise to find a late model 25 inch color TV set replacing the old faithful black and white. Just in time for the hockey playoffs.

There was a nice crowd but attraction of the new TV delayed the afternoon darts but two doubles were played with the following results. Winners: D. Parker and J. Semark; runners-up, I. Wagar and B Acker. No. 2 match winners, R. Thompson and H. Ford; runners-up, J. Fitzgerald and Garry Genereaux. Surprisingly, there was a good number of contestants on hand for the Mr. and Mrs. Darts, braving the desperate storms that were raging. It is hoped that the folks from Trenton made it home safely without too much trouble.

As usual, it was a happy and spirited contest and once again familiar names appear in the winners' column. Winners, Roby Fitzgibbon and Hank Boyle; runners-up, Mary Northey and Ron Culloden. Ladies' high three darts: Mary Young, 142. Men's high three darts, Paul Pelletier, 124. A nice lunch was served but everyone left earlier than usual for the arduous trail home.

The next Mr. and Mrs. contest will be held on Saturday, Feb. 27, commencing at 8 p.m.

The sports chairman is organzing a big four-man team dart tournament at which teams from all across Ontario will compete. It will be held on Saturday, March 13, starting at 10 a.m. It is expected to have approximately 200 or more visitors from out of town with plenty of prizes, both cash and otherwise. Just a month away.

The Duke of Edinburgh Unit will be hosts to fifty members from Unit 303, Montreal on April 17 for afternoon sports and a dance in the evening. Later in the year the Montreal unit will be hosts to this unit. It should be a fine way of getting acquainted with one another and further the comradeship between these two provinces.

The following comrades are in the Belleville General Hospital: J. Feeney, room 670 and R. Boyle, room 717. Resting at home are Cdes. A. R. Craig, E. Brockhurst and R. Woods. All have been visited.

Month Trial for Late Bus

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward County Board of Education will tender for one late bus to run from Ameliasburg to Belleville allowing Ameliasburg students attending classes in Hastings County schools to participate in extra curricular activities.

The decision to place a bus on a one-month trial run followed discussion of a resolution received by trustees from Ameliasburg Township Council. The resolution emphazed that many Ameliasburg councillors are receiving complaints because there is no late bus for Ameliasburg pupils attending classes in Belleville.

The resolution added that this is one benefit Ameliasburg students attending Hastings County schools apparently do not receive.

The Prince Edward County Board of Education was requested by Ameliasburg Township Council to investigate this problem for a workable solution.

Roads, Buses Concern Board

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County school trustees last night were told by director of education John McNeil that schools closed during this week's storm should reopen today. Mr. McNeil stated, however, that in speaking with the reeves of Hillier and Hallowell he has learned it is "a gloomy picture" in some areas of their townships.

North Marysburg representative to the board of education, Dorothea Carson, commented that throughout her township only single roads have been plowed. She remarked that a bus load of students could be stranded under such conditions. Trustee Hutton Martin commented that buses cannot be seen on the roads when a blizzard settles in the county. He observed that although Athol township is in the snow belt, the school there has remained open on two days when other schools closed.

Trustees discussed present road conditions in the county and it was generally agreed that Prince Edward County employees are working tirelessly and efficiently to open all roads.

Hutton Martin suggested that if schools must be closed because buses cannot run on one traffic lane, the term should be lengthened in June. Later in the meeting he remarked, "Maybe we should let the people involved know that we'll have to make up lost time."

Chairman of the Prince Edward County board of education George Flower observed, "I don't believe that this board should be a party to sending the children out on the road in buses when it's not safe." He later suggested that if one child were to be injured as the result of such action it would be a high price to pay.

Trustee Edward Rutter predicted that "today would tell the tale" as some students would be forced "to do a little hoofing" to reach the school buses. He suggested that trustees will receive "more calls than ever" but added that the students are probably eager to return to classes after being at home for several days. "The county engineer told me that it is a monumental task to open the roads," he finished.

Board members agreed that should receive a formal vote of appreciation for their recent efforts from each municipality. South Marysburg trustee James Plomer said that he felt various plow operators have worked "very hard, and done a very good job" under adverse conditions.

Loot Small, Damage Heavy

Although little was taken in pre-dawn break-ins, two service station owners are faced with an expense far beyond what is missing from their premises.

Entry to both stations, Mulroney's Sunoco at 432 Dundas Street East and Lucas' Spur Station, 221 Canifton Road, was gained through broken overhead garage doors.

"I'm getting pretty sick of this," said Gene Mulroney; "this is the second time in two weeks and the glass for those doors is pretty expensive." The station operator had replaced the broken glass following the first break-in.

Small change was taken from both garages, but Mr. Mulroney is missing a set of keys for a soft drink machine.

SHE'S NOT ROSIE THE RIVETER but Mary the mechanic, who works eight hours a day fixing cabs for Edmonton's largest taxi company. Mary Catling, 29, says she likes "messing around with engines," but adds she had a job finding employment and still runs into discrimination. (CP Photo)

Woman Taxi Cab Mechanic Still Runs Into Discrimination

EDMONTON (CP) — When Mary Catling talks about rockers and skirts she is probably talking about a car with problems.

Miss Catling, 29, you see, is a car mechanic who doesn't see anything unusual about her eight-hour-a-day job working on taxis for the city's largest cab company.

A slim figure in grease-streaked overalls, she has had her mechanic's licence for a year, but before that she worked on cars for fun.

"I like messing around with engines," she said. "Being a woman hasn't hindered me in my job except that it is more difficult to find a job."

Before working for the cab company she toured city garages looking for a job, but nobody would hire her.

"The boss would tell me that he didn't have anything against women but that the public was against women being mechanics."

And she still runs into discrimination. "Some cabbies don't like me working on their cars."

Miss Catling is one of a family of four girls. One sister attends university, another is a nurse and the third works in a bank. What do they think about her job?

"They don't say anything. My father doesn't mind too much, but my mother has her opinion."

Asked if she wouldn't prefer an office job, she replied:

"The people in offices don't have the same interests. We wouldn't have anything to talk about."

When asked what the shop foreman thought when he discovered his new mechanic was a woman she said he "didn't faint."

"I was surprised, but she's working out very well," said foreman Phil Hendel. "She does anything a man can do. I don't think the fellows mind too much having a woman around."

But a fellow mechanic said the men "really don't have freedom of speech with a woman around."

Miss Catling compares her position now with that of women doctors a few years ago: "I've never had any trouble. It's just a matter of people getting used to a woman. I'm a mechanic before I'm a woman."

European Winter Holidays Now Becoming More Popular

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

A holiday in the sun has traditionally been prescribed as the perfect antidote for those blues caused by shovelling snow from the driveway, swallowing medicine day after day to relieve those recurring colds and coughs and being generally bogged down by the sheer boredom and monotony of a long, bleak winter. But with the cost of living being what it is, you're more than likely to treat such a suggestion as a joke that's not even particularly funny. Doesn't everyone know that sunbathing in Miami and swinging in Acapulco discoteques is strictly for the so called "beautiful people"? But don't dismiss hope so easily. Facts prove that there is a ray of hope (and possibly a few rays of sunshine) for the winter-weary non jet setter to treat himself to a winter vacation if he studies the possibilities seriously enough.

Did you realize that the European holiday of your dreams could become a reality if you took advantage of the reduced air fares in winter? For example you could buy a return ticket to Glasgow for a little over $200 in winter whereas in summer the price would shoot up to at least $50 more. What's more, Europe really swings in winter — more fun, more social life, more theatre, concerts and cultural activities to please everyone.

More and more Bellevillians are discovering this, according to Mrs. Irene Roluf of Roluf's travel agency who says that she noticed a slight drop in traffic to the Carribean where hotel rates are high in winter. But since the introduction of the "package deal" (air fares, accommodation and sight-seeing costs being paid for in one round sum), Carribean holidays have regained their popularity as have trips to Florida and Mexico.

Mrs. Roluf says that the whole face of the travel industry has changed completely in recent years. At one time charter flights were tremendously popular but lately a number of charter companies have gone out of business due to skyrocketing costs of operation which made it impossible for them to compete with ordinary airlines. This has increased the volume of business for regular airlines and about the most economical move a traveller could make is to buy an excursion ticket which would cover the cost of his fare, accommodation and sight-seeing. Another good idea would be to arrange to travel in a big group. A group of 16 people travelling together to certain places can save the cost of one person's ticket which would be deducted from the fare of every member in the group.

Between 10 and 15 per cent of the population of Belleville go on winter vacations every year and the number is steadily on the increase. Most of these people are those who own their own business and retired folk since they have the freedom to take their vacation at any time of the year. Do many young couples travel outside Canada for their honeymoons? Not so much as they used to because the cost of furnishing a home has gone up so much that most newly married people prefer to spend more money on their homes and to take short vacations to nearby places for their wedding trips.

Another interesting trend in recent years is the increase of traffic to Australia and the number of people who take round-the-world trips. Australia appeals to the popular imagination right now and for a few hundred dollars more people can see the whole world.

Are more young people on the go now? Yes. The number of travellers under 21 has increased and many young people take advantage of the student standby fares available to anyone between 13 and 22 regardless of whether they are students or not. Student standby cards can be used all over Canada and the US including Hawaii.

Experienced travellers strongly recommend that the services of a well-established travel agency should be used in arranging trips because there is a maze of minute details to be attended to and using a little known travel agency can be a financial risk. The cost of air tickets is government ruled and does not vary at all with the agent who does the booking. A travel agent of repute is ready to answer all the client's questions and can provide much useful information on all aspects of the travel game from what clothes to take with you to how much to tip in foreign hotels. A good travel agent is also likely to give the client the best possible deal for his money.

CANNIFTON-CORBYVILLE SENIOR CITIZENS

Rev. Morrison showed slides of his trip to Niagara Falls and gave a short talk on how the Falls would look in 20 years time if pollution continues, during the meeting of the Senior Citizens of Cannifton and Corbyville held on Wednesday afternoon in St. Mark's recreation hall.

Earlier the president Mrs. Edna Andrews welcomed two new members. Several members reported that they enjoyed the trip to Toronto on Saturday to see the Ice Follies in Maple Leaf Gardens. Ralph Plumpton donated a pair of quilting frames in memory of his late wife Mrs. Mary Plumpton. Draws were conducted for a quilt and a cushion and the winners were Mrs. L. Williams and Willis Brenton respectively.

The men were in charge of the program which consisted of a reading and recitation by Roy Pound and Frank Howes and two songs by Mr. Crosby. Mrs. Olive Farnham provided piano music for the program. Happy birthday was sung in honor of all those who were celebrating birthdays.

During the business part of the meeting, financial reports were read by the secretary Mrs. Elsie Brenton. The minutes of the last meeting as well as cards and letters were read.

At the close of the meeting refreshments including a birthday cake were served by Roy Pound, Harry Sills and Willis Brenton. Games were enjoyed by all.

Kindergarten Not Babysitting Operation

TORONTO (CP) — Margaret Wettlauffer says a junior kindergarten is no babysitting operation.

"We're fighting the public on the idea that it is a babysitting thing. The downtown children need it desperately. The others need it too."

Miss Wettlauffer is director of kindergartens for the Toronto board of education. As such, she is in charge of the junior kindergartens attended by about 3,000 four-year-olds. Most of them are in poor downtown neighborhoods.

The Toronto program has been operating since 1942. Miss Wettlauffer says interest in such work has boomed in recent years as research has convinced experts the greatest part of a child's mental development takes place in his pre-school and early school years.

It is believed now a child does 50 per cent of his mental growing before he is four years old, about 30 per cent more from then until he is eight and the rest after that.

"I don't know that I will see it in my working lifetime, but my guess is they'll some day spend more money on early childhood training than on the teens."

Her department now gets $700 per child—about half the amount budgeted for high school students. There has been talk of cutting Ontario's education spending, and junior kindergartens have been among the items mentioned as dispensable.

When Miss Wettlauffer talks about how her classrooms work, she begins with the department's philosophy, a blend of theories based on research on the education of young children.

Broadly, it is that all children go through similar development patterns, but not at the same pace. There can be great differences in development among four-year-olds. The classrooms are organized to provide a range of activities that allow a trained teacher to encourage the children to make the most of their stages of development and move ahead when they are ready.

"Children playing with blocks are not just children playing with blocks. Teachers should be aware of where the children are going with the blocks.

"They can use them to learn how to work with another child.

"Then you put props in with the blocks. If you put in cars, children will build a garage or begin to sort the cars and put all the green ones in this garage. They are relating to the world—it is a new form of language for them—but it won't happen without someone doing something about it.

"You can add the abstract element by adding signs. They see signs, they see writing in relationship to what they're doing, so it makes sense to them.

"The downtown kids are sometimes not at the pictorial stage. They don't relate a picture of an orange to the real thing. They don't have the concepts. When I see a picture of a cow, I draw up a tremendous store of experience to interpret it."

Through all the activities, teachers ask children to explain what they are doing, to describe the things they are playing with.

"Language is one of the chief things we're after—the oral and listening skills plus reading and writing.

"The program must provide for the range of kids, and the teacher must be aware of pacing the child toward the best.

"In some cases the children are not physiologically ready to take the next step. Their nervous systems are not up to it.

"We have six-year-olds who need the basics and we try to force them at Grade 1 pace. No two kids are the same, but what do we do? What have we done? We expect all the kids to be the same."

Miss Wettlauffer says parents sometimes compound the problems by insisting their child do everything at the pace of the most advanced children.

Ann Landers

Rules to Follow In Writing Letter

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell "Skunked and the Yalees" there are rules to follow if he wants to get a phony letter printed. Any idiot knows that the people who write real letters to Ann Landers are very upset, so rationality and common sense are out. Here are some Helpful Hints:

ANN LANDERS

1. Write on company stationery. No one in his right mind would.
2. Don't bother with correct grammar or spelling. A person who is shook-up makes lots of mistakes.
3. Sign your own name and ask Ann to make up one. She'll use "Dubuque Ding-A-Line" or "Appleton Angel-Puss."
4. Select a subject close to the people, something grass-rootsy. Here's a sample letter:

"Dear Ann Landers: When the bus loads up at a major stop, us commuters all get on so's we can get to work. I don't object when them clods squeeze in next to me and insist on taking ¾ of the seat. I don't even mind when they insist on unfolding the paper and start reading Ann Landers even though there ain't hardly room to move your head sideways. But when lots of people have got off and more than half the bus is empty why don't them jerks move to an empty seat? Do they think maybe it's some kind of fun being squeezed in like sardines?"

O.K. Annie — how's that for a lesson? — CHICAGO READER.

DEAR CHIC: Good enough to print. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEA RAN NLANDERS: I was moved to tears by the letter from the 15-year-old who wrote to you the night her Dad died. I lost my wonderful father last year so I know exactly what that girl is going through. And now I would like to add a thought that might help her — and others.

Dear Friend: You father is gone. There is nothing you can do for him now. But you can do a great deal for your mother. She has lost her mate — her partner. She will be lonely and sad after the relatives and friends stop coming — as they must and will. You can make your mother's life easier by giving her an extra measure of love and consideration. She needs it now more than ever. This may be hard for you, as it was for me, because I was a "Daddy's girl. I'm sure my Mom knew I felt closer to him than to her. At times I miss my father so much I can hardly stand it but I know my heartache will heal faster than Mom's. I have a whole life ahead of me. She might not be able to rebuild her life without him. Her happiest days may be behind her. So do what you can to help. Your Dad is counting on you. — BUNNY.

DEAR BUNNY: Thank you for a touching letter. I'm sure many girls in the reading audience felt you were speaking directly to them.

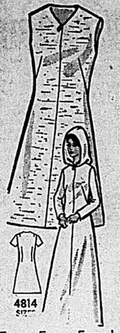
* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My 19-year-old brother is on the verge of getting married to a tramp who has slept around all over town. He always dated lovely girls from nice families, girls he was proud to be seen with, and now he ends up with this.

My husband and I have tried to talk some sense into his head but it's useless. He says he knows all about the girl's black past but he would rather have a wife who has gotten the running around out of her system. He is sure she will be faithful.

Do promiscuous girls settle down after marriage, Ann? Or do virginal girls make the most faithful wives? — ASKING IN ASPEN.

DEAR ASKING: There's no way of knowing. Some promiscuous girls do settle down after marriage and some virginal wives become promiscuous. But this I can tell you — a 19-year-old boy is too young to be marrying anybody The statistics on divorce among teen-agers is frightening. And the survival rate of adult marriages these days is nothing to brag about.



Easy, Easy, Easy!

Successful Living

What Is Physical Incompatability?

By DORIS CLARK

Is there such a thing as true physical incompatibility? Physiologists say no. Such inability is more likely emotional than physical. In one case it could be rooted in a fear of pregnancy; in another in deep - seated guilt feelings of some kind.

If there is an honest desire to work things out, sexual incompatibility can be resolved. With humans, sex techniques have to be acquired. A satisfactory physical relationship has to be built, just as do other parts of marriage.

This calls for time, effort, discipline. If two people can't manage it themselves, there should be no demurring about consulting a physician or marriage counsellor.

Above all else, it has to be worked on together. If togetherness is worth anything at all, it takes first place when it comes to sex.

Dear Doris: What sort of decorations should I have for a St. Patrick's celebration? My girl friend and I are 16 and this will be our first party.

We want to do everything ourselves, and my mother is going to let us. Any suggestions you might have with regard to games, refreshments, etc., would be welcome. Of course, we will be dancing quite a bit of the time, but I think games are a good idea to break the ice, don't you? — Canadian Shamrock.

Dear Shamrock: I am sending you my 10-cent leaflet, "A St. Patrick's Party You Can Swing Yourself". Do what it says and I'm promising you a good time. (This leaflet is available to all readers for 10 cents and a six-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, sent to me in care of this newspaper).

• • •

Dear Doris: I read your answer to Anxious Mother in which you advise her: "Tell your joy-riding son that while he lives under your roof, he continues school, sticks to a curfew and keeps you informed of his whereabouts."

I would like to know what you do if you tell your son all this and he still doesn't listen? — Another Anxious Mother.

Dear Mother: If he ignores you now, this isn't the first time. Bonds of trust and cooperation need forging from those very early years.

I still say stick by your guns. The world will discipline him — and less kindly — if you don't. Even an older teen should obey reasonable house rules.

It may seem drastic for you to give it to him straight; to say that he either sticks to the family guidelines or leaves. But if he does decide to leave, the experience of trying to make it on his own may bring him to seeing your good sense.

DORIS CLARK

He may even surprise you by admiring and honoring your injunctions, once he is quite sure you won't break down.

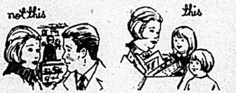
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "I wish we could afford to buy the children more toys and games. They've outgrown most of the things they have and when they have to stay inside all day, they get pretty bored."

Mother: "I've saved these boxes and magazines and here are some pieces of wallpaper and carpeting. You can make a doll house and furnish it with things cut from the magazines. I'll help you paste on the wallpaper."

Toys aren't the only things children will enjoy. Provide the raw materials for constructing a doll house and little girls will be as enthralled about building it as they will be about playing with it.

Foreign-born Directors Have Trouble with American Themes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can foreign-born film-makers interpret the American scene?

Perhaps not, judging from a number of multi-million-dollar errors. Several European directors of wide reputation have had a go at American subjects, only to return to their native lands in defeat.

The most notable exception was English director John Schlesinger, who won last year's Oscar for his brilliant study of the underside of New York's society in Midnight Cowboy.

Others have not been so fortunate.

The brilliant Michelangelo Antonioni of Italy managed to capture flavor of mod England in Blow-up. Encouraged by that film's success, MGM gave him carte blanche to turn his focus on America. The result was Zabriski Point, a bomb that cost the studio $7 million.

Carol Reed, fresh from his award-winning Triumph with Oliver!, tried his hand with a tale about a Western Indian's problems of adjusting to modern society. The film was Flap, which failed to be embraced by critics or audiences.

Jan Kadar, one of the star directors of the new Czech cinema, came to New York after the Russian invasion of his country and tried his hand at Jewish fantasy with The Angel Levine, starring Harry Belafonte and Zero Mostel. It didn't work.

Frenchman Claude Lelouche looked at America through the eyes of a pair of French tourists, Jean Paul Belmondo and Annie Giradot, in Love is a Funny Thing. The result was pleasantly amusing, but nothing on a par with Lelouche's A Man and a Woman.

After triumphing with Tom Jones, Tony Richardson tried to lampoon Hollywood in The Loved One. The picture seemed to be Richardson's rataliation for his earlier mistreatment by Hollywood studios. The Loved One died.

Not all foreign directors have failed here. Englishman Peter Yates did well by the San Francisco scene in Bullitt. And Roman Polanski of Poland and France transferred his bizarre touch to New York with great success in Rosemary's Baby.

The poor batting averages of foreign directors in the United States in recent times is puzzling. Throughout most of Hollywood's history, the American film has been enriched by the contributions of directors from abroad.

Among them: Erich von Stroheim, Maurice Stiller, Joseph von Sternberg, Fritz Lang, Alfred Hitchcock, Rouben Mamoulian, William Wyler, Billy Wilder, William Dieterle, Michael Curtiz, Fred Zinnemann, Jean Renoir.

Why do the latter-day foreigners fail?

The answer may lie in the changing nature of America itself. U.S. society has become so complex, so buffeted by whirlwind forces that it is difficult for native sociologists to grasp, much less visiting film directors.

Film has become a personal medium, and thus directors seem on safer ground when dealing with their own countries and people.

Costa-Gavras, famed for Z, turned down an offer to direct The Godfather.

"I do not know America well enough to make that story," said the Russian-Greek. "It is peculiarly an American—and Mafiosa—problem."

Goldie Does Well in Her Own Special

NEW YORK (AP) — Pure Goldie, an NBC special Monday night, presented Goldie Hawn as an all-around variety performer-singer, dancer, comedienne ad actress. Goldie, an Oscar winner for a film role, gained television recognition as a bubble-headed blonde who giggles a lot on Laugh-In.

Miss Hawn is a fine dancer and singer, and while the hour consisted of bits and pieces, she came off well. She also had some solid help from Ruth Buzzi and Bob Dishy, Jim Henson's Muppets and some interesting special material.

Goldie and her two human co-stars had fun with a musical version of War and Peace, a satire on Russian novelists and on the current fad of turning serious books into musicals. Another sketch took off on the increasing size of airplanes.

There was an amusing sketch with the puppets in which Goldie kissed Kermit the frog and turned into a Muppet herself.

Scattered through the hour were some colorful dance numbers. The whole set-up was a nice showcase for the young star. Her old Laugh-In character surfaced just enough to help the folks at home get oriented.

Earlier, a Bob Hope special seemed to have been slung together in a hurry. The program did reunite Hope with Bing Crosby. The old "Road" comrades insulted each other in familiar style for a few minutes, with Bing giving every appearance of breaking up at the jokes on the cue cards. Then, a longish sketch about an inept burglar—Hope—waking up a noisy little girl, Jo Anne Worley, never got anywhere. Petula Clark sang prettily, Teresa Graves wriggled her way through a number and there was a lot of talk about golf.

Hope specials tend to run a bumpy course, but this one seemed more ragged than usual.

Anne, Gene Tops

TORONTO (CP) — Anne Murray, the former school teacher who had a North American hit record in Snowbird, has been named top 1970 female vocalist in Canada by RPM, a trade magazine for Canada's recording industry.

Miss Murray, of Springhill, N.S., sold more than one million copies of the record, written by Gene MacLellan of Alexandria, P.E.I.

Other winners named were: MacLellan, top composer; Gordon Lightfoot of Toronto, top male vocalist; The Guess Who of Winnipeg, top vocal instrumental; Bruce Cockburn of Ottawa, top folk singer; Stompin Tom Connors, Tignish, P.E.I., top male country singer; Myrna Lorrie, Thunder Bay, top female country singer, and the Mercy Brothers of Hanover, Ont., best country instrumental vocal.

Race Results Questioned

PICTON (Staff) — Criticisms voiced by contestants entered in Prince Edward's winter carnival cross-country snowmobile race may be answered by an explanation from race officials.

At yesterday's meeting of the chamber of commerce, past president Gordon Lloyd reported that he has received "about half a dozen" complaints, one of them from a snowmobile dealer! He said that these entrants claimed that winners' tickets had not been punched at all race check points. "This gives us a black eye," observed Mr. Lloyd, who asked if the protests could be valid.

He was quickly assured by race committee chairman Archie Kingma that all race winners had complied with regulations.

It was noted by Jay Hepburn, a contestant in the 40-mile race, that the check points "loomed out of the fog" during the snowstorm which swept the county on the day of the race. As a safeguard the numbers of all entrants were recorded as their machines passed the check points. It was verified where and when each contestant passed. Mr. Hepburn remarked that it was unfortunate that the general public did not know of the double-check system used by race officials.

Mr. Kingma reminded chamber members that weather conditions prevented air patrol of the course during the race but said he was satisfied with the accuracy of final results.

Past president Ronald Scott, who presided at the finish line, also expressed his satisfaction with the outcome of the race. It was noted that officials spent up to two hours in at least one case to determine the proper placing of a contestant.

Mr. Lloyd told chamber members that he felt a letter of explanation should be forwarded to those questioning race results "or it could interfere with races at a future time."

Winter Budget May Need Help

With snow removal costs mounting every snowfall, the city public works department will in all probability be asking for an increased winter maintenance budget when tax setting time for 1971 arrives at city hall.

"I have no idea what snow removal costs have been so far this year," stated city engineer Wilbur Purcell this morning, "cost figures take time to catch up with us."

But, in view of the heavy snowfall so far this winter, he said his department would very likely be asking for an increase in its winter maintenance budget at tax time.

The city engineer said that last year's snow removal budget was thrown out of whack by December snowstorms which resulted in estimates being overspent by more than $24,000. Last year's winter maintenance budget was $95,500.

But the over-expenditure in winter control doesn't mean that the city public works department over-all budget for last year will be overspent.

Savings and under-expenditures in other facets of works department operations kept over-all expenditures within the budget.

This year's winter maintenance budget has not been set by city council but that doesn't mean the works department is holding back on snow removal costs.

Actually, the city engineer said, neither effort or expense is spared in getting the clean-up job done as quickly as possible.

But there are limits to what can be done and for this reason sidewalk plowing following the weekend storm has been delayed until more important work was looked after.

"There was just no way that you could keep up with that," the engineer said of the deeply drifted sidewalks.

Sidewalk plow operators were pressed into service for truck operation in an effort to get the roadways cleared. But even with roadway clearing, stalled cars which in some instances had been left in the middle of the street, delayed the plowing.

Under such circumstances there was no attempt to clear many side streets until the stalled cars were moved.

This morning extra work gangs were sent out to clear intersections and bridges and with the weekend drifting finally ended, it was expected the sidewalk plows would get into full operation.

Belleville, Trenton Show Improvement

Belleville and Trenton were among the few Ontario centres which enjoyed more housing construction last year than in 1969.

Housing statistics released by Ontario Mortgage and Housing show that across Ontario last year there were 66,497 urban housing starts last year, or four per cent lower than in 1969.

But in Belleville, both housing starts and completions were up from the year previous.

In Belleville there were 426 completions as compared with 285 the year before, while the number of housing starts totalled 547 as compared with 351.

In Trenton there were 202 housing starts last year compared with but 66 in 1969, while the number of completions is given as 138 as compared with 103 the year before.

In the major population centres, the report said that only in metropolitan Ottawa were housing starts and completions higher last year than in 1969.

In Belleville, the bulk of the housing construction was in the form of multiple dwelling units and apartment complexes.

Here new low rental town housing, and senior citizens apartment construction, along with the six-plexes, 12-plexes and 24 apartment units made up the major portion of the over-all housing construction.

Two senior citizens apartment complexes with a total of approximately 125 units on Turnbull and West Bridge Streets, and low rental town housing on North Park Street are in the last stages of construction and are scheduled for early occupancy.

Madoc Area News

"Humor Can Be Found in Many Places" was the topic which won Miss Marie Donaldson of Madoc public school first place in the Central Hastings public speaking contest held last Thursday afternoon, February 4. The competition took place in the gymnasium at the Madoc public school and included the top orators from the public schools in Marmora, Tweed, Madoc and Madoc Township. Miss Debra Wiggins also of Madoc, won second prize and Miss Sandra Foley of Madoc township came in third. The girls were presented with awards by L .F. Tate of the Hastings County Board of Education.

A former couple of Madoc Township, Mr. and Mrs. William J. McCoy who now reside at Crossfield, Alberta, celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary recently. Both Mr. and Mrs. McCoy are both in their 89th year, and were born and married in Madoc Township. Before going west they owned the Art Vermilyea farm of Thurlow Township. Mr. McCoy is a brother of Robert McCoy of Madoc and Mrs. McCoy is a sister of Mr. Ben Miller, also of Madoc.

Constructed of cement blocks, a new burial vault has been erected in Madoc Township at Hazzard's Corners, just four miles north of Madoc. It will be quite an asset to residents as it is the only one in the area. The vault is non-denominational and is for use for everyone at a minimum charge.

Two Jailed For Assault

PICTON (Staff) — A Prince Edward County court jury Saturday freed two men on charges of robbery with violence but convicted them on an included offence of assault.

Wayne Perry Hynde, 30, Hillier, and Donald Walter Bradshaw, 28, Sudbury, were each sentenced to eight months imprisonment in a reformatory.

The men, found not guilty of robbery but guilty of assault by a 12-man jury, were charged with the beating of William Ellis, 19, Consecon, on a Hillier township road on March 29, 1970. The pair also was accused of the theft of Ellis' watch and ring.

Mr. Ellis testified that he was beaten twice by Hynde and Bradshaw after they picked him up while he was hitchhiking on the outskirts of Belleville. Testimony of witnesses revealed that the first beating occurred following a heated conversation between Ellis and the defendants concerning the armed forces and the greatcoat worn by the hitchhiker.

Ellis was left at the side of the road and the pair drove away. They returned when Hynde discovered that Ellis apparently had damaged the console of the Bradshaw car during the ride from Belleville. Mr. Ellis was pursued into a swampy ditch by Hynde and brought back to the car.

Ellis reportedly was beaten a second time before the pair left.

Wayne Hynde turned himself over to the Picton police department the following day. Donald Bradshaw was apprehended later that night by detectives in Sudbury.

William Ellis was in hospital for two days for treatment of and abrasions. Presiding at the trial of Hynde and Bradshaw was county judge Wilfred S. Lane.
